

The Oxford Dictionary of Modern Quotations

PREFACE Preface

This is a completely new dictionary, containing about 5,000 quotations.

What is a “quotation”? It is a saying or piece of writing that strikes people as so true or memorable that they quote it (or allude to it) in speech or writing. Often they will quote it directly, introducing it with a phrase like “As -- -- says” but equally often they will assume that the reader or listener already knows the quotation, and they will simply allude to it without mentioning its source (as in the headline “A ros’ is a ros’ is a ros’,” referring obliquely to a line by Gertrude Stein).

This dictionary has been compiled from extensive evidence of the quotations that are actually used in this way. The dictionary includes the commonest quotations which were found in a collection of more than 200,000 citations assembled by combing books, magazines, and newspapers. For example, our collections contained more than thirty examples each for Edward Heath’s “unacceptable face of capitalism” and Marshal McLuhan’s “The medium is the message,” so both these quotations had to be included.

As a result, this book is not—like many quotations dictionaries—a subjective anthology of the editor’s favourite quotations, but an objective selection of the quotations which are most widely known and used. Popularity and familiarity are the main criteria for inclusion, although no reader is likely to be familiar with all the quotations in this dictionary.

The book can be used for reference or for browsing: to trace the source of a particular quotation or to find an appropriate saying for a special need.

The quotations are drawn from novels, plays, poems, essays, speeches, films radio and television broadcasts, songs, advertisements, and even book titles. It is difficult to draw the line between quotations and similar sayings like proverbs, catch-phrases, and idioms. For example, some quotations (like “The opera ain’t over till the fat lady sings”) become proverbial. These are usually included if they can be traced to a particular originator. However, we have generally omitted phrases like “agonizing reappraisal” which are covered adequately in the Oxford English Dictionary. Catch-phrases are included if there is evidence that they are widely remembered or used.

We have taken care to verify all the quotations in original or authoritative sources—something which few other quotations dictionaries have tried to do. We have corrected many errors found in other dictionaries, and we have traced the true origins of such phrases as “There ain’t no such thing as a free lunch” and “Shaken and not stirred.”

The quotations are arranged in alphabetical order of authors, with anonymous quotations in the middle of “A.” Under each author, the quotations are arranged in alphabetical order of their first words. Foreign quotations are, wherever possible, given in the original language as well as in translation.

Authors are cited under the names by which they are best known: for example, Graham Greene (not Henry Graham Greene); F. Scott Fitzgerald (not Francis Scott Key Fitzgerald); George Orwell (not Eric Blair); W. C. Fields (not William Claude Dukenfield). Authors’ dates of birth and death are given when ascertainable. The actual writers of the words are credited for quotations from songs, film-scripts, etc.

The references after each quotation are designed to be as helpful as possible, enabling the reader to trace quotations in their original sources if desired.

The index (1) has been carefully prepared—with ingenious computer assistance—to help the reader to trace quotations from their most important keywords. Each reference includes not only the page and the number of the quotation on the page but also the first few letters of the author’s name. The index includes references to book-titles which have become well known as quotations in their own right.

One difficulty in a dictionary of modern quotations is to decide what the word “modern” means. In this dictionary it means “twentieth-century.” Quotations are eligible if they originated from someone who was still alive after 1900. Where an author (like George Bernard Shaw, who died in 1950) said memorable things before and after 1900, these are all included.

This dictionary could not have been compiled without the work of many people, most notably Paula Clifford, Angela Partington, Fiona Mullan, Penelope Newsome, Julia Cresswell, Michael McKinley, Charles McCreery, Heidi Abbey, Jean Harder, Elizabeth Knowles, George Chowdharay-Best, Tracey Ward, and Ernest Trehern. I am also very grateful to the OUP Dictionary Department’s team of checkers, who verified the quotations at libraries in Oxford, London, Washington, New York, and elsewhere. James Howes deserves credit for his work in computerizing the index.

The Editor is responsible for any errors, which he will be grateful to have drawn to his attention. As the quotation from Simeon Strunsky reminds us, "Famous remarks are very seldom quoted correctly," but we have endeavoured to make this book more accurate, authoritative, and helpful than any other dictionary of modern quotations.

TONY AUGARDE

(1) Discussions of the index features in this preface and in the "How to Use this Dictionary" section of this book refer to the hard-copy edition printed in 1991. No index has been included in this soft-copy edition. See "Notices" in topic NOTICES for additional information about this soft-copy edition.

HOWTO How to Use this Dictionary

HOWTO.1 General Principles

The arrangement is alphabetical by the names of authors: usually the names by which each person is best known. So look under Maya Angelou, not Maya Johnson; Princess Anne, not HRH The Princess Royal; Lord Beaverbrook, not William Maxwell Aitken; Irving Berlin, not Israel Balin; Greta Garbo, not Greta Lovisa Gustafsson, Anonymous quotations are all together, starting in "Anonymous" in topic 1.43 They are arranged in alphabetical order of their first significant word.

Under each author, quotations are arranged by the alphabetical order of the titles of the works from which they come, even if those works were not written by the person who is being quoted. Poems are usually cited from the first book in which they appeared.

Quotations by foreign authors are, where possible, given in the original language and also in an English translation.

A reference is given after each quotation to its original source or to an authoritative record of its use. The reference usually consists of either (a) a book-title with its date of publication and a reference to where the quotation occurs in the book; or (b) the title of a newspaper or magazine with its date of publication. The reference is preceded by "In" if the quotation comes from a secondary source: for example if a writer is quoted by another author in a newspaper article, or if a book refers to a saying but does not indicate where or when it was made.

HOWTO.2 Examples

Here are some typical entries, with notes to clarify the meaning of each part.

Charlie Chaplin (Sir Charles Spencer Chaplin)

1889-1977

All I need to make a comedy is a park, a policeman and a pretty girl
My Autobiography (1964) ch. 10

Charlie Chaplin is the name by which this person is best known but Sir Charles Spencer Chaplin is the name which would appear in reference books such as Who's Who.

Charlie Chaplin was born in 1889 and died in 1977. The quotation comes from the tenth chapter of Chaplin's autobiography, which was published in 1964.

Martin Luther King

1929-1968

Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere
Letter from Birmingham Jail, Alabama, 16 Apr. 1963, in Atlantic Monthly Aug. 1963, p. 78

Martin Luther King wrote these words in a letter that he sent from Birmingham Jail on 16 April 1963. The letter was published later that year on page 78 of the August issue of the Atlanta Monthly.

Dorothy Parker

1893-1967

One more drink and I'd have been under the host
In Howard Teichmann George S. Kaufman (1972) p. 68

Dorothy Parker must have said this before she died in 1967 but the earliest reliable source we can find is a 1972 book by Howard Teichmann

"In" signals the fact that the quotation is cited from a secondary source.

HOWTO.3 Index

If you remember part of a quotation and want to know the rest of it, or who said it, you can trace it by means of the index (1).

The index lists the most significant words from each quotation. These keywords are listed alphabetically in the index, each with a section of the text to show the context of every keyword. These sections are listed in strict alphabetical order under each keyword. Foreign keywords are included in their alphabetical place.

The references show the first few letters of the author's name, followed by the page and item numbers (e.g. 163:15 refers to the fifteenth quotation on page 163).

As an example, suppose that you want to verify a quotation which you remember contains the line "to purify the dialect of the tribe." If you decide that tribe is a significant word and refer to it in the index, you will find this entry:

tribe: To purify the dialect of the t. ELIOT 74:19

This will lead you to the poem by T. S. Eliot which is the nineteenth quotation on page 74.

Bud Abbott 1895-1974 Lou Costello 1906-1959

Abbott: Now, on the St Louis team we have Who's on first, What's on second, I Don't Know is on third.

Costello: That's what I want to find out.

Naughty Nineties (1945 film), in R. J. Anobile Who's On First? (1973) p. 224

I know the colour rose, and it is lovely,
But not when it ripens in a tumour;
And healing greens, leaves and grass, so springlike,
In limbs that fester are not springlike
A Small Desperation (1968) "Pathology of Colours"

So in the simple blessing of a rainbow,
In the bevelled edge of a sunlit mirror,
I have seen visible, Death's artifact
Like a soldier's ribbon on a tunic tacked
A Small Desperation (1968) "Pathology of Colours"

That Greek one then is my hero, who watched the bath water rise above his navel and rushed out naked, "I found it, I found it" into the street in all his shining, and forgot that others would only stare at his genitals
Walking under Water (1952) "Letter to Alex Comfort"

1.3 Goodman Ace

1899-1982

Jane and I got mixed up with a television show—or as we call it back east here: TV—a clever contraction derived from the words Terrible Vaudeville
However, it is our latest medium—we call it a medium because nothing's well done. It was discovered, I suppose you've heard, by a man named Fulton Berle, and it has already revolutionized social grace by cutting down parlour conversation to two sentences: "What's on television?" and "Good night." Letter to Groucho Marx, in The Groucho Letters (1967) p. 114

1.4 Dean Acheson

1893-1971

The first requirement of a statesman is that he be dull. This is not always easy to achieve
In Observer 21 June 1970

I will undoubtedly have to seek what is happily known as gainful employment, which I am glad to say does not describe holding public office
In Time 22 Dec. 1952

Great Britain has lost an empire and has not yet found a role
Speech at the Military Academy, West Point, 5 Dec. 1962, in Vital Speeches 1 Jan. 1963, p. 163

Don't panic
Hitch Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy (1979) preface

"Life," said Marvin, "don't talk to me about Life." Hitch Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy (1979) ch. 11

And of course I've got this terrible pain in all the diodes down my left hand side
Hitch Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy (1979) ch. 13

The Answer to the Great Question Of....Life, the Universe and Everything....Is....Forty-two
Hitch Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy (1979) ch. 27

"The first ten million years were the worst," said Marvin, "and the second ten million years, they were the worst too. The third ten million I didn't enjoy at all. After that I went into a bit of a decline." Restaurant at the End of the Universe (1980) ch. 18

Title of song (1909)

1881-1960

When the political columnists say "Every thinking man" they mean themselves, and when candidates appeal to "Every intelligent voter" they mean everybody who is going to vote for them
Nods and Becks (1944) p. 3

Years ago we discovered the exact point, the dead centre of middle age. It occurs when you are too young to take up golf and too old to rush up to the net
Nods and Becks (1944) p. 53

The trouble with this country is that there are too many politicians who believe, with a conviction based on experience, that you can fool all of the people all of the time

Nods and Becks (1944) p. 74

Elections are won by men and women chiefly because most people vote against somebody rather than for somebody

Nods and Becks (1944) p. 206

1.9 Henry Brooks Adams

1838-1918

Politics, as a practice, whatever its professions, has always been the systematic organization of hatreds
Education of Henry Adams (1907) ch. 1

A friend in power is a friend lost
Education of Henry Adams (1907) ch. 7

Chaos often breeds life, when order breeds habit
Education of Henry Adams (1907) ch. 16

One friend in a lifetime is much; two are many; three are hardly possible
Friendship needs a certain parallelism of life, a community of thought, a rivalry of aim
Education of Henry Adams (1907) ch. 20

What one knows is, in youth, of little moment; they know enough who know how to learn
Education of Henry Adams (1907) ch. 21

Practical politics consists in ignoring facts
Education of Henry Adams (1907) ch. 22

Some day science may have the existence of mankind in its power, and the human race commit suicide, by blowing up the world

In Newsweek 2 July 1956

A walk on the wild side

Title of novel (1956)

I got a glimpse into the uses of a certain kind of criticism this past summer at a writers' conference into how the avocation of assessing the failures of better men can be turned into a comfortable livelihood, providing you back it up with a Ph.D. I saw how it was possible to gain a chair of literature on no qualification other than persistence in nipping the heels of Hemingway, Faulkner, and Steinbeck. I know, of course, that there are true critics, one or two. For the rest all I can say is, Deal around me

I will quote certain other words. I do it with great reluctance, because I am speaking of those who are old friends and associates of mine, but they are words which, I think, are applicable to the present situation. This is what Cromwell said to the Long Parliament when he thought it was no longer fit to conduct the affairs of the nation: "You have sat too long here for any good you have been doing. Depart, I say, and let us have done with you. In the name of God, go." Hansard 7 May 1940, col. 1150. Cf. Oxford Dictionary of Quotations (1979) 169:26

Speak for England

Said to Arthur Greenwood in House of Commons, 2 Sept. 1939, in L. Amery My Political Life (1955) vol. 3, p. 324

For twenty years he [H. H. Asquith] has held a season-ticket on the line of least resistance and has gone wherever the train of events has carried him, lucidly justifying his position at whatever point he has happened to find himself

Quarterly Review July 1914, p. 276

1.34 Kingsley Amis

1922-

The delusion that there are thousands of young people about who are capable of benefiting from university training, but have somehow failed to find their way there, is...a necessary component of the expansionist case....More will mean worse
Encounter July 1960

The point about white Burgundies is that I hate them myself. I take whatever my wine supplier will let me have at a good price (which I would never dream of doing with any other drinkable). I enjoyed seeing those glasses of Chablis or Pouilly Fuiss', so closely resembling a blend of cold chalk soup and alum cordial with an additive or two to bring it to the colour of children's pee, being peered and sniffed at, rolled round the shrinking tongue and forced down somehow by parties of young technology dons from Cambridge or junior television producers and their girls

The Green Man (1969) ch. 1

Dixon...tried to flail his features into some sort of response to humour
Mentally, however, he was making a different face and promising himself he'd make it actually when next alone. He'd draw his lower lip in under his top teeth and by degrees retract his chin as far as possible, all this while dilating his eyes and nostrils. By these means he would, he was confident, cause a deep dangerous flush to suffuse his face

Lucky Jim (1953) ch. 1

Alun's life was coming to consist more and more exclusively of being told at dictation speed what he knew
The Old Devils (1986) ch. 7

Outside every fat man there was an even fatter man trying to close in

In Alistair Horne Price of Glory (1962) ch. 2

We shall never sheath the sword which we have not lightly drawn until Belgium recovers in full measure all and more than all that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed
Speech at the Guildhall, 9 Nov. 1914, in The Times 10 Nov. 1914

It is fitting that we should have buried the Unknown Prime Minister [Bonar Law] by the side of the Unknown Soldier

Once Around the Sun (1951) 7 Jan.

In every age "the good old days" were a myth. No one ever thought they were good at the time. For every age has consisted of crises that seemed intolerable to the people who lived through them
Once Around the Sun (1951) 8 Feb.

There is a good deal of solemn cant about the common interests of capital and labour. As matters stand, their only common interest is that of cutting each other's throat

Hansard 24 Oct. 1950, col. 2705

The voice we heard was that of Mr Churchill but the mind was that of Lord Beaverbrook
Speech on radio, 5 June 1945, in Francis Williams Prime Minister Remembers (1961) ch. 6

I remember he [Winston Churchill] complained once in Opposition that a matter had been brought up several times in Cabinet and I had to say, "I must remind the Right Honourable Gentleman that a monologue is not a decision." In Francis Williams Prime Minister Remembers (1961) ch. 7

You have no right whatever to speak on behalf of the Government. Foreign Affairs are in the capable hands of Ernest Bevin. I can assure you there is widespread resentment in the Party at your activities and a period of silence on your part would be welcome

1907-1973

Some thirty inches from my nose
The frontier of my Person goes,
And all the untilled air between
Is private pagus or demesne
Stranger, unless with bedroom eyes
I beckon you to fraternize,
Beware of rudely crossing it:
I have no gun, but I can spit
About the House (1966) "Prologue: the Birth of Architecture"

Sob, heavy world,
Sob as you spin
Mantled in mist, remote from the happy
Age of Anxiety (1947) p. 104

I'll love you, dear, I'll love you
Till China and Africa meet
And the river jumps over the mountain
And the salmon sing in the street.

I'll love you till the ocean
Is folded and hung up to dry
And the seven stars go squawking
Like geese about the sky
Another Time (1940) "As I Walked Out One Evening"

O plunge your hands in water,
Plunge them in up to the wrist;
Stare, stare in the basin
And wonder what you've missed.

The glacier knocks in the cupboard,
The desert sighs in the bed,
And the crack in the tea-cup opens
A lane to the land of the dead
Another Time (1940) "As I Walked Out One Evening"

Perfection, of a kind, was what he was after,
And the poetry he invented was easy to understand;
He knew human folly like the back of his hand,
And was greatly interested in armies and fleets;
When he laughed, respectable senators burst with laughter,
And when he cried the little children died in the streets
Another Time (1940) "Epitaph on a Tyrant"

To us he is no more a person
Now but a whole climate of opinion

Another Time (1940) "In Memory of Sigmund Freud"

He disappeared in the dead of winter:
The brooks were frozen, the airports almost deserted,
And snow disfigured the public statues;
The mercury sank in the mouth of the dying day
What instruments we have agree
The day of his death was a dark cold day
Another Time (1940) "In Memory of W. B. Yeats"

You were silly like us: your gift survived it all;
The parish of rich women, physical decay,
Yourself; mad Ireland hurt you into poetry
Now Ireland has her madness and her weather still,
For poetry makes nothing happen: it survives
In the valley of its saying where executives
Would never want to tamper; it flows south
From ranches of isolation and the busy griefs,
Raw towns that we believe and die in; it survives,
A way of happening, a mouth
Another Time (1940) "In Memory of W. B. Yeats"

Earth, receive an honoured guest;
William Yeats is laid to rest:
Let the Irish vessel lie
Emptied of its poetry
Another Time (1940) "In Memory of W. B. Yeats"

In the nightmare of the dark
All the dogs of Europe bark,
And the living nations wait,
Each sequestered in its hate;

Intellectual disgrace
Stares from every human face,
And the seas of pity lie
Locked and frozen in each eye

The Old Masters: how well they understood
Its human position; how it takes place
While someone else is eating or opening a window or just walking dully along Another Time (1940) "Mus'ee des Beaux Arts"

They never forgot
That even the dreadful martyrdom must run its course
Anyhow in a corner, some untidy spot
Where the dogs go on with their doggy life and the torturer's horse
Scratches its innocent behind on a tree
Another Time (1940) "Mus'ee des Beaux Arts"

Lay your sleeping head, my love,
Human on my faithless arm;
Time and fevers burn away
Individual beauty from
Thoughtful children, and the grave
Proves the child ephemeral:
But in my arms till break of day
Let the living creature lie,
Mortal, guilty, but to me

The entirely beautiful
Another Time (1940) no. 18, p. 43

I and the public know
What all schoolchildren learn,
Those to whom evil is done
Do evil in return
Another Time (1940) "September 1, 1939"

All I have is a voice
To undo the folded lie,
The romantic lie in the brain
Of the sensual man-in-the-street
And the lie of Authority
Whose buildings grope the sky:
There is no such thing as the State
And no one exists alone;
Hunger allows no choice
To the citizen or the police;
We must love one another or die
Another Time (1940) "September 1, 1939"

Our researchers into Public Opinion are content
That he held the proper opinions for the time of year;
When there was peace, he was for peace; when there was war, he went
Another Time (1940) "The Unknown Citizen"

Was he free? Was he happy? The question is absurd:
Had anything been wrong, we should certainly have heard
Another Time (1940) "The Unknown Citizen"

All sin tends to be addictive, and the terminal point of addiction is what is called damnation
A Certain World (1970) "Hell"

Of course, Behaviourism "works." So does torture. Give me a no-nonsense, down-to-earth behaviourist, a few

A Certain World (1970) "Behaviourism"

A poet's hope: to be,
like some valley cheese,
local, but prized elsewhere
Collected Poems (1976) p. 639

It is a sad fact about our culture that a poet can earn much more money writing or talking about his art than he can by practising it
Dyer's Hand (1963) foreword

Between the ages of twenty and forty we are engaged in the process of discovering who we are, which involves learning the difference between accidental limitations which it is our duty to outgrow and the necessary limitations of our nature beyond which we cannot trespass with impunity
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Reading"

Some books are undeservedly forgotten; none are undeservedly remembered
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Reading"

One cannot review a bad book without showing off
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Reading"

No poet or novelist wishes he were the only one who ever lived, but most of them wish they were the only one alive, and quite a number fondly believe their wish has been granted
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Writing"

It takes little talent to see clearly what lies under one's nose, a good deal of it to know in which direction to point that organ
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Writing"

The true men of action in our time, those who transform the world, are not the politicians and statesmen, but the scientists. Unfortunately poetry cannot celebrate them, because their deeds are concerned with things, not persons, and are, therefore, speechless. When I find myself in the company of scientists, I feel like a shabby curate who has strayed by mistake into a drawing room full of dukes
Dyer's Hand (1963) "The Poet and the City"

The image of myself which I try to create in my own mind in order that may love myself is very different from the image which I try to create in the minds of others in order that they may love me
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Hic et Ille"

Almost all of our relationships begin and most of them continue as forms of mutual exploitation, a mental or physical barter, to be terminated when one or both parties run out of goods
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Hic et Ille"

Man is a history-making creature who can neither repeat his past nor leave it behind
Dyer's Hand (1963) "D. H. Lawrence"

Among those whom I like or admire, I can find no common denominator, but among those whom I love, I can: all of them make me laugh
Dyer's Hand (1963) "Notes on the Comic"

At Dirty Dick's and Sloppy Joe's
We drank our liquor straight,

In Dag Hammarskjöld Markings (1964) foreword

I see it often since you've been away:
The island, the veranda, and the fruit;
The tiny steamer breaking from the bay;
The literary mornings with its hoot;
Our ugly comic servant; and then you,
Lovely and willing every afternoon

The word "Intellectual" suggests straight away
A man who's untrue to his wife
New Year Letter (1961) note to line 1277

This is the Night Mail crossing the Border,
Bringing the cheque and the postal order,
Letters for the rich, letters for the poor,
The shop at the corner, the girl next door
Pulling up Beattock, a steady climb:
The gradient's against her, but she's on time
Past cotton-grass and moorland border,
Shovelling white steam over her shoulder
Night Mail (1936) in Collected Shorter Poems (1966)

Letters of thanks, letters from banks,
Letters of joy from girl and boy,

In a garden shady this holy lady
With reverent cadence and subtle psalm,
Like a black swan as death came on
Poured forth her song in perfect calm:
And by ocean's margin this innocent virgin
Constructed an organ to enlarge her prayer,
And notes tremendous from her great engine
Thundered out on the Roman air.

Moved to delight by the melody,
White as an orchid she rode quite naked

In J. M. Keynes Economic Consequences of the Peace (1919) ch. 5

A platitude is simply a truth repeated until people get tired of hearing it
Hansard 29 May 1924, col. 727

I think it is well also for the man in the street to realize that there is no power on earth that can protect him from being bombed. Whatever people may tell him, the bomber will always get through. The only defence is in offence, which means that you have to kill more women and children more quickly than the enemy if you want to save yourselves
Hansard 10 Nov. 1932, col. 632

Let us never forget this; since the day of the air, the old frontiers are gone. When you think of the defence of England you no longer think of the chalk cliffs of Dover; you think of the Rhine. That is where our frontier lies
Hansard 30 July 1934, col. 2339

I shall be but a short time tonight. I have seldom spoken with greater regret, for my lips are not yet unsealed. Were these troubles over I would make case, and I guarantee that not a man would go into the lobby against us
Hansard 10 Dec. 1935, col. 856

I put before the whole House my own views with an appalling frankness
...Supposing I had gone to the country and said that Germany was rearming and that we must rearm, does anybody think that this pacific democracy would have rallied to that cry at that moment? I cannot think of anything that would have made the loss of the election from my point of view more certain

"Safety first" does not mean a smug self-satisfaction with everything as it is. It is a warning to all persons who are going to cross a road in dangerous circumstances
The Times 21 May 1929

Had the employers of past generations all of them dealt fairly with their men there would have been no unions
Speech in Birmingham, 14 Jan. 1931, in The Times 15 Jan. 1931

2.8 Arthur James Balfour (Earl of Balfour)

1848-1930

His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country
Letter to Lord Rothschild 2 Nov. 1917, in K. Young A. J. Balfour (1963) p 478

Frank Harris...said..."The fact is, Mr Balfour, all the faults of the age come from Christianity and journalism." To which Arthur replied..."Christianity, of course...but why journalism?" Margot Asquith Autobiography (1920) vol. 1, ch. 10

What does this journey seem like to those who aren't British—as they head towards the land of embarrassment and breakfast? Flaubert's Parrot (1984) ch. 7

The writer must be universal in sympathy and an outcast by nature: only then can he see clearly
Flaubert's Parrot (1984) ch. 10

Do not imagine that Art is something which is designed to give gentle uplift and self-confidence. Art is not a brassière. At least, not in the English sense. But do not forget that brassière is the French for life-jacket
Flaubert's Parrot (1984) ch. 10

Books say: she did this because. Life says: she did this. Books are where things are explained to you; life is where things aren't. I'm not surprised some people prefer books. Books make sense of life. The only problem is that the lives they make sense of are other people's lives, never your own

I'm not young enough to know everything
The Admirable Crichton (performed 1902, pubd. 1914) act 1

His lordship may compel us to be equal upstairs, but there will never be equality in the servants' hall
The Admirable Crichton (performed 1902, pubd. 1914) act 1

It's my deserts; I'm a second eleven sort of chap
The Admirable Crichton (performed 1902, pubd. 1914) act 3

Times have changed since a certain author was executed for murdering his publisher. They say that when the author was on the scaffold he said goodbye to the minister and to the reporters, and then he saw some publishers sitting in the front row below, and to them he did not say goodbye. He said instead, "I'll see you later."
Speech at Aldine Club, New York, 5 Nov. 1896, in Critic 14 Nov. 1896

The life of every man is a diary in which he means to write one story, and writes another; and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as it is with what he vowed to make it
The Little Minister (1891) vol. 1, ch. 1

It's grand, and you canna expect to be baith grand and comfortable
The Little Minister (1891) vol. 1, ch. 10

Rosalind in The Twelve-Pound Look and Other Plays (1921) p. 113

Charm...it's a sort of bloom on a woman. If you have it, you don't need to have anything else; and if you don't have it, it doesn't much matter what else you have. Some women, the few, have charm for all; and most have charm for one. But some have charm for none
What Every Woman Knows (1918) act 1

A young Scotsman of your ability let loose upon the world with $300, what could he not do? It's almost appalling to think of; especially if he went among the English
What Every Woman Knows (1918) act 1

My lady, there are few more impressive sights in the world than a Scotsman on the make
What Every Woman Knows (1918) act 2

You've forgotten the grandest moral attribute of a Scotsman, Maggie, that he'll do nothing which might damage his career
What Every Woman Knows (1918) act 2

The tragedy of a man who has found himself out
What Every Woman Knows (1918) act 4

Every man who is high up loves to think that he has done it all himself; and the wife smiles, and lets it go at that.
It's our only joke. Every woman knows that

Esprit (1952) vol. 20, pt. 10, p. 412 "Le monde o— l'on catche" (The world of wrestling)

Je crois que l'automobile est aujourd'hui l'quivalent assez exact des grandes cath'drales gothiques: je veux dire une grande cr'ation d"poque, conçue passionn'ment par des artistes inconnus, consomm'e dans son image, sinon dans son usage, par un peuple entier qui s'approprie en elle un objet parfaitement magique.

I think that cars today are almost the exact equivalent of the great Gothic cathedrals: I mean the supreme creation of an era, conceived with passion by unknown artists, and consumed in image if not in usage by a whole population which appropriates them as a purely magical object

Speech at Dorchester Hotel, 25 May 1964, in A. J. P. Taylor Beaverbrook (1972) ch. 25

The Flying Scotsman is no less splendid a sight when it travels north to Edinburgh than when it travels south to London. Mr Baldwin denouncing sanctions was as dignified as Mr Baldwin imposing them. At times it seemed that there were two Mr Baldwins on the stage, a prudent Mr Baldwin, who scented the danger in foolish projects, and a reckless Mr Baldwin, who plunged into them head down, eyes shut. But there was, in fact, only one Mr Baldwin, a well-meaning man of indifferent judgement, who, whether he did right or wrong, was always sustained by a belief that he was acting for the best

Musicians did not like the piece [Strauss's Elektra] at all. One eminent British composer on leaving the theatre was asked what he thought of it
"Words fail me," he replied, "and I'm going home at once to play the chord of C major twenty times over to satisfy myself that it still exists." Mingled Chime (1944) ch. 18

The plain fact is that music per se means nothing; it is sheer sound, and the interpreter can do no more with it than his own capacities, mental and spiritual, will allow, and the same applies to the listener
Mingled Chime (1944) ch. 33

One account...given me by a very good artist, is that what he tries to express in a picture is "a passionate apprehension of form." Art (1914) pt. 1, ch. 3

It would follow that "significant form" was form behind which we catch a sense of ultimate reality
Art (1914) pt. 1, ch. 3

Art and Religion are, then, two roads by which men escape from circumstance to ecstasy. Between aesthetic and religious rapture there is a family alliance. Art and Religion are means to similar states of mind
Art (1914) pt. 2, ch. 1

I will try to account for the degree of my aesthetic emotion. That, I conceive, is the function of the critic
Art (1914) pt. 3 ch. 3

Only reason can convince us of those three fundamental truths without a recognition of which there can be no effective liberty: that what we believe is not necessarily true; that what we like is not necessarily good; and that all questions are open

The Devil, having nothing else to do,
Went off to tempt My Lady Poltagrue
My Lady, tempted by a private whim,
To his extreme annoyance, tempted him
Sonnets and Verse (1923) "On Lady Poltagrue"

Of this bad world the loveliest and the best
Has smiled and said "Good Night," and gone to rest
Sonnets and Verse (1923) "On a Dead Hostess"

The accursed power which stands on Privilege
(And goes with Women, and Champagne, and Bridge)
Broke—and Democracy resumed her reign:
(Which goes with Bridge, and Women and Champagne)
Sonnets and Verse (1923) "On a Great Election"

Lady, when your lovely head
Droops to sink among the Dead,
And the quiet places keep
You that so divinely sleep;

Then the dead shall blessŠd be
With a new solemnity,
For such Beauty, so descending,
Pledges them that Death is ending,
Sleep your fill—but when you wake
Dawn shall over Lethe break

When I am living in the Midlands
That are sodden and unkind,
I light my lamp in the evening:
My work is left behind;
And the great hills of the South Country
Come back into my mind
Verses (1910) "The South Country"

If I ever become a rich man,
Or if ever I grow to be old,
I will build a house with deep thatch
To shelter me from the cold,
And there shall the Sussex songs be sung
And the story of Sussex told.

I will hold my house in the high wood
Within a walk of the sea,
And the men that were boys when I was a boy
Shall sit and drink with me
Verses (1910) "The South Country"

Of Courtesy, it is much less
Than Courage of Heart or Holiness,
Yet in my Walks it seems to me
That the Grace of God is in Courtesy
Verses (1910) "Courtesy"

Balliol made me, Balliol fed me,
Whatever I had she gave me again:
And the best of Balliol loved and led me
God be with you, Balliol men
Verses (1910) "To the Balliol Men Still in Africa"

From quiet homes and first beginning,
Out to the undiscovered ends,
There's nothing worth the wear of winning,
But laughter and the love of friends
Verses (1910) "Dedicatory Ode"

Remote and ineffectual Don
That dared attack my Chesterton
Verses (1910) "Lines to a Don"

Don different from those regal Dons!
With hearts of gold and lungs of bronze,
Who shout and bang and roar and bawl
The Absolute across the hall,
Or sail in amply billowing gown
Enormous through the Sacred Town,
Bearing from College to their homes
Deep cargoes of gigantic tomes;
Dons admirable! Dons of Might!
Uprising on my inward sight
Compact of ancient tales, and port
And sleep—and learning of a sort
Verses (1910) “Lines to a Don”

A smell of burning fills the startled Air--
The Electrician is no longer there! Verses (1910) “Newdigate Poem”

I said to Heart, “How goes it?” Heart replied:
”Right as a Ribstone Pippin!” But it lied
Verses (1910) “The False Heart”

The Moon on the one hand, the Dawn on the other;
The Moon is my sister, the Dawn is my brother
The Moon on my Left and the Dawn on my right
My Brother, good morning: my Sister good night

Humboldt's Gift (1975) p. 35

The only real distinction at this dangerous moment in human history and cosmic development has nothing to do with medals and ribbons. Not to fall asleep is distinguished. Everything else is mere popcorn
Humboldt's Gift (1975) p. 283

I feel that art has something to do with the achievement of stillness in the midst of chaos. A stillness which characterizes prayer, too, and the eye of the storm. I think that art has something to do with an arrest of attention in the midst of distraction

Life, you know, is rather like opening a tin of sardines. We are all of us looking for the key. And, I wonder, how many of you here tonight have wasted years of your lives looking behind the kitchen dressers of this life for that key. I know I have. Others think they've found the key, don't they? They roll back the lid of the sardine tin of life, they reveal the sardines, the riches of life, therein, and they get them out, they enjoy them. But, you know, there's always a little bit in the corner you can't get out. I wonder—I wonder, is there a little bit in the corner of your life? I know there is in mine

The theatre of farce is the theatre of the human body but of that body in a state as far from the natural as the voice of Chaliapin is from my voice or yours. It is a theatre in which, though the marionettes are men, the men are supermarionettes. It is the theatre of the surrealist body
Life of Drama (1964) ch. 7

Ours is the age of substitutes: instead of language, we have jargon; instead of principles, slogans; and, instead of genuine ideas, Bright Ideas

1874-1948

Utopias are realizable, they are more realizable than what has been presented as "realist politics" and what has simply been the calculated rationalism of armchair politicians. Life is moving towards utopias. But perhaps a new age is opening up before us, in which the intelligentsia and the cultured classes will dream of ways to avoid utopias and to return to a non-utopian society, to a less "perfect" a freer society

In Michael Foot Aneurin Bevan (1962) vol. 1, ch. 8

I know that the right kind of leader for the Labour Party is a desiccated calculating machine who must not in any way permit himself to be swayed by indignation. If he sees suffering, privation or injustice he must not allow it to move him, for that would be evidence of the lack of proper education or of absence of self-control. He must speak in calm and objective accents and talk about a dying child in the same way as he would about the pieces inside

Speech at Labour Party Conference in Blackpool, 8 June 1949, in Report of 48th Annual Conference (1949) p. 172

No amount of cajolery, and no attempts at ethical or social seduction, can eradicate from my heart a deep burning hatred for the Tory Party that inflicted those bitter experiences on me. So far as I am concerned they are lower than vermin. They condemned millions of first-class people to semi-starvation

If you open that Pandora's Box [the Council of Europe], you never know what Trojan 'orses will jump out
Sir Roderick Barclay Ernest Bevin and Foreign Office (1975) ch. 3

A Ministerial colleague with whom Ernie [Bevin] was almost always on bad terms was Nye Bevan. There was a well-known occasion when the latter had incurred Ernie's displeasure, and one of those present, seeking to excuse Nye, observed that he was sometimes his own worst enemy. "Not while I'm alive 'e aint!" retorted Ernie
In Sir Roderick Barclay Ernest Bevin and Foreign Office (1975) ch. 4

There never has been a war yet which, if the facts had been put calmly before the ordinary folk, could not have been prevented....The common man, I think, is the great protection against war

2.90 Alfred Blunt (Bishop of Bradford)

1879-1957

The benefit of the King's Coronation depends, under God, upon two elements: First, on the faith, prayer, and self-dedication of the King himself, and on that it would be improper for me to say anything except to commend him, and ask you to commend him, to God's grace, which he will so abundantly need...if he is to do his duty faithfully. We hope that he is aware of his need. Some of us wish that he gave more positive signs of his awareness
Speech to Bradford Diocesan Conference, 1 Dec. 1936, in The Times 2 Dec 1936

1840-1922

To the Grafton Gallery to look at...the Post-Impressionist pictures sent over from Paris....The drawing is on the level of that of an untaught child of seven or eight years old, the sense of colour that of a tea-tray painter, the method that of a schoolboy who wipes his fingers on a slate after spitting on them....These are not works of art at all, unless throwing a handful of mud against a wall may be called one. They are the works of idleness and impotent stupidity, a pornographic show
My Diaries (1920) 15 Nov. 1910

I like the hunting of the hare
Better than that of the fox
New Pilgrimage (1889) "The Old Squire"

When a dog bites a man, that is not news, because it happens so often. But if a man bites a dog, that is news
In F. M. O'Brien Story of the Sun (1918) ch. 10 (the quotation is often attributed to Charles A. Dana)

1885-1962

One of the favourite maxims of my father was the distinction between the two sorts of truths, profound truths recognized by the fact that the opposite is also a profound truth, in contrast to trivialities where opposites are obviously absurd
In S. Rozental Niels Bohr (1967) p. 328

2.100 Andrew Bonar Law

1858-1923

If, therefore, war should ever come between these two countries [Great Britain and Germany], which Heaven forbid! it will not, I think, be due to irresistible natural laws; it will be due to the want of human wisdom
Hansard 27 Nov. 1911, col. 167

If I am a great man, then all great men are frauds
In Lord Beaverbrook Politicians and the War (1932) vol. 2, ch. 4

2.101 Carrie Jacobs Bond

1862-1946

When you come to the end of a perfect day,
And you sit alone with your thought,
While the chimes ring out with a carol gay
For the joy that the day has brought,
Do you think what the end of a perfect day
Can mean to a tired heart,
When the sun goes down with a flaming ray,
And the dear friends have to part?

Well, this is the end of a perfect day,
Near the end of a journey, too;
But it leaves a thought that is big and strong,
With a wish that is kind and true
For mem'ry has painted this perfect day
With colours that never fade,
And we find, at the end of a perfect day,
The soul of a friend we've made
A Perfect Day (1910 song)

2.102 Sir David Bone

1874-1959

It's "Damn you, Jack—I'm all right!" with you chaps
Brassbounder (1910) ch. 3

2.103 Dietrich Bonhoeffer

1906-1945

Es ist der Vorzug und das Wesen der Starken, dass sie die grossen Entscheidungsfragen stellen und zu ihnen klar Stellung nehmen können. Die Schwachen müssen sich immer zwischen Alternativen entscheiden, die nicht die ihren sind.

It is the nature, and the advantage, of strong people that they can bring out the crucial questions and form a clear opinion about them. The weak always have to decide between alternatives that are not their own
Widerstand und Ergebung (Resistance and Submission, 1951) "Ein paar Gedanken über Verschiedenes"

Jesus nur "für andere da ist." ...Gott in Menschengestalt! ...nicht die griechische Gott-Menschgestalt des "Menschen an sich," sondern "der Mensch für andere," darum der Gekreuzigte.

Jesus is there only for others....God in human form! not...in the Greek divine-human form of "man in himself," but "the man for others," and therefore the crucified

1860-1933

During his incarceration at the Scrubbs [1922-3], Bottomley was largely employed in the making of mail-bags. It was while he was so engaged one afternoon that a prison visitor...saw him busily stitching away. "Ah, Bottomley," he remarked brightly, "sewing?" "No," grunted the old man without looking up, "reaping." In S.T. Felstead

2.113 Elizabeth Bowen

1899-1973

Experience isn't interesting till it begins to repeat itself—in fact, till it does that, it hardly is experience
Death of the Heart (1938) pt. 1, ch. 1

In fact, it is about five o'clock in an evening that the first hour of spring strikes—autumn arrives in the early morning, but spring at the close of a winter day
Death of the Heart (1938) pt. 2, ch. 1

Some people are moulded by their admirations, others by their hostilities
Death of the Heart (1938) pt. 2, ch. 2

The heart may think it knows better: the senses know that absence blots people out. We have really no absent friends
Death of the Heart (1938) pt. 2, ch. 2

1898-1971

There is also that story, perhaps apocryphal, of Maurice [Bowra]'s decision to get married. When he announced that he had at last chosen a girl, a friend remonstrated: "But you can't marry anyone as plain as that." Maurice answered: "My dear fellow, buggers can't be choosers." Francis King in Hugh Lloyd-Jones Maurice Bowra: a Celebration (1974) p. 150

The propriety of some persons seems to consist in having improper thoughts about their neighbours
Aphorisms (1930) no. 9

True penitence condemns to silence. What a man is ready to recall he would be willing to repeat
Aphorisms (1930) no. 10

The secret of happiness is to admire without desiring. And that is not happiness
Aphorisms (1930) no. 33

Metaphysics is the finding of bad reasons for what we believe upon instinct; but to find these reasons is no less an instinct
Appearance and Reality (1893) preface

Of Optimism I have said that "The world is the best of all possible worlds, and everything in it is a necessary evil."
Appearance and Reality (1893) preface

That the glory of this world...is appearance leaves the world more glorious, if we feel it is a show of some fuller splendour; but the sensuous curtain is a deception...if it hides some colourless movement of atoms, some...unearthly ballet of bloodless categories
Principles of Logic (1883) bk. 3, pt. 2, ch. 4

Doch das Messer sieht man nicht.

Oh, the shark has pretty teeth, dear,

And he shows them pearly white

Just a jack-knife has Macheath, dear

And he keeps it out of sight

Dreigroschenoper (Threepenny Opera, 1928) prologue

Erst kommt das Fressen, dann kommt die Moral.

Food comes first, then morals

Dreigroschenoper (Threepenny Opera, 1928) act 2, sc. 3

Was ist ein Einbruch in eine Bank gegen die Gründung einer Bank?

What is robbing a bank compared with founding a bank? Dreigroschenoper (Threepenny Opera, 1928) act 3, sc. 3

Andrea: Unglücklich das Land, das keine Helden hat!..
Galilei: Nein. Unglücklich das Land, das Helden nötig hat.

Andrea: Unhappy the land that has no heroes!..
Galileo: No. Unhappy the land that needs heroes
Leben des Galilei (Life of Galileo, 1939) sc. 13

Man merkt's, hier ist zu lang kein Krieg gewesen. Wo soll da Moral herkommen, frag ich? Frieden, das ist nur Schlamperei, erst der Krieg schafft Ordnung.

One observes, they have gone too long without a war here. What is the moral, I ask? Peace is nothing but slovenliness, only war creates order
Mutter Courage (Mother Courage, 1939) sc. 1

Weil ich ihm nicht trau, wir sind befreundet.

Because I don't trust him, we are friends
Mutter Courage (Mother Courage, 1939) sc. 3

Die schönsten Pläne sind schon zuschanden geworden durch die Kleinlichkeit von denen, wo sie ausführen sollten, denn die Kaiser selber können ja nix machen.

The finest plans are always ruined by the littleness of those who ought to carry them out, for the Emperor himself can actually do nothing
Mutter Courage (Mother Courage, 1939) sc. 6

Der Krieg findet immer einen Ausweg.

War always finds a way
Mutter Courage (Mother Courage, 1939) sc. 6

Sagen Sie mir nicht, dass Friede ausgebrochen ist, wo ich eben neue Vorräte eingekauft hab.

Don't tell me peace has broken out, when I've just bought some new supplies

1908-1974

We have to understand that the world can only be grasped by action, not by contemplation. The hand is more important than the eye....The hand is the cutting edge of the mind
Ascent of Man (1973) ch. 3

That is the essence of science: ask an impertinent question, and you are on the way to a pertinent answer
Ascent of Man (1973) ch. 4

The wish to hurt, the momentary intoxication with pain, is the loophole through which the pervert climbs into the minds of ordinary men
Face of Violence (1954) ch. 5

The world is made of people who never quite get into the first team and who just miss the prizes at the flower show
Face of Violence (1954) ch. 6

Man masters nature not by force but by understanding. This is why science has succeeded where magic failed: because it has looked for no spell to cast on nature
Universities Quarterly (1956) vol. 10, no. 3, p. 252

1887-1915

Breathless, we flung us on the windy hill,
Laughed in the sun, and kissed the lovely grass
Cambridge Review 8 Dec. 1910, "Sonnet"

Then, the cool kindliness of sheets, that soon
Smooth away trouble; and the rough male kiss
Of blankets; grainy wood; live hair that is Shining and free; blue-massing clouds; the keen
Unpassioned beauty of a great machine;
The benison of hot water; furs to touch;
The good smell of old clothes
New Numbers no. 3 (1914) "The Great Lover"

Now, God be thanked Who has matched us with His hour,
And caught our youth, and wakened us from sleeping,
With hand made sure, clear eye, and sharpened power,
To turn, as swimmers into cleanness leaping,

Glad from a world grown old and cold and weary,
Leave the sick hearts that honour could not move,
And half-men, and their dirty songs and dreary,
And all the little emptiness of love!
Oh! we, who have known shame, we have found release there,
Where there's no ill, no grief, but sleep has mending,
Naught broken save this body, lost but breath;
Nothing to shake the laughing heart's long peace there
But only agony, and that has ending;
And the worst friend and enemy is but Death
New Numbers no. 4 (1914) "Peace"

War knows no power. Safe shall be my going,
Secretly armed against all death's endeavour;
Safe though all safety's lost; safe where men fall;
And if these poor limbs die, safest of all
New Numbers no. 4 (1914) "Safety"

Blow out, you bugles, over the rich Dead!
There's none of these so lonely and poor of old,
But, dying, has made us rarer gifts than gold
These laid the world away; poured out the red
Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be
Of work and joy, and that unhop'd serene,
That men call age; and those that would have been,
Their sons, they gave, their immortality
New Numbers no. 4 (1914) "The Dead"

Honour has come back, as a king, to earth,
And paid his subjects with a royal wage;
And Nobleness walks in our ways again;
And we have come into our heritage
New Numbers no. 4 (1914) "The Dead"

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is for ever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's, breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home
And think, this heart, all evil shed away,
A pulse in the eternal mind, no less
Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given;
Her sights and sounds; dreams happy as her day;
And laughter, learnt of friends; and gentleness,
In hearts at peace, under an English heaven
New Numbers no. 4 (1914) "The Soldier"

Fish say, they have their Stream and Pond;
But is there anything Beyond? 1914 and Other Poems (1915) "Heaven"

But somewhere, beyond Space and Time
Is wetter water, slimier slime! 1914 and Other Poems (1915) "Heaven"

Oh! never fly conceals a hook,
Fish say, in the Eternal Brook,
But more than mundane weeds are there,
And mud, celestially fair;
Fat caterpillars drift around,
And Paradisal grubs are found;
Unfading moths, immortal flies,
And the worm that never dies
And in that Heaven of all their wish,
There shall be no more land, say fish
1914 and Other Poems (1915) "Heaven"

But there's wisdom in women, of more than they have known,
And thoughts go blowing through them, are wiser than their own
1914 and Other Poems (1915) "There's Wisdom in Women"

Just now the lilac is in bloom,
All before my little room
1914 and Other Poems (1915) "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester"

Here tulips bloom as they are told;
Unkempt about those hedges blows
An English unofficial rose;
And there the unregulated sun
Slopes down to rest when day is done,
And wakes a vague unpunctual star,
A slippered Hesper; and there are
Meads towards Haslingfield and Coton
Where das Betreten's not verboten
...would I were
In Grantchester, in Grantchester! 1914 and Other Poems (1915) "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester"

And in that garden, black and white,
Creep whispers through the grass all night;
And spectral dance, before the dawn,
A hundred Vicars down the lawn;
Curates, long dust, will come and go
On lissom, clerical, printless toe;
And oft between the boughs is seen
The sly shade of a Rural Dean
1914 and Other Poems (1915) "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester"

God! I will pack, and take a train,
And get me to England once again!
For England's the one land, I know,
Where men with Splendid Hearts may go;
And Cambridgeshire, of all England,
The shire for Men who Understand;
And of that district I prefer
The lovely hamlet Grantchester
For Cambridge people rarely smile,
Being urban, squat, and packed with guile
1914 and Other Poems (1915) "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester"

They love the Good; they worship Truth;
They laugh uproariously in youth;
(And when they get to feeling old,
They up and shoot themselves, I'm told)
1914 and Other Poems (1915) "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester"

Oh, is the water sweet and cool,
Gentle and brown, above the pool?
And laughs the immortal river still
Under the mill, under the mill?
Say, is there Beauty yet to find?
And Certainty? and Quiet kind?
Deep meadows yet, for to forget
The lies, and truths, and pain?...oh! yet
Stands the Church clock at ten to three?
And is there honey still for tea? 1914 and Other Poems (1915) "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester"

The most perfect humour and irony is generally quite unconscious

Life and Habit (1877) ch. 2

It has, I believe, been often remarked that a hen is only an egg's way of making another egg

Life and Habit (1877) ch. 8

Life is one long process of getting tired

Notebooks (1912) ch. 1

Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises

Notebooks (1912) ch. 1

All progress is based upon a universal innate desire on the part of every organism to live beyond its income

Notebooks (1912) ch. 1

The healthy stomach is nothing if not conservative. Few radicals have good digestions

Notebooks (1912) ch. 6

Always eat grapes downwards—that is, always eat the best grape first; in this way there will be none better left on the bunch, and each grape will seem good down to the last. If you eat the other way, you will not have a good grape in the lot. Besides you will be tempting providence to kill you before you come to the best

Notebooks (1912) ch. 7

How thankful we ought to be that Wordsworth was only a poet and not a musician. Fancy a symphony by Wordsworth! Fancy having to sit it out! And fancy what it would have been if he had written fugues! Notebooks (1912) ch. 8

The history of art is the history of revivals

Notebooks (1912) ch. 8

Genius...has been defined as a supreme capacity for taking trouble....It might be more fitly described as a supreme capacity for getting its possessors into trouble of all kinds and keeping them therein so long as the genius remains

Notebooks (1912) ch. 11

An apology for the Devil: It must be remembered that we have only heard one side of the case. God has written all the books

Notebooks (1912) ch. 14

The great pleasure of a dog is that you may make a fool of yourself with him and not only will he not scold you, but he will make a fool of himself too

Notebooks (1912) ch. 14

A definition is the enclosing a wilderness of idea within a wall of words

Notebooks (1912) ch. 14

To live is like to love—all reason is against it, and all healthy instinct for it
Notebooks (1912) ch. 14

The public buys its opinions as it buys its meat, or takes in its milk, on the principle that it is cheaper to do this than to keep a cow. So it is, but the milk is more likely to be watered
Notebooks (1912) ch. 17

I do not mind lying, but I hate inaccuracy
Notebooks (1912) ch. 19

Stowed away in a Montreal lumber room
The Discobolus standeth and turneth his face to the wall;
Dusty, cobweb-covered, maimed, and set at naught,
Beauty crieth in an attic, and no man regardeth
O God! O Montreal! Spectator 18 May 1878, "Psalm of Montreal"

I do not like books. I believe I have the smallest library of any literary man in London, and I have no wish to increase it. I keep my books at the British Museum and at Mudie's, and it makes me very angry if any one gives me one for my private library
Universal Review Dec. 1890, "Ramblings in Cheapside"

Adversity, if a man is set down to it by degrees, is more supportable with equanimity by most people than any great prosperity arrived at in a single lifetime
Way of All Flesh (1903) ch. 5

They would have been equally horrified at hearing the Christian religion doubted, and at seeing it practised
Way of All Flesh (1903) ch. 15

All animals, except man, know that the principal business of life is to enjoy it—and they do enjoy it as much as man and other circumstances will allow
Way of All Flesh (1903) ch. 19

The advantage of doing one's praising for oneself is that one can lay it on so thick and exactly in the right places
Way of All Flesh (1903) ch. 34

Young as he was, his instinct told him that the best liar is he who makes the smallest amount of lying go the longest way
Way of All Flesh (1903) ch. 39

Beyond a haricot vein in one of my legs, I'm as young as ever I was. Old indeed! There's many a good tune played on an old fiddle! Way of All Flesh (1903) ch. 61

Speech to Bible class at Plains, Georgia, March 1976, in Boston Sunday Herald Advertiser 11 Apr. 1976

I'm Jimmy Carter, and I'm going to be your next president
Said to the son of a campaign supporter, Nov. 1975, in I'll Never Lie to You (1976) ch. 1

I've looked on a lot of women with lust. I've committed adultery in my heart many times. This is something that God recognizes I will do—and I have done it—and God forgives me for it 1915-

I danced in the morning
When the world was begun
And I danced in the moon
And the stars and the sun
And I came down from heaven
And I danced on the earth--
At Bethlehem I had my birth
Dance then wherever you may be,
I am the Lord of the Dance, said he,
And I'll lead you all, wherever you may be
And I'll lead you all in the dance, said he Nine Carols or Ballads (1967) "Lord of the Dance"

It's God they ought to crucify
Instead of you and me,
I said to the carpenter

In politics, there is no use looking beyond the next fortnight
In letter from A. J. Balfour to 3rd Marquess of Salisbury, 24 Mar. 1886, in A. J. Balfour Chapters of Autobiography (1930) ch. 16

It is said that the City is the centre of the world's finance, that the fate of our manufactures therefore is a secondary consideration; that, provided that the City of London remains, as it is at present, the clearing-house of the world, any other nation may be its workshop. Now I ask you, gentlemen, whether...that is not a very short-sighted view
Speech at the Guildhall, 19 Jan. 1904, in The Times 20 Jan. 1904

In the great revolution which separated the United States from Great Britain the greatest man that that revolution produced...was Alexander Hamilton...he left a precious legacy to his countrymen when he disclosed to them the secrets of union and when he said to them, "Learn to think continentally." And, my fellow-citizens, if I may venture to give you a message, now I would say to you, "Learn to think Imperially." Speech at the Guildhall, 19 Jan. 1904, in The Times 20 Jan. 1904

Speech at Kettering, 3 July 1938, in The Times 4 July 1938

How horrible, fantastic, incredible it is that we should be digging trenches and trying on gas-masks here because of a quarrel in a far away country [Czechoslovakia] between people of whom we know nothing
Broadcast speech, 27 Sept. 1938, in The Times 28 Sept. 1938

This morning I had another talk with the German Chancellor, Herr Hitler, and here is the paper which bears his name upon it as well as mine...."We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German Naval Agreement, as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again." Speech at Heston Airport, 30 Sept. 1938, in The Times 1 Oct. 1938

My good friends, this is the second time in our history that there has come back from Germany to Downing Street peace with honour. I believe it is peace for our time. We thank you from the bottom of our hearts. And now I recommend you to go home and sleep quietly in your beds
Speech from window of 10 Downing Street, 30 Sept. 1938, in The Times 1 Oct. 1938

This morning, the British Ambassador in Berlin handed the German government a final Note stating that, unless we heard from them by eleven o'clock that they were prepared at once to withdraw their troops from Poland, a state of war would exist between us. I have to tell you now that no such undertaking has been received, and that consequently this country is at war with Germany
Radio broadcast, 3 Sept. 1939, in The Times 4 Sept. 1939

Whatever may be the reason—whether it was that Hitler thought he might get away with what he had got without fighting for it, or whether it was that after all the preparations were not sufficiently complete—however, one thing is certain—he missed the bus

Catch-phrase popularized in Monty Python's Flying Circus (BBC TV programme, 1969-74)

Your wife interested in...photographs? Eh? Know what I mean—photographs? He asked him knowingly...nudge nudge, snap snap, grin grin, wink wink, say no more
Monty Python's Flying Circus (BBC TV programme, 1969), in Roger Wilmut From Fringe to Flying Circus (1980) ch. 11

customer: I wish to complain about this parrot what I purchased not half an hour ago from this very boutique shopkeeper: Oh yes, the Norwegian Blue—what's wrong with it?
customer: I'll tell you what's wrong with it—it's dead that's what's wrong with it shopkeeper: No, no—it's resting....It's probably pining for the fiords... customer: It's not pining—it's passed on! This parrot is no more! It has ceased to be! It's expired and gone to meet its maker! This is a late parrot! It's a stiff! Bereft of life it rests in peace—if you hadn't nailed it to the perch it would be pushing up the daisies! It's rung down the curtain and joined the choir invisible! This is an ex-parrot!
Monty Python's Flying Circus (BBC TV programme, 1969), in Roger Wilmut From Fringe to Flying Circus (1980) ch. 11

Nobody expects the Spanish Inquisition! Our chief weapon is surprises—surprise and fear...fear and surprise...our two weapons are fear and surprise—and ruthless efficiency...our three weapons are fear and surprise and ruthless efficiency and an almost fanatical devotion to the Pope...our four...no....Amongst our weapons—amongst our weaponry—are such elements as fear, surprise....I'll come in again

We do need a sense of urgency in our outlook in the regeneration of industry and enterprise, because otherwise what really worries me is that we are going to end up as a fourth-rate country and I don't want to see that
Speech at Edinburgh, 26 Nov. 1985, in Scotsman 27 Nov. 1985

Instead of designing an extension to the elegant façade of the National Gallery which complements it...it looks as if we may be presented with a kind of vast municipal fire station....I would understand better this type of high-tech approach if you demolished the whole of Trafalgar Square and started again...but what is proposed is like a monstrous carbuncle on the face of a much-loved and elegant friend

An adventure is only an inconvenience rightly considered. An inconvenience is only an adventure wrongly considered
All Things Considered (1908) "On Running after one's Hat"

No animal ever invented anything so bad as drunkenness—or so good as drink
All Things Considered (1908) "Wine When it is Red"

Of those days the tale is told that I once sent a telegram to my wife in London, which ran: "Am in Market Harborough. Where ought I to be?" I cannot remember whether this story is true; but it is not unlikely, or, I think, unreasonable
Autobiography (1936) ch. 16

They died to save their country and they only saved the world

Flying Inn (1914) ch. 18 "Song of Right and Wrong"

Before the Roman came to Rye or out to Severn strode,
The rolling English drunkard made the rolling English road
A reeling road, a rolling road, that rambles round the shire,
And after him the parson ran, the sexton and the squire;
A merry road, a mazy road, and such as we did tread
The night we went to Birmingham by way of Beachy Head
Flying Inn (1914) ch. 21 "Rolling English Road"

For there is good news yet to hear and fine things to be seen,

Before we go to Paradise by way of Kensal Green

Heretics (1905) ch. 1

There is no such thing on earth as an uninteresting subject; the only thing that can exist is an uninterested person
Heretics (1905) ch. 3

The artistic temperament is a disease that afflicts amateurs. It is a disease which arises from men not having sufficient power of expression to utter and get rid of the element of art in their being
Heretics (1905) ch. 17

Bigotry may be roughly defined as the anger of men who have no opinions
Heretics (1905) ch. 20

After the first silence the small man said to the other: "Where does a wise man hide a pebble?" And the tall man answered in a low voice: "On the beach." The small man nodded, and after a short silence said: "Where does a wise man hide a leaf?" And the other answered: "In the forest." Innocence of Father Brown (1911) "The Sign of the Broken Sword"

Thieves respect property. They merely wish the property to become their property that they may more perfectly respect it
Man who was Thursday (1908) ch. 4

The human race, to which so many of my readers belong, has been playing at children's games from the beginning, and will probably do it till the end, which is a nuisance for the few people who grow up
Napoleon of Notting Hill (1904) bk. 1, ch. 1

Why do you rush through the fields in trains,
Guessing so much and so much
Why do you flash through the flowery meads,
Fat-head poet that nobody reads;
And why do you know such a frightful lot
About people in gloves and such? New Poems (1933) "The Fat White Woman Speaks" (an answer to Frances Cornford, see 61:8)

Democracy means government by the uneducated, while aristocracy means government by the badly educated
New York Times 1 Feb. 1931, pt. 5, p. 1

The men who really believe in themselves are all in lunatic asylums
Orthodoxy (1908) ch. 2

Poets do not go mad; but chess-players do. Mathematicians go mad, and cashiers; but creative artists very seldom. I am not, as will be seen, in any sense attacking logic: I only say that this danger does lie in logic, not in imagination
Orthodoxy (1908) ch. 2

Mr Shaw is (I suspect) the only man on earth who has never written any poetry
Orthodoxy (1908) ch. 3

Tradition may be defined as an extension of the franchise. Tradition means giving votes to the most obscure of all classes, our ancestors. It is the democracy of the dead. Tradition refuses to submit to the small and arrogant oligarchy of those who merely happen to be walking about. All democrats object to men being disqualified by the accident of birth; tradition objects to their being disqualified by the accident of death
Democracy tells us not to neglect a good man's opinion, even if he is our groom; tradition asks us not to neglect a good man's opinion, even if he is our father
Orthodoxy (1908) ch. 4

All conservatism is based upon the idea that if you leave things alone you leave them as they are. But you do not. If you leave a thing alone you leave it to a torrent of change
Orthodoxy (1908) ch. 7

Orthodoxy (1908) ch. 7

White founts falling in the Courts of the sun,
And the Soldan of Byzantium is smiling as they run
Poems (1915) "Lepanto"

Strong gongs groaning as the guns boom far,
Don John of Austria is going to the war,
Stiff flags straining in the night-blasts cold
In the gloom black-purple, in the glint old-gold,
Torchlight crimson on the copper kettle-drums,
Then the tuckets, then the trumpets, then the cannon, and he comes
Poems (1915) "Lepanto"

From all that terror teaches,
From lies of tongue and pen,
From all the easy speeches
That comfort cruel men,
From sale and profanation
Of honour and the sword,
From sleep and from damnation,

Still sat unconquered in a ring,
Remembering him like anything
Poems (1915) "Shakespeare Memorial"

John Grubby, who was short and stout
And troubled with religious doubt,
Refused about the age of three
To sit upon the curate's knee
Poems (1915) "New Freethinker"

And I dream of the days when work was scrappy,
And rare in our pockets the mark of the mint,
When we were angry and poor and happy,
And proud of seeing our names in print
Poems (1915) "Song of Defeat"

Smile at us, pay us, pass us; but do not quite forget
For we are the people of England, that never have spoken yet
Poems (1915) "The Secret People"

We only know the last sad squires ride slowly towards the sea,
And a new people takes the land: and still it is not we
Poems (1915) "The Secret People"

They spoke of Progress spiring round,
Of Light and Mrs Humphry Ward--
It is not true to say I frowned,
Or ran about the room and roared;
I might have simply sat and snored--
I rose politely in the club
And said, "I feel a little bored
Will someone take me to a pub?" Poems (1915) "Ballade of an Anti-Puritan"

The gallows in my garden, people say,
Is new and neat and adequately tall

I tie the noose on in a knowing way
As one that knots his necktie for a ball;
But just as all the neighbours—on the wall--
Are drawing a long breath to shout "Hurray!"
The strangest whim has seized me....After all
I think I will not hang myself today
Poems (1915) "Ballade of Suicide"

It isn't that they can't see the solution. It is that they can't see the problem
Scandal of Father Brown (1935) "Point of a Pin"

Lying in bed would be an altogether perfect and supreme experience if only one had a coloured pencil long enough to draw on the ceiling
Tremendous Trifles (1909) "On Lying in Bed"

Hardy went down to botanize in the swamp, while Meredith climbed towards the sun. Meredith became, at his best, a sort of daintily dressed Walt Whitman: Hardy became a sort of village atheist brooding and blaspheming over the village idiot
Victorian Age in Literature (1912) ch. 2

He [Tennyson] could not think up to the height of his own towering style
Victorian Age in Literature (1912) ch. 3

The Christian ideal has not been tried and found wanting. It has been found difficult; and left untried
What's Wrong with the World (1910) pt. 1, ch. 5

She was maintaining the prime truth of woman, the universal mother: that if a thing is worth doing, it is worth doing badly
What's Wrong with the World (1910) pt. 4, ch. 14

When fishes flew and forests walked
And figs grew upon thorn,
Some moment when the moon was blood
Then surely I was born.

With monstrous head and sickening cry
And ears like errant wings,
The devil's walking parody

In defeat unbeatable: in victory unbearable

In Edward Marsh Ambrosia and Small Beer (1964) ch. 5 (describing Viscount Montgomery)

After the war one quip which went the rounds of Westminster was attributed to Churchill himself. "An empty taxi arrived at 10 Downing Street, and when the door was opened [Clement] Attlee got out." When [John] Colville repeated this, and its attribution, to Churchill he obviously did not like it. His face set hard, and "after an awful pause" he said: "Mr Attlee is an honourable and gallant gentleman, and a faithful colleague who served his country well at the time of her greatest need. I should be obliged if you would make it clear whenever an occasion arises that I would never make such a remark about him, and that I strongly disapprove of anybody who does.”

Question: What are the desirable qualifications for any young man who wishes to become a politician?
Mr Churchill: It is the ability to foretell what is going to happen tomorrow, next week, next month, and next year.
And to have the ability afterwards to explain why it didn't happen
In B. Adler Churchill Wit (1965) p. 4

The British people have taken for themselves this motto—“Business carried on as usual during alterations on the map of Europe.” They expect the navy, on which they have lavished so much care and expense, to make that good, and that is what, upon the whole, we are actually achieving at the present time
Speech at the Guildhall, 9 Nov. 1914, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 3, p. 2341

Here is the answer which I will give to President Roosevelt....We shall not fail or falter; we shall not weaken or tire. Neither the sudden shock of battle nor the long-drawn trials of vigilance and exertion will wear us down.
Give us the tools and we will finish the job
Speech on radio, 9 Feb. 1941, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 6, p. 6350

The people of London with one voice would say to Hitler: “You have committed every crime under the sun....We will have no truce or parley with you, or the grisly gang who work your wicked will. You do your worst—and we will do our best.” Speech at County Hall, London, 14 July 1941, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 6, p. 6451

Do not let us speak of darker days; let us rather speak of sterner days
These are not dark days: these are great days—the greatest days our country has ever lived; and we must all thank God that we have been allowed, each of us according to our stations, to play a part in making these days memorable in the history of our race
Speech at Harrow School, 29 Oct. 1941, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 6, p. 6500

It becomes still more difficult to reconcile Japanese action with prudence or even with sanity. What kind of a people do they think we are? Speech to US Congress, 26 Dec. 1941, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 6, p. 6540

When I warned them [the French Government] that Britain would fight on alone whatever they did, their generals told their Prime Minister and his divided Cabinet, “In three weeks England will have her neck wrung like a chicken.” Some chicken! Some neck! Speech to Canadian Parliament, 30 Dec. 1941, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 6, p. 6544

There is no finer investment for any community than putting milk into babies. Healthy citizens are the greatest asset any country can have
Speech on radio, 21 Mar. 1943, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 7, p. 6761

From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic an iron curtain has descended across the Continent
Speech at Westminster College, Fulton, Missouri, 5 Mar. 1946, in Complete Speeches (1974) vol. 7, p. 7290

Somebody said, “One never hears of Baldwin nowadays—he might as well be dead.” “No,” said Winston, “not dead. But the candle in that great turnip has gone out.” Harold Nicolson Diary 17 Aug. 1950, in Diaries and Letters (1968) p. 193

Now this is not the end. It is not even the beginning of the end. But it is, perhaps, the end of the beginning
Speech at the Mansion House, London, 10 Nov. 1942, in End of the Beginning (1943) p. 214

We mean to hold our own. I have not become the King's First Minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire
Speech in London, 10 Nov. 1942, in End of the Beginning (1943) p. 215

Once he [Churchill] said to me, “Alfred, if you met Picasso coming down the street, would you join with me in kicking his something something something?” I said, “Yes, sir, I would.” Sir Alfred Munnings in speech at Royal Academy, 28 Apr. 1949, in The Finish (1952) ch. 22

Don't talk to me about naval tradition. It's nothing but rum, sodomy and the lash

In Sir Peter Gretton Former Naval Person (1968) ch. 1

A labour contract into which men enter voluntarily for a limited and for a brief period, under which they are paid wages which they consider adequate, under which they are not bought or sold and from which they can obtain relief...on payment of $17.10s, the cost of their passage, may not be a healthy or proper contract, but it cannot in the opinion of His Majesty's Government be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude

Hansard 22 Feb. 1906, col. 555

He [Lord Charles Beresford] is one of those orators of whom it was well said, "Before they get up, they do not know what they are going to say; when they are speaking, they do not know what they are saying; and when they have sat down, they do not know what they have said." Hansard 20 Dec. 1912, col. 1893

The whole map of Europe has been changed. The position of countries has been violently altered. The modes of thought of men, the whole outlook on affairs, the grouping of parties, all have encountered violent and tremendous changes in the deluge of the world, but as the deluge subsides and the waters fall short we see the dreary steeples of Fermanagh and Tyrone emerging once again. The integrity of their quarrel is one of the few institutions that has been unaltered in the cataclysm which has swept the world

I decline utterly to be impartial as between the fire brigade and the fire

Hansard 7 July 1926, col. 2216 (replying to complaints of his bias in editing the British Gazette during the General Strike)

I remember, when I was a child, being taken to the celebrated Barnum's circus, which contained an exhibition of freaks and monstrosities, but the exhibit on the programme which I most desired to see was the one described as "The Boneless Wonder." My parents judged that that spectacle would be too revolting and demoralizing for my youthful eyes, and I have waited 50 years to see the boneless wonder [Ramsay MacDonald] sitting on the Treasury Bench

Hansard 28 Jan. 1931, col. 1021

So they [the Government] go on in strange paradox, decided only to be undecided, resolved to be irresolute, adamant for drift, solid for fluidity, all-powerful to be impotent

Hansard 12 Nov. 1936, col. 1107

The utmost he [Neville Chamberlain] has been able to gain for Czechoslovakia and in the matters which were in dispute has been that the German dictator, instead of snatching his victuals from the table, has been content to have them served to him course by course

Hansard 5 Oct. 1938, col. 361

I would say to the House, as I said to those who have joined this Government: "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat." Hansard 13 May 1940, col. 1502

You ask, what is our policy? I will say: It is to wage war, by sea, land and air, with all our might and with all the strength that God can give us; to wage war against a monstrous tyranny, never surpassed in the dark, lamentable catalogue of human crime. That is our policy. You ask, what is our aim? I can answer in one word: Victory, victory at all costs, victory in spite of all terror; victory, however long and hard the road may be; for without victory, there is no survival

At this time I feel entitled to claim the aid of all, and I say, "Come then, let us go forward together with our united strength." Hansard 13 May 1940, col. 1502

Even though large tracts of Europe and many old and famous States have fallen or may fall into the grip of the Gestapo and all the odious apparatus of Nazi rule, we shall not flag or fail. We shall go on to the end. We shall fight in France, we shall fight on the seas and oceans, we shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air, we shall defend our island, whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender, and even if, which I do not for a moment believe, this island or a large part of it were subjugated and starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British Fleet, would carry on the struggle, until, in God's good time, the new world, with all its power and might, steps forth to the rescue and the liberation of the old

Hansard 4 June 1940, col. 796

What General Weygand called the "Battle of France" is over. I expect that the Battle of Britain is about to begin. Upon this battle depends the survival of Christian civilization. Upon it depends our own British life and the long continuity of our institutions and our Empire. The whole fury and might of the enemy must very soon be turned on us. Hitler knows that he will have to break us in this island or lose the war. If we can stand up to him all Europe may be free and the life of the world may move forward into broad, sunlit uplands; but if we fail then the whole world, including the United States, and all that we have known and cared for, will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinister, and perhaps more prolonged, by the lights of a perverted science. Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty, and so bear ourselves that, if the British Commonwealth and its Empire lasts for a thousand years, men will still say, "This was their finest hour." Hansard 18 June 1940, col. 60

The gratitude of every home in our Island, in our Empire, and indeed throughout the world, except in the abodes of the guilty, goes out to the British airmen who, undaunted by odds, unwearied in their constant challenge and mortal danger, are turning the tide of world war by their prowess and by their devotion. Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few Hansard 20 Aug. 1940, col. 1166

The British nation is unique in this respect. They are the only people who like to be told how bad things are, who like to be told the worst
Hansard 10 June 1941, col. 152

We make this wide encircling movement in the Mediterranean, having for its primary object the recovery of the command of that vital sea, but also having for its object the exposure of the under-belly of the Axis, especially Italy, to heavy attack
Hansard 11 Nov. 1942, col. 28 (often misquoted as "the soft under-belly of the Axis")

He [President Roosevelt] devised the extraordinary measure of assistance called Lend-Lease, which will stand forth as the most unselfish and unsordid financial act of any country in all history
Hansard 17 Apr. 1945, col. 76

Unless the right hon. Gentleman [Mr Bevan] changes his policy and methods and moves without the slightest delay, he will be as great a curse to this country in time of peace, as he was a squalid nuisance in time of war
Hansard 6 Dec. 1945, col. 2544

Many forms of Government have been tried, and will be tried in this world of sin and woe. No one pretends that democracy is perfect or all-wise
Indeed, it has been said that democracy is the worst form of Government except all those other forms that have been tried from time to time
Hansard 11 Nov. 1947, col. 206

I cannot forecast to you the action of Russia. It is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma: but perhaps there is a key. That key is Russian national interest

Shortly after returning from his tour of the Near East, Anthony Eden submitted a long-winded report to the Prime Minister on his experiences and impressions. Churchill, it is told, returned it to his War Minister with a note saying: "As far as I can see you have used every cliché except 'God is Love' and 'Please adjust your dress before leaving.'" Life 9 Dec. 1940 (when this story was repeated in the Daily Mirror, Churchill denied that it was true)

I wrote my name at the top of the page. I wrote down the number of the question "1." After much reflection I put a bracket round it thus "(1)." But thereafter I could not think of anything connected with it that was either relevant or true....It was from these slender indications of scholarship that Mr Welldon drew the conclusion that I was worthy to pass into Harrow. It is very much to his credit
My Early Life (1930) ch. 2

By being so long in the lowest form [at Harrow] I gained an immense advantage over the cleverer boys. They all went on to learn Latin and Greek....But I was taught English....Thus I got into my bones the essential structure of the ordinary British sentence—which is a noble thing....Naturally I am biased in favour of boys learning English. I would make them all learn English: and then I would let the clever ones learn Latin as an honour, and Greek as a treat

It is said that Mr Winston Churchill once made this marginal comment against a sentence that clumsily avoided a prepositional ending: "This is the sort of English up with which I will not put." Ernest Gowers Plain Words (1948) ch. 9

Moral of the Work. In war: resolution. In defeat: defiance. In victory: magnanimity. In peace: goodwill
Second World War (1948) vol. 1, epigraph (Sir Edward Marsh in A Number of People (1939) p. 152, says that this motto occurred to Churchill shortly after the First World War)

One day President Roosevelt told me that he was asking publicly for suggestions about what the war should be called. I said at once "The Unnecessary War." Second World War (1948) vol. 1, p. viii

I felt as if I were walking with destiny, and that all my past life had been but a preparation for this hour and this trial. Eleven years in the political wilderness had freed me from ordinary Party antagonisms. My warnings over the last six years had been so numerous, so detailed, and were now so terribly vindicated, that no one could gainsay me. I could not be reproached either for making the war or with want of preparation for it. I thought I knew a good deal about it all, and I was sure I should not fail. Therefore, although impatient for the morning, I slept soundly and had no need for cheering dreams. Facts are better than dreams
Second World War (1948) vol. 1, p. 526

I have never accepted what many people have kindly said—namely, that I inspired the nation....It was the nation and the race dwelling all round the globe that had the lion's heart. I had the luck to be called upon to give the roar. I also hope that I sometimes suggested to the lion the right place to use his claws

Perrault's façade [of the Louvre] reflects the triumph of an authoritarian state, and of those logical solutions that Colbert, the great administrator of the seventeenth century, was imposing on politics, economics and every department of contemporary life, including, above all, the arts. This gives French Classical architecture a certain inhumanity

It was the work not of craftsmen, but of wonderfully gifted civil servants

Give My Regards to Broadway (1904 song)

Over there, over there,
Send the word, send the word over there
That the Yanks are coming, the Yanks are coming,
The drums rum-tumming everywhere
So prepare, say a prayer,
Send the word, send the word to beware
We'll be over, we're coming over
And we won't come back till it's over, over there
Over There (1917 song)

I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy,
A Yankee Doodle, do or die;
A real live nephew of my Uncle Sam's,
Born on the fourth of July
I've got a Yankee Doodle sweetheart,
She's my Yankee Doodle joy
Yankee Doodle came to London,
Just to ride the ponies;
I am the Yankee Doodle Boy
Yankee Doodle Boy (1904 song)

In the sex-war thoughtlessness is the weapon of the male, vindictiveness of the female
Unquiet Grave (1944) pt. 1

Life is a maze in which we take the wrong turning before we have learnt to walk
Unquiet Grave (1944) pt. 1

The civilization of one epoch becomes the manure of the next. Everything over-ripens in the same way. The disasters of the world are due to its inhabitants not being able to grow old simultaneously
Unquiet Grave (1944) pt. 2

Heart of Darkness ch. 3, in Youth (1902)

A man that is born falls into a dream like a man who falls into the sea
If he tries to climb out into the air as inexperienced people endeavour to do, he drowns—nicht wahr?...No! I tell you! The way is to the destructive element submit yourself, and with the exertions of your hands and feet in the water make the deep, deep sea keep you up....In the destructive element immerse....That was the way. To follow the dream, and again to follow the dream—and so—ewig—usque ad finem
Lord Jim (1900) ch. 20

You shall judge of a man by his foes as well as by his friends
Lord Jim (1900) ch. 34

Any work that aspires, however humbly, to the condition of art should carry its justification in every line

The Nigger of the Narcissus, author's note, in New Review Dec. 1897

Action is consolatory. It is the enemy of thought and the friend of flattering illusions
Nostromo (1904) pt. 1, ch. 6

Some Reminiscences (1912; in USA entitled "A Personal Record") p. 19

The scrupulous and the just, the noble, humane, and devoted natures; the unselfish and the intelligent may begin a movement—but it passes away from them. They are not the leaders of a revolution. They are its victims
Under Western Eyes (1911) pt. 2, ch. 3

A belief in a supernatural source of evil is not necessary; men alone are quite capable of every wickedness
Under Western Eyes (1911) pt. 2, ch. 4

I remember my youth and the feeling that will never come back any more—the feeling that I could last for ever, outlast the sea, the earth, and all men; the deceitful feeling that lures us on to joys, to perils, to love, to vain effort—to death; the triumphant conviction of strength, the heat of life in the handful of dust, the glow in the heart that with every year grows dim, grows cold, grows small, and expires—and expires, too soon, too soon—before life itself

I have recently been travelling round the world—on your behalf, and at your expense—visiting some of the chaps with whom I hope to be shaping your future. I went first to Germany, and there I spoke with the German Foreign Minister, Herr...Herr and there, and we exchanged many frank words in our respective languages
Beyond the Fringe (1961 revue) "TVPM," in Roger Wilmut Complete Beyond the Fringe (1987) p. 54

Yes, I could have been a judge but I never had the Latin, never had the Latin for the judging, I just never had sufficient of it to get through the rigorous judging exams. They're noted for their rigour. People come staggering out saying, "My God, what a rigorous exam"—and so I became a miner instead

3.92 Calvin Coolidge

1872-1933

Shortly after Mr Coolidge had gone to the White House, Mrs Coolidge was unable to go to church with him one Sunday. At lunch she asked what the sermon was about. "Sins," he said. "Well, what did he say about sin?" "He was against it." John H. McKee Coolidge: Wit and Wisdom (1933) p. 4 (but Edward C Latham's Meet Calvin Coolidge (1960) p. 151 quotes Mrs Coolidge as saying that this was one of "the stories which might reasonably be attributed to him [Coolidge] but which did not originate with him")

Mr Coolidge...interrupted a discussion of cancellation of the war debts with: "Well, they hired the money, didn't they?" John H. McKee Coolidge: Wit and Wisdom (1933) p. 118

I used to think all poets were Byronic--
Mad, bad and dangerous to know
And then I met a few. Yes it's ironic--
I used to think all poets were Byronic
They're mostly wicked as a ginless tonic
And wild as pension plans

Magnificently unprepared
For the long littleness of life
Poems (1910) "Youth"

O why do you walk through the fields in gloves,
Missing so much and so much?
O fat white woman whom nobody loves,
Why do you walk through the fields in gloves,
When the grass is soft as the breast of doves
And shivering-sweet to the touch?
O why do you walk through the fields in gloves,
Missing so much and so much? Poems (1910) "To a Fat Lady seen from the Train." Cf. G. K. Chesterton 51:8

How long ago Hector took off his plume,
Not wanting that his little son should cry,
Then kissed his sad Andromache goodbye--
And now we three in Euston waiting-room

3.100 Francis Macdonald Cornford

1874-1943

If you persist to the threshold of old age—your fiftieth year, let us say—you will be a powerful person yourself, with an accretion of peculiarities which other people will have to study in order to square you. The toes you will have trodden on by this time will be as sands on the sea-shore; and from far below you will mount the roar of a ruthless multitude of young men in a hurry. You may perhaps grow to be aware what they are in a hurry to do. They are in a hurry to get you out of the way
Microcosmographia Academica (1908) p. 2

Every public action, which is not customary, either is wrong, or, if it is right, is a dangerous precedent. It follows that nothing should ever be done for the first time

London Pride (1941 song)

Mad about the boy,
It's pretty funny but I'm mad about the boy
He has a gay appeal
That makes me feel
There may be something sad about the boy
Mad about the Boy (1932 song)

Mad dogs and Englishmen
Go out in the midday sun
The Japanese don't care to,
The Chinese wouldn't dare to,
The Hindus and Argentines sleep firmly from twelve to one,
But Englishmen detest a siesta
In the Philippines, there are lovely screens
To protect you from the glare;
In the Malay states, they have hats like plates
Which the Britishers won't wear
At twelve noon, the natives swoon,
And no further work is done;
But mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the midday sun
Mad Dogs and Englishmen (1931 song)

The Stately Homes of England,
How beautiful they stand,
To prove the upper classes
Have still the upper hand;
Though the fact that they have to be rebuilt

And frequently mortgaged to the hilt
Is inclined to take the gilt
Off the gingerbread,
And certainly damps the fun
Of the eldest son

Speech at Runcorn, 12 Feb. 1987, in Guardian 13 Feb. 1987

We have problems here of high smoking and alcoholism. Some of these problems are things we can tackle by impressing on people the need to look after themselves better. That is something which is taken more seriously down South....I honestly don't think the problem has anything to do with poverty....The problem very often for people is, I think, just ignorance and failing to realise that they do have some control over their lives

You have to take chances for peace, just as you must take chances in war
Some say that we were brought to the verge of war. Of course we were brought to the verge of war. The ability to get to the verge without getting into the war is the necessary art. If you cannot master it, you inevitably get into war. If you try to run away from it, if you are scared to go to the brink, you are lost. We've had to look it square in the face—on the question of enlarging the Korean war, on the question of getting into the Indochina war, on the question of Formosa. Don't think twice, it's all right

I saw ten thousand talkers whose tongues were all broken,
I saw guns and sharp swords, in the hands of young children,
And it's a hard, and it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard,
And it's a hard rain's a gonna fall
A Hard Rain's A Gonna Fall (1963 song)

Money doesn't talk, it swears
It's Alright, Ma (1965 song)

How does it feel
To be on your own
With no direction home
Like a complete unknown
Like a rolling stone? Like a Rolling Stone (1965 song)

She knows there's no success like failure
And that failure's no success at all
Love Minus Zero/ No Limit (1965 song)

I ain't gonna work on Maggie's Farm no more
Maggie's Farm (1965 song)

Hey! Mr Tambourine Man, play a song for me
I'm not sleepy and there is no place I'm going to Mr Tambourine Man (1965 song)

"Equality," I spoke the word
As if a wedding vow
Ah, but I was so much older then,
I'm younger than that now
My Back Pages (1964 song)

Don't follow leaders
Watch the parkin' meters
Subterranean Homesick Blues (1965 song)

Come mothers and fathers,
Throughout the land
And don't criticize
What you can't understand
Your sons and your daughters
Are beyond your command
Your old road is Rapidly agin'
Please get out of the new one
If you can't lend your hand
For the times they are a-changin'! The Times They Are A-Changing (1964 song)

But I can't think for you
You'll have to decide,
Whether Judas Iscariot
Had God on his side
With God on our Side (1963 song)

1880-1951

There's a famous seaside place called Blackpool,
That's noted for fresh air and fun,
And Mr and Mrs Ramsbottom
Went there with young Albert, their son.

A grand little lad was young Albert,
All dressed in his best; quite a swell
With a stick with an 'orse's 'ead 'andle,
The finest that Woolworth's could sell.

They didn't think much to the Ocean:
The waves, they were fiddlin' and small,
There was no wrecks and nobody drowneded,
Fact, nothing to laugh at at all
The Lion and Albert (1932) in Albert, 'Arold and Others (1937)--monologue recorded by Stanley Holloway in 1932

The Magistrate gave his opinion
That no one was really to blame
And he said that he hoped the Ramsbottoms
Would have further sons to their name.

At that Mother got proper blazing,
"And thank you, sir, kindly," said she
"What, waste all our lives raising children
To feed ruddy Lions? Not me!" The Lion and Albert (1932) in Albert, 'Arold and Others (1937)

That's the fourth time that infernal noise has roused me
Said to his secretary "Fritz" Ponsonby at the first performance of "The Wreckers," an opera by Dame Ethel Smyth, quoted in H. Atkins and A. Newman Beecham Stories (1978) p. 43

I thought everyone must know that a short jacket is always worn with a silk hat at a private view in the morning
In Sir P. Magnus Edward VII (1964) ch. 19 (said to Sir Frederick Ponsonby, who had proposed to accompany him in a tail-coat)

Because a man has a black face and a different religion from our own, there is no reason why he should be treated as a brute

The thing that impresses me most about America is the way parents obey their children
Look 5 Mar. 1957

At long last I am able to say a few words of my own. I have never wanted to withhold anything, but until now it has not been constitutionally possible for me to speak. A few hours ago I discharged my last duty as King and Emperor, and now that I have been succeeded by my brother, the Duke of York, my first words must be to declare allegiance to him. This I do with all my heart.

You all know the reasons which have impelled me to renounce the throne

But I want you to understand that in making up my mind I did not forget the country or the Empire which as Prince of Wales, and lately as King, I have for twenty-five years tried to serve. But you must believe me when I tell you that I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love....

This decision has been made less difficult to me by the sure knowledge that my brother, with his long training in the public affairs of this country and with his fine qualities, will be able to take my place forthwith, without interruption or injury to the life and progress of the Empire. And he has one matchless blessing, enjoyed by so many of you and not bestowed on me—a happy home with his wife and children....

I now quit altogether public affairs, and I lay down my burden....God bless you all. God save the King

1890-1969

This conjunction of an immense military establishment and a large arms industry is new in the American experience....We recognize the imperative need for this development. Yet we must not fail to comprehend its grave implications....In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist
Farewell broadcast, 17 Jan. 1961, in New York Times 18 Jan. 1961

Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed. This world in arms is not spending money alone. It is spending the sweat of its laborers, the genius of its scientists, the hopes of its children
Speech in Washington, 16 Apr. 1953, in Public Papers of Presidents 1953 (1960) p. 182

You have broader considerations that might follow what you might call the "falling domino" principle. You have a row of dominoes set up. You knock over the first one, and what will happen to the last one is that it will go over very quickly. So you have the beginning of a disintegration that would have the most profound influences
Speech at press conference, 7 Apr. 1954, in Public Papers of Presidents 1954 (1960) p. 383

I think that people want peace so much that one of these days governments had better get out of the way and let them have it

Where are the eagles and the trumpets?

Buried beneath some snow-deep Alps
Over buttered scones and crumpets
Weeping, weeping multitudes
Droop in a hundred A.B.C.'s
Ara Vus Prec (1920) "Cooking Egg"

Here I am, an old man in a dry month
Being read to by a boy, waiting for rain
Ara Vus Prec (1920) "Gerontion"

After such knowledge, what forgiveness? Think now
History has many cunning passages, contrived corridors
And issues, deceives with whispering ambitions,
Guides us by vanities
Ara Vus Prec (1920) "Gerontion"

Tenants of the house,
Thoughts of a dry brain in a dry season
Ara Vus Prec (1920) "Gerontion"

A cold coming we had of it,
Just the worst time of the year
For a journey, and such a long journey:
The ways deep and the weather sharp,
The very dead of winter
Ariel Poems (1927) "Journey of the Magi"

But set down
This set down
This: were we led all that way for Birth or Death? There was a Birth, certainly,

We had evidence and no doubt. I had seen birth and death
But had thought they were different; this Birth was Hard and bitter agony for us, like Death, our death
We returned to our places, these Kingdoms,
But no longer at ease here, in the old dispensation,
With an alien people clutching their gods
I should be glad of another death
Ariel Poems (1927) "Journey of the Magi"

Because I do not hope to turn again
Because I do not hope
Because I do not hope to turn
Ash-Wednesday (1930) pt. 1

Because these wings are no longer wings to fly
But merely vans to beat the air
The air which is now thoroughly small and dry
Smaller and dryer than the will Teach us to care and not to care
Teach us to sit still
Ash-Wednesday (1930) pt. 1

Lady, three white leopards sat under a juniper-tree
In the cool of the day
Ash-Wednesday (1930) pt. 2

You've missed the point completely, Julia:
There were no tigers. That was the point
Cocktail Party (1950) act 1, sc. 1

What is hell?
Hell is oneself,
Hell is alone, the other figures in it
Merely projections. There is nothing to escape from
And nothing to escape to. One is always alone
Cocktail Party (1950) act 1, sc. 3

How unpleasant to meet Mr Eliot!
With his features of clerical cut,
And his brow so grim
And his mouth so prim
And his conversation, so nicely
Restricted to What Precisely
And If and Perhaps and But

Collected Poems (1936) "Burnt Norton" pt. 1.

At the still point of the turning world. Neither flesh nor fleshless;
Neither from nor towards; at the still point, there the dance is,
But neither arrest nor movement
Collected Poems (1936) "Burnt Norton" pt. 2

Words strain,
Crack and sometimes break, under the burden,
Under the tension, slip, slide, perish,
Decay with imprecision, will not stay in place,
Will not stay still

Collected Poems (1936) "Burnt Norton" pt. 5

I do not know much about gods; but I think that the river
Is a strong brown god—sullen, untamed and intractable
Dry Salvages (1941) pt. 1

In my beginning is my end
East Coker (1940) pt. 1

That was a way of putting it—not very satisfactory:
A periphrastic study in a worn-out poetical fashion,
Leaving one still with the intolerable wrestle
With words and meanings. The poetry does not matter
East Coker (1940) pt. 2

The houses are all gone under the sea
The dancers are all gone under the hill
East Coker (1940) pt. 2

O dark dark dark. They all go into the dark,
The vacant interstellar spaces, the vacant into the vacant
East Coker (1940) pt. 3

The wounded surgeon plies the steel
That questions the distempered part;
Beneath the bleeding hands we feel
The sharp compassion of the healer's art
Resolving the enigma of the fever chart
East Coker (1940) pt. 4

Each venture
Is a new beginning, a raid on the inarticulate
With shabby equipment always deteriorating
In the general mess of imprecision of feeling
East Coker (1940) pt. 5

Success is relative:

Family Reunion (1939) pt. 2, sc. 3

And what the dead had no speech for, when living,
They can tell you, being dead: the communication
Of the dead is tongued with fire beyond the language of the living
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 1

Ash on an old man's sleeve
Is all the ash the burnt roses leave
Dust in the air suspended
Marks the place where a story ended
Dust inbreathed was a house--
The wall, the wainscot and the mouse

The death of hope and despair,
This is the death of air
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 2

Since our concern was speech, and speech impelled us
To purify the dialect of the tribe
And urge the mind to aftersight and foresight
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 2

We shall not cease from exploration
And the end of all our exploring
Will be to arrive where we started
And know the place for the first time
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 5

What we call the beginning is often the end
And to make an end is to make a beginning
The end is where we start from
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 5

A people without history
Is not redeemed from time, for history is a pattern
Of timeless moments. So, while the light fails
On a winter's afternoon, in a secluded chapel
History is now and England
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 5

A condition of complete simplicity
(Costing not less than everything)
And all shall be well and
All manner of thing shall be well
When the tongues of flame are in-folded
Into the crowned knot of fire
And the fire and the rose are one
Little Gidding (1942) pt. 5

Yet we have gone on living,
Living and partly living
Murder in the Cathedral (1935) pt. 1

The last temptation is the greatest treason:
To do the right deed for the wrong reason
Murder in the Cathedral (1935) pt. 1

Clear the air! clean the sky! wash the wind! take the stone from stone, take the skin from the arm, take the muscle from bone, and wash them
Murder in the Cathedral (1935) pt. 2

Culture may even be described simply as that which makes life worth living

Macavity, Macavity, there's no one like Macavity,
There never was a Cat of such deceitfulness and suavity
He always has an alibi, and one or two to spare:
At whatever time the deed took place—MACAVITY WASN'T THERE!
And they say that all the Cats whose wicked deeds are widely known
(I might mention Mungojerrie, I might mention Griddlebone)
Are nothing more than agents for the Cat who all the time
Just controls their operations: the Napoleon of Crime! Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats (1939) "Macavity:

I have seen the moment of my greatness flicker,
And I have seen the eternal Footman hold my coat, and snicker,
And in short, I was afraid
Prufrock (1917) "Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock"

No! I am not Prince Hamlet, nor was meant to be;
Am an attendant lord, one that will do
To swell a progress, start a scene or two,
Advise the prince
Prufrock (1917) "Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock"

I grow old...I grow old..
I shall wear the bottoms of my trousers rolled.

Shall I part my hair behind? Do I dare to eat a peach?
I shall wear white flannel trousers, and walk upon the beach
I have heard the mermaids singing, each to each.

I do not think that they will sing to me
Prufrock (1917) "Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock"

The winter evening settles down
With smell of steaks in passageways
Six o'clock
The burnt-out ends of smoky days
Prufrock (1917) "Preludes"

Every street lamp that I pass
Beats like a fatalistic drum,
And through the spaces of the dark
Midnight shakes the memory
As a madman shakes a dead geranium
Prufrock (1917) "Rhapsody on a Windy Night"

I am aware of the damp souls of housemaids
Sprouting despondently at area gates
Prufrock (1917) "Morning at the Window"

Stand on the highest pavement of the stair--
Lean on a garden urn--
Weave, weave the sunlight in your hair
Prufrock (1917) "La Figlia Che Piange"

Sometimes these cogitations still amaze
The troubled midnight and the noon's repose

Where is the wisdom we have lost in knowledge?
Where is the knowledge we have lost in information? The Rock (1934) pt. 1

And the wind shall say: "Here were decent godless people:
Their only monument the asphalt road
And a thousand lost golf balls." The Rock (1934) pt. 1

Poetry is not a turning loose of emotion, but an escape from emotion; it is not the expression of personality but an escape from personality. But, of course, only those who have personality and emotions know what it means to want to escape from these things
Sacred Wood (1920) "Tradition and Individual Talent"

The only way of expressing emotion in the form of art is by finding an "objective correlative"; in other words, a set of objects, a situation, a chain of events which shall be the formula of that particular emotion; such that when the external facts, which must terminate in sensory experience, are given, the emotion is immediately evoked
Sacred Wood (1920) "Hamlet and his Problems"

Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal
Sacred Wood (1920) "Philip Massinger"

Birth, and copulation, and death
That's all the facts when you come to brass tacks:
Birth, and copulation, and death
I've been born, and once is enough
Sweeney Agonistes (1932) p. 24

In the seventeenth century a dissociation of sensibility set in, from which we have never recovered; and this dissociation, as is natural, was due to the influence of the two most powerful poets of the century, Milton and Dryden

Triumphal March (1931)

April is the cruellest month, breeding
Lilacs out of the dead land, mixing
Memory and desire, stirring
Dull roots with spring rain
Winter kept us warm, covering
Earth in forgetful snow, feeding
A little life with dried tubers
Waste Land (1922) pt. 1

I read, much of the night, and go south in the winter
Waste Land (1922) pt. 1

And I will show you something different from either
Your shadow at morning striding behind you
Or your shadow at evening rising to meet you;
I will show you fear in a handful of dust
Waste Land (1922) pt. 1. Cf. Joseph Conrad 60:4

Madame Sosostris, famous clairvoyante,
Had a bad cold, nevertheless
Is known to be the wisest woman in Europe,
With a wicked pack of cards
Waste Land (1922) pt. 1

Unreal City,
Under the brown fog of a winter dawn,
A crowd flowed over London Bridge, so many,
I had not thought death had undone so many
Sighs, short and infrequent, were exhaled,
And each man fixed his eyes before his feet
Flowed up the hill and down King William Street,
To where Saint Mary Woolnoth kept the hours
With a dead sound on the final stroke of nine
Waste Land (1922) pt. 1

The Chair she sat in, like a burnished throne,
Glowed on the marble
Waste Land (1922) pt. 2 (cf. Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra act 2, sc. 2, l. 199)

And still she cried, and still the world pursues,
"Jug Jug" to dirty ears
Waste Land (1922) pt. 2

I think we are in rats' alley
Where the dead men lost their bones

Waste Land (1922) pt. 2

O O O O that Shakespeherian Rag--
It's so elegant
So intelligent

Waste Land (1922) pt. 2. Cf. Gene Buck and Herman Ruby

Hurry up please it's time
Waste Land (1922) pt. 2

But at my back from time to time I hear
The sound of horns and motors, which shall bring
Sweeney to Mrs Porter in the spring
O the moon shone bright on Mrs Porter
And on her daughter
They wash their feet in soda water

Waste Land (1922) pt. 3. Cf. Oxford Dictionary of Quotations (1979) 332:19

At the violet hour, when the eyes and back
Turn upward from the desk, when the human engine waits
Like a taxi throbbing waiting,
I, Tiresias, though blind, throbbing between two lives,
Old man with wrinkled female breasts, can see
At the violet hour, the evening hour that strives
Homeward, and brings the sailor home from sea,
The typist home at teatime, clears her breakfast, lights
Her stove, and lays out food in tins

Waste Land (1922) pt. 3

I Tiresias, old man with wrinkled dugs
Perceived the scene, and foretold the rest--
I too awaited the expected guest
He, the young man carbuncular, arrives,
A small house agent's clerk, with one bold stare,
One of the low on whom assurance sits
As a silk hat on a Bradford millionaire

Waste Land (1922) pt. 3

When lovely woman stoops to folly and
Paces about her room again, alone,
She smooths her hair with automatic hand,
And puts a record on the gramophone

Waste Land (1922) pt. 3

Phlebas the Phoenician, a fortnight dead,
Forgot the cry of gulls, and the deep sea swell
And the profit and loss

Waste Land (1922) pt. 4

Who is the third who walks always beside you?
When I count, there are only you and I together
But when I look ahead up the white road
There is always another one walking beside you

Waste Land (1922) pt. 5

A woman drew her long black hair out tight
And fiddled whisper music on those strings
And bats with baby faces in the violet light
Whistled

It is certainly strange to observe...how many people seem to feel vain of their own unqualified optimism when the place where optimism most flourishes is the lunatic asylum
Dance of Life (1923) ch. 3

The sanitary and mechanical age we are now entering makes up for the mercy it grants to our sense of smell by the ferocity with which it assails our sense of hearing. As usual, what we call "Progress" is the exchange of one Nuisance for another Nuisance

6.4 William Faulkner

1897-1962

The long summer
The Hamlet (1940), title of bk. 3. Cf. Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank

The writer's only responsibility is to his art. He will be completely ruthless if he is a good one. He has a dream. It anguishes him so much he must get rid of it. He has no peace until then. Everything goes by the board: honor, pride, decency, security, happiness, all, to get the book written. If a writer has to rob his mother, he will not hesitate; the Ode on a Grecian Urn is worth any number of old ladies
In Paris Review Spring 1956, p. 30

He [the writer] must teach himself that the basest of all things is to be afraid and, teaching himself that, forget it forever, leaving no room in his workshop for anything but the old verities and truths of the heart, the old universal truths lacking which any story is ephemeral and doomed—love and honor and pity and pride and compassion and sacrifice
Nobel Prize speech, 1950, in Les Prix Nobel en 1950 (1951) p. 71

I believe man will not merely endure, he will prevail. He is immortal, not because he, alone among creatures, has an inexhaustible voice but because he has a soul, a spirit capable of compassion and sacrifice and endurance
Nobel Prize speech, 1950, in Les Prix Nobel en 1950 (1951) p. 71

There is no such thing...as bad whiskey. Some whiskeys just happen to be better than others. But a man shouldn't fool with booze until he's fifty; then he's a damn fool if he doesn't
In James M. Webb and A. Wigfall Green William Faulkner of Oxford (1965) p. 110

6.5 George Fearon

1901-1972

In my capacity as Press Representative for the English Stage Company I had read John Osborne's play [Look Back in Anger]. When I met the author I ventured to prophesy that his generation would praise his play while mine would, in general, dislike it. I then told him jokingly that Sloane Square might well become a bloody battleground. "If this happens," I told him, "you would become known as the Angry Young Man." In fact, we decided then and there that henceforth he was to be known as that

One intellectual excitement has, however, been denied me. Men wiser and more learned than I have discerned in history a plot, a rhythm, a predetermined pattern. These harmonies are concealed from me. I can see only one emergency following upon another as wave follows upon wave, only one great fact with respect to which, since it is unique, there can be no generalizations, only one safe rule for the historian: that he should recognize in the development of human destinies the play of the contingent and the unforeseen

They [public schoolboys] go forth into a world that is not entirely composed of public-school men or even of Anglo-Saxons, but of men who are as various as the sands of the sea; into a world of whose richness and subtlety they have no conception. They go forth into it with well-developed bodies, fairly developed minds, and undeveloped hearts
Abinger Harvest (1936) "Notes on English Character"

It is not that the Englishman can't feel—it is that he is afraid to feel
He has been taught at his public school that feeling is bad form. He must not express great joy or sorrow, or even open his mouth too wide when he talks—his pipe might fall out if he did

It is frivolous stuff, and how rare, how precious is frivolity! How few writers can prostitute all their powers! They are always implying "I am capable of higher things." Abinger Harvest (1936) "Ronald Firbank"

The historian must have a third quality as well: some conception of how men who are not historians behave. Otherwise he will move in a world of the dead

Abinger Harvest (1936) "Captain Edward Gibbon"

Yes—oh dear yes—the novel tells a story
Aspects of the Novel (1927) ch. 2

That old lady in the anecdote...was not so much angry as contemptuous...
"How can I tell what I think till I see what I say?" Aspects of the Novel (1927) ch. 5. Cf. Graham Wallas 222:8

I am only touching on one aspect of Ulysses: it is of course far more than a fantasy—it is a dogged attempt to cover the universe with mud, an inverted Victorianism, an attempt to make crossness and dirt succeed where sweetness and light failed, a simplification of the human character in the interests of Hell
Aspects of the Novel (1927) ch. 6

Long books, when read, are usually overpraised, because the reader wishes to convince others and himself that he has not wasted his time
Note from commonplace book, in O. Stallybrass (ed.) Aspects of the Novel and Related Writings (1974) p. 129

Like many others who have lived long in a great capital, she had strong feelings about the various railway termini. They are our gates to the glorious and the unknown. Through them we pass out into adventure and sunshine, to them, alas! we return
Howards End (1910) ch. 2

It will be generally admitted that Beethoven's Fifth Symphony is the most sublime noise that has ever penetrated into the ear of man
Howards End (1910) ch. 5

The music [the scherzo of Beethoven's 5th Symphony] started with a goblin walking quietly over the universe, from end to end. Others followed him
They were not aggressive creatures; it was that that made them so terrible to Helen. They merely observed in passing that there was no such thing as splendour or heroism in the world. After the interlude of elephants dancing, they returned and made the observation for a second time. Helen could not contradict them, for, once at all events, she had felt the same, and had seen the reliable walls of youth collapse. Panic and emptiness! The goblins were right
Howards End (1910) ch. 5

All men are equal—all men, that is to say, who possess umbrellas
Howards End (1910) ch. 6

Personal relations are the important thing for ever and ever, and not this outer life of telegrams and anger
Howards End (1910) ch. 19

She would only point out the salvation that was latent in his own soul, and in the soul of every man. Only connect! That was the whole of her sermon. Only connect the prose and the passion, and both will be exalted, and human love will be seen at its height. Live in fragments no longer
Only connect, and the beast and the monk, robbed of the isolation that is life to either, will die
Howards End (1910) ch. 22 (the title-page also has "Only connect...")

Death destroys a man: the idea of Death saves him
Howards End (1910) ch. 27 (chapter 41 has "Death destroys a man, but the idea of death saves him")

"I don't think I understand people very well. I only know whether I like or dislike them."

"Then you are an Oriental." Passage to India (1924) ch. 2

The so-called white races are really pinko-grey
Passage to India (1924) ch. 7

The echo in a Marabar cave is not like these, it is entirely devoid of distinction. Whatever is said, the same monotonous noise replies, and quivers up and down the walls until it is absorbed into the roof. "Boum" is the sound as far as the human alphabet can express it, or "bou-oum," or "ou-boum,"—utterly dull. Hope, politeness, the blowing of a nose, the squeak of a boot, all produce "boum." Passage to India (1924) ch. 14

The echo began in some indescribable way to undermine her hold on life
Coming at a moment when she chanced to be fatigued, it had managed to murmur, "Pathos, piety, courage—they exist, but are identical, and so is filth. Everything exists, nothing has value." Passage to India (1924) ch. 14

The inscriptions which the poets of the State had composed were hung where they could not be read, or had twitched their drawing-pins out of the stucco, and one of them (composed in English to indicate His universality) consisted, by an unfortunate slip of the draughtsman, of the words, "God si Love."

God si Love. Is this the first message of India? Passage to India (1924) ch. 33

A room with a view
Title of novel (1908)

The traveller who has gone to Italy to study the tactile values of Giotto, or the corruption of the Papacy, may return remembering nothing but the blue sky and the men and women under it
Room with a View (1908) ch. 2

I hate the idea of causes, and if I had to choose between betraying my country and betraying my friend, I hope I should have the guts to betray my country
Two Cheers for Democracy (1951) "What I Believe"

So Two cheers for Democracy: one because it admits variety and two because it permits criticism. Two cheers are quite enough: there is no occasion to give three. Only Love the Beloved Republic deserves that
Two Cheers for Democracy (1951) "What I Believe" ("Love, the Beloved Republic" is a phrase from Swinburne's poem Hertha)

Think before you speak is criticism's motto; speak before you think creation's
Two Cheers for Democracy (1951) "Raison d'être of Criticism"

I suggest that the only books that influence us are those for which we are ready, and which have gone a little farther down our particular path than we have yet got ourselves
Two Cheers for Democracy (1951) "Books That Influenced Me"

Creative writers are always greater than the causes that they represent

1900-1980

Man's main task in life is to give birth to himself, to become what he potentially is. The most important product of his effort is his own personality
Man for Himself (1947) ch. 4

In the nineteenth century the problem was that God is dead; in the twentieth century the problem is that man is dead. In the nineteenth century inhumanity meant cruelty; in the twentieth century it means schizoid self-alienation. The danger of the past was that men became slaves. The danger of the future is that men may become robots

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:

Two roads diverged in a wood, and I--
I took the one less travelled by,
And that has made all the difference
Mountain Interval (1916) "Road Not Taken"

I'd like to get away from earth awhile
And then come back to it and begin over
May no fate wilfully misunderstand me
And half grant what I wish and snatch me away
Not to return. Earth's the right place for love:
I don't know where it's likely to go better
I'd like to go by climbing a birch tree,
And climb black branches up a snow-white trunk
Toward heaven, till the tree could bear no more,
But dipped its top and set me down again
That would be good both going and coming back
One could do worse than be a swinger of birches
Mountain Interval (1916) "Birches"

Some say the world will end in fire,
Some say in ice
From what I've tasted of desire
I hold with those who favour fire
But if it had to perish twice,
I think I know enough of hate
To say that for destruction ice
Is also great
And would suffice
New Hampshire (1923) "Fire and Ice"

The woods are lovely, dark and deep
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,

7.4 J. K. Galbraith

1908-

These are the days when men of all social disciplines and all political faiths seek the comfortable and the accepted; when the man of controversy is looked upon as a disturbing influence; when originality is taken to be a mark of instability; and when, in minor modification of the scriptural parable, the bland lead the bland
Affluent Society (1958) ch. 1

Perhaps the thing most evident of all is how new and varied become the problems we must ponder when we break the nexus with the work of Ricardo and face the economics of affluence of the world in which we live. It is easy to see why the conventional wisdom resists so stoutly such a change
It is a far, far better thing to have a firm anchor in nonsense than to put out on the troubled seas of thought
Affluent Society (1958) ch. 11

In a community where public services have failed to keep abreast of private consumption things are very different. Here, in an atmosphere of private opulence and public squalor, the private goods have full sway

Bugger Bognor

Remark said to have been made either in 1929 when the King was informed that a deputation of leading citizens was asking that the town should be named Bognor Regis because of his convalescence there after a serious illness, or on his death-bed in 1936 when one of his doctors sought to soothe him with the remark "Cheer up, your Majesty, you will soon be at Bognor again." A foggy day in London Town
Had me low and had me down
I viewed the morning with alarm,
The British Museum had lost its charm
How long, I wondered, could this thing last?
But the age of miracles hadn't passed,
For, suddenly, I saw you there
And through foggy London town the sun was shining everywhere

Your children are not your children

They are the sons and daughters of Life's longing for itself

They came through you but not from you

And though they are with you yet they belong not to you

You may give them your love but not your thoughts,

For they have their own thoughts

You may house their bodies but not their souls,

For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams

You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you,

For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday

You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth

A great party is not to be brought down because of a scandal by a woman of easy virtue and a proved liar
In BBC television interview on the Profumo affair, 13 June 1963, in The Times 14 June 1963

If the British public falls for this [the programme of the Labour party], I think it will be stark, raving bonkers
In press conference at Conservative Central Office, 12 Oct. 1964, in The Times 13 Oct. 1964

8.3 J. B. S. Haldane

1892-1964

Now, my own suspicion is that the universe is not only queerer than we suppose, but queerer than we can suppose. I have read and heard many attempts at a systematic account of it, from materialism and theosophy to the Christian system or that of Kant, and I have always felt that they were much too simple. I suspect that there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of, or can be dreamed of, in any philosophy. That is the reason why I have no philosophy myself, and must be my excuse for dreaming
Possible Worlds and Other Essays (1927) "Possible Worlds"

From the fact that there are 400,000 species of beetles on this planet, but only 8,000 species of mammals, he [Haldane] concluded that the Creator, if He exists, has a special preference for beetles, and so we might be more likely to meet them than any other type of animal on a planet which would support life
Report of lecture, 7 Apr. 1951, cited in Journal of the British Interplanetary Society (1951) vol. 10, p. 156

Once the toothpaste is out of the tube, it is awfully hard to get it back in Comment to John Wesley Dean on Watergate affair, 8 Apr. 1973, in Hearings Before the Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities of US Senate: Watergate and Related Activities (1973) vol. 4, p. 1399

8.5 Sir William Haley

1901-

It is a moral issue
Heading of leading article on the Profumo affair, in The Times 11 June 1963

8.6 Henry Hall

1899-1989

This is Henry Hall speaking, and tonight is my guest night
Catch-phrase on BBC Radio's Guest Night from 1934 (see Henry Hall's Here's to the Next Time (1955) ch. 11)

8.7 Sir Peter Hall

1930-

Sir Peter [Hall] has always maintained that, although nobody appeared to want a National Theatre when it was first promulgated, the public has consistently supported it with cash at the box office—with "bottoms on seats" to use his own earthy phrase
Spectator 10 May 1980 (the phrase is often "bums on seats")

8.8 Margaret Halsey

1910-

Englishwomen's shoes look as if they had been made by someone who had often heard shoes described but had never seen any
With Malice Toward Some (1938) pt. 2, p. 107

Towards people with whom they disagree the English gentry, or at any rate that small cross section of them which I have seen, are tranquilly good-natured. It is not comme il faut to establish the supremacy of an idea by smashing in the faces of all the people who try to contradict it
The English never smash in a face. They merely refrain from asking it to dinner
With Malice Toward Some (1938) pt. 3, p. 208

8.9 Oscar Hammerstein II

1895-1960

Climb ev'ry mountain, ford ev'ry stream
Follow ev'ry rainbow, till you find your dream! Climb Ev'ry Mountain (1959 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

June is bustin' out all over
Title of song (1945; music by Richard Rodgers)

The last time I saw Paris
Her heart was warm and gay,
I heard the laughter of her heart in ev'ry street caf'
The Last Time I saw Paris (1940 song; music by Jerome Kern)

The corn is as high as an elephant's eye,
An' it looks like it's climbin' clear up to the sky
Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin' (1943 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

Oh, what a beautiful mornin',
Oh, what a beautiful day!
I got a beautiful feelin'
Ev'rything's goin' my way
Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin' (1943 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

Ol' man river, dat ol' man river,
He must know sumpin', but don't say nothin',
He just keeps rollin',
He keeps on rollin' along
Ol' Man River (1927 song; music by Jerome Kern)

Some enchanted evening,
You may see a stranger,
You may see a stranger,
Across a crowded room
Some Enchanted Evening (1949 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

The hills are alive with the sound of music,
With songs they have sung for a thousand years
The hills fill my heart with the sound of music,
My heart wants to sing ev'ry song it hears
The Sound of Music (1959 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

There is nothin' like a dame
Title of song (1949; music by Richard Rodgers)

You'll never walk alone
Title of song (1945; music by Richard Rodgers)

1873-1963

When a lovely flame dies,
Smoke gets in your eyes
Smoke Gets in your Eyes (1933 song; music by Jerome Kern)

8.15 E. Y. 'Yip' Harburg

1898-1981

Once I built a railroad. Now it's done--
Brother can you spare a dime? Brother Can You Spare a Dime? (1932 song; music by Jay Gorney)

Somewhere over the rainbow
Way up high,
There's a land that I heard of
Once in a lullaby
Over the Rainbow (1939 song; music by Harold Arlen)

When I'm not near the girl I love,
I love the girl I'm near
When I'm Not Near the Girl I Love (1947 song; music by Burton Lane)

8.16 Gilbert Harding

1907-1960

Before he [Gilbert Harding] could go to New York he had to get a US visa at the American consulate in Toronto. He was called upon to fill in a long form with many questions, including "Is it your intention to overthrow the Government of the United States by force?" By the time Harding got to that one he was so irritated that he answered: "Sole purpose of visit." W. Rebyburn Gilbert Harding (1978) ch. 2

If, sir, I possessed, as you suggest, the power of conveying unlimited sexual attraction through the potency of my voice, I would not be reduced to accepting a miserable pittance from the BBC for interviewing a faded female in a damp basement
In S. Grenfell Gilbert Harding by his Friends (1961) p. 118 (reply to Mae West's manager who asked "Can't you sound a bit more sexy when you interview her?")

8.17 Warren G. Harding

1865-1923

America's present need is not heroics, but healing; not nostrums but normalcy; not revolution, but restoration
Speech at Boston, 14 May 1920, in Frederick E. Schortemeier Rededicating America (1920) ch. 17

8.18 Godfrey Harold Hardy

1877-1947

Beauty is the first test: there is no permanent place in the world for ugly mathematics
A Mathematician's Apology (1940) p. 25

8.19 Thomas Hardy

1840-1928

A local thing called Christianity
Dynasts (1904) pt. 1, act 1, sc. 6

My argument is that War makes rattling good history; but Peace is poor reading
Dynasts (1904) pt. 1, act 2, sc. 5

A lover without indiscretion is no lover at all
Hand of Ethelberta (1876) ch. 20

A piece of paper was found upon the floor, on which was written, in the boy's hand, with the bit of lead pencil that he carried: "Done because we are too menny." Jude the Obscure (1896) pt. 6, ch. 2

The bower we shrined to Tennyson,
Gentlemen,
Is roof-wrecked; damp there drip upon
Sagged seats, the creeper-nails are rust,
The spider is sole denizen;
Even she who voiced those rhymes is dust,
Gentlemen! Late Lyrics and Earlier (1922) "An Ancient to Ancients"

This is the weather the cuckoo likes,
And so do I;
When showers betumble the chestnut spikes,
And nestlings fly:
And the little brown nightingale bills his best,
And they sit outside at "The Travellers' Rest,"
And maids come forth sprig-muslin drest,
And citizens dream of the south and west,
And so do I
Late Lyrics and Earlier (1922) "Weathers"

And meadow rivulets overflow,
And drops on gate-bars hang in a row,
And rooks in families homeward go,
And so do I
Late Lyrics and Earlier (1922) "Weathers"

Life's little ironies
Title of book (1894)

"Well, poor soul; she's helpless to hinder that or anything now," answered Mother Cuxsom. "And all her shining keys will be took from her, and her cupboards opened; and things a' didn't wish seen, anybody will see; and her little wishes and ways will all be as nothing!" Mayor of Casterbridge (1886) ch. 18

One grievous failing of Elizabeth's was her occasional pretty and picturesque use of dialect words—those terrible marks of the beast to the truly genteel
Mayor of Casterbridge (1886) ch. 20

I am the family face;
Flesh perishes, I live on,
Projecting trait and trace
Through time to times anon,
And leaping from place to place

Over oblivion
Moments of Vision (1917) "Heredity"

In the third-class seat sat the journeying boy
And the roof-lamp's oily flame
Played down on his listless form and face,
Bewrapt past knowing to what he was going,
Or whence he came
Moments of Vision (1917) "Midnight on the Great Western"

Only a man harrowing clods
In a slow silent walk
With an old horse that stumbles and nods
Half asleep as they stalk.

Only thin smoke without flame
From the heaps of couch-grass;
Yet this will go onward the same
Though Dynasties pass.

Yonder a maid and her wight
Come whispering by:
War's annals will cloud into night
Ere their story die
Moments of Vision (1917) "In Time of 'The Breaking of Nations'"

When the Present has latched its postern behind my tremulous stay,
And the May month flaps its glad green leaves like wings,
Delicate-filmed as new-spun silk, will the neighbours say,
"He was a man who used to notice such things"? Moments of Vision (1917) "Afterwards"

At once a voice outburst among
The bleak twigs overhead
In a full-hearted evensong
Of joy illimited;
An aged thrush, frail, gaunt, and small,
In blast-beruffled plume,
Had chosen thus to fling his soul
Upon the growing gloom.

So little cause for carollings
Of such ecstatic sound
Was written on terrestrial things
Afar or nigh around,
That I could think there trembled through
His happy good-night air
Some blessed Hope, whereof he knew
And I was unaware
Poems of Past and Present (1902) "Darkling Thrush"

If way to the Better there be, it exacts a full look at the worst
Poems of Past and Present (1902) "De Profundis"

In a solitude of the sea
Deep from human vanity,
And the Pride of Life that planned her, stilly couches she.

Steel chambers, late the pyres
Of her salamandrine fires,
Cold currents thrid, and turn to rhythmic tidal lyres.

Over the mirrors meant
To glass the opulent
The sea-worm crawls—grotesque, slimed, dumb, indifferent

The Immanent Will that stirs and urges everything

Satires of Circumstance (1914) "Convergence of the Twain"

When I set out for Lyonesse,
A hundred miles away,
The rime was on the spray,
And starlight lit my lonesomeness
When I set out for Lyonesse
A hundred miles away
Satires of Circumstance (1914) p. 20

What of the faith and fire within us
Men who march away
Ere the barn-cocks say
Night is growing grey,
To hazards whence no tears can win us;
What of the faith and fire within us
Men who march away? Satires of Circumstance (1914) "Men Who March Away"

"Justice" was done, and the President of the Immortals (in Aeschylean phrase) had ended his sport with Tess
Tess of the D'Urbervilles (1891) ch. 59

Let me enjoy the earth no less
Because the all-enacting Might
That fashioned forth its loveliness
Had other aims than my delight
Time's Laughing Stocks (1909) "Let me Enjoy"

Yes; quaint and curious war is!
You shoot a fellow down
You'd treat if met where any bar is,
Or help to half-a-crown
Time's Laughing Stocks (1909) "Man he Killed"

Good, but not religious-good
Under the Greenwood Tree (1872) ch. 2

Well, World, you have kept faith with me,
Kept faith with me;
Upon the whole you have proved to be Much as you said you were
Winter Words (1928) "He Never Expected Much"

"Peace upon earth!" was said. We sing it,
And pay a million priests to bring it
After two thousand years of mass
We've got as far as poison-gas
Winter Words (1928) "Christmas: 1924"

8.20 Maurice Evan Hare

1886-1967

I rise at ten thirty and saunter along like a toff,
I walk down the Strand with my gloves on my hand,
Then I walk down again with them off
Burlington Bertie from Bow (1915 song)

I acted so tragic the house rose like magic,
The audience yelled "You're sublime."
They made me a present of Mornington Crescent
They threw it a brick at a time
The Night I Appeared as Macbeth (1922 song)

8.23 Lord Harlech (David Ormsby Gore)

1918-1985

In the end it may well be that Britain will be honoured by historians more for the way she disposed of an empire

Bewitched, bothered and bewildered
Title of song (1941; music by Richard Rodgers)

When love congeals
It soon reveals
The faint aroma of performing seals,
The double crossing of a pair of heels
I wish I were in love again! I Wish I Were in Love Again (1937 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

I get too hungry for dinner at eight
I like the theatre, but never come late
I never bother with people I hate

That's why the lady is a tramp
The Lady is a Tramp (1937 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

On the first of May
It is moving day;
Spring is here, so blow your job--
Throw your job away;
Now's the time to trust
To your wanderlust
In the city's dust you wait
Must you wait?
Just you wait:

In a mountain greenery
Where God paints the scenery--
Just two crazy people together;
While you love your lover, let
Blue skies be your coverlet--
When it rains we'll laugh at the weather
Mountain Greenery (1926 song; music by Richard Rodgers)

It is the unpleasant and unacceptable face of capitalism
Hansard 15 May 1973, col. 1243 (on the Lonrho affair)

The alternative is to break into the wage/price spiral by acting directly to reduce prices. This can be done by reducing those taxes which bear directly on prices and costs, such as the selective employment tax, and by taking a firm grip on public sector prices and charges such as coal, steel, gas, electricity, transport charges and postal charges. This would, at a stroke, reduce the rise in prices, increase production and reduce unemployment

1901-1976

Ein Fachmann ist ein Mann, der einige der größten Fehler kennt, die man in dem betreffenden Fach machen kann und der sie deshalb zu vermeiden versteht.

An expert is someone who knows some of the worst mistakes that can be made in his subject and how to avoid them
Der Teil und das Ganze ("The Part and the Whole," 1969) ch. 17 (translated by A. J. Pomerans in 1971 as Physics and Beyond)

8.42 Joseph Heller

1923-

There was only one catch and that was Catch-22, which specified that a concern for one's own safety in the face of dangers that were real and immediate was the process of a rational mind. Orr was crazy and could be grounded. All he had to do was ask; and as soon as he did, he would no longer be crazy and would have to fly more missions. Orr would be crazy to fly more missions and sane if he didn't, but if he was sane he had to fly them. If he flew them he was crazy and didn't have to; but if he didn't want to he was sane and had to. Yossarian was moved very deeply by the absolute simplicity of this clause of Catch-22 and let out a respectful whistle.

"That's some catch, that Catch-22," he observed.

"It's the best there is," Doc Daneeka agreed

Catch-22 (1961) ch. 5 (the first chapter of this novel was published as Catch-18 in New World Writing (1955) No. 7--see Kiley and MacDonald "Catch-22" Casebook (1973) 294)

Some men are born mediocre, some men achieve mediocrity, and some men have mediocrity thrust upon them. With Major Major it had been all three

Catch-22 (1961) ch. 9. Cf. Oxford Dictionary of Quotations (1979) 489:14

Good God, how much reverence can you have for a Supreme Being who finds it necessary to include such phenomena as phlegm and tooth-decay in His divine system of creation? Catch-22 (1961) ch. 18

"You put so much stock in winning wars," the grubby iniquitous old man scoffed. "The real trick lies in losing wars, and in knowing which wars can be lost. Italy has been losing wars for centuries, and just see how splendidly we've done nonetheless. France wins wars and is in a continual state of crisis. Germany loses and prospers. Look at our own recent history. Italy won a war in Ethiopia and promptly stumbled into serious trouble. Victory gave us such insane delusions of grandeur that we helped start a world war we hadn't a chance of winning. But now that we are losing again, everything has taken a turn for the better, and we will certainly come out on top again if we succeed in being defeated." Catch-22 (1961) ch. 23

1905-1984

Cynicism is an unpleasant way of saying the truth

The Little Foxes (1939) act 1

I do not like subversion or disloyalty in any form and if I had ever seen any I would have considered it my duty to have reported it to the proper authorities. But to hurt innocent people whom I knew many years ago in order to save myself is to me inhuman and indecent and dishonorable

I cannot and will not cut my conscience to fit this year's fashions, even though I long ago came to the conclusion that I was not a political person and could have no comfortable place in any political group

8.45 Ernest Hemingway

1899-1961

All good books are alike in that they are truer than if they had really happened and after you are finished reading one you will feel that all that happened to you and afterwards it all belongs to you: the good and the bad, the ecstasy, the remorse and sorrow, the people and the places and how the weather was. If you can get so that you can give that to people, then you are a writer

That's my life!
Mother to dozens,
And nobody's wife

Ballads for Broadbrows (1930) "Other People's Babies" (also a 1934 song, with music by Vivian Ellis)

Let's find out what everyone is doing,
And then stop everyone from doing it
Ballads for Broadbrows (1930) "Let's Stop Somebody from Doing Something!"

As my poor father used to say
In 1863,
Once people start on all this Art
Goodbye, moralitee!
And what my father used to say
Is good enough for me
Ballads for Broadbrows (1930) "Lines for a Worthy Person"

Title of novel (1934)

Don't tell my mother I'm living in sin,
Don't let the old folks know
Laughing Ann (1925) "Don't Tell My Mother I'm Living in Sin"

Not huffy, or stuffy, not tiny or tall,
But fluffy, just fluffy, with no brains at all
Plain Jane (1927) "I Like them Fluffy"

Don't let's go to the dogs tonight,
For mother will be there
She-Shanties (1926) "Don't Let's Go to the Dogs Tonight"

The Farmer will never be happy again;
He carries his heart in his boots;
For either the rain is destroying his grain
Or the drought is destroying his roots
Tinker Tailor (1922) "The Farmer"

This high official, all allow,
Is grossly overpaid;
There wasn't any Board, and now
There isn't any Trade
Tinker Tailor (1922) "The President of the Board of Trade"

Nothing is wasted, nothing is in vain:
The seas roll over but the rocks remain
Tough at the Top (circa 1949 operetta), in A.P.H. (1970) ch. 7

The Common Law of England has been laboriously built about a mythical figure—the figure of "The Reasonable Man." Uncommon Law (1935) "The Reasonable Man"

People must not do things for fun. We are not here for fun. There is no reference to fun in any Act of Parliament
Uncommon Law (1935) "Is it a Free Country?"

The critical period in matrimony is breakfast-time
Uncommon Law (1935) "Is Marriage Lawful?"

The Englishman never enjoys himself except for a noble purpose
Uncommon Law (1935) "Fox-Hunting Fun"

Milord, in that case an Act of God was defined as "something which no reasonable man could have expected."

Wenn wir einen Menschen hassen, so hassen wir in seinem Bild etwas, was in uns selber sitzt. Was nicht in uns selber ist, das regt uns nicht auf.

If you hate a person, you hate something in him that is part of yourself
What isn't part of ourselves doesn't disturb us
Demian (1919) ch. 6

Auf Kosten der Intensität also erreicht er [der Bürger] Erhaltung und Sicherheit, statt Gottbesessenheit erntet er
Gewissensruhe, statt Lust Behagen, statt Freiheit Bequemlichkeit, statt tödlicher Glut eine angenehme Temperatur.

The bourgeois prefers comfort to pleasure, convenience to liberty, and a pleasant temperature to the deathly inner consuming fire

It is obvious from our polling, as well as from the doorstep, that the "London Effect" is now very noticeable. The "loony Labour left" is taking its toll; the gays and lesbians issue is costing us dear among the pensioners, and fear of extremism and higher rates/taxes is particularly prominent in the Greater London Council area

Time, you old gipsy man,
Will you not stay,
Put up your caravan
Just for one day? Poems (1917) "Time, You Old Gipsy Man"

I climbed a hill as light fell short,
And rooks came home in scramble sort,
And filled the trees and flapped and fought
And sang themselves to sleep
Poems (1917) "Song of Honour"

I stood and stared; the sky was lit,
The sky was stars all over it,
I stood, I knew not why,
Without a wish, without a will,
I stood upon that silent hill
And stared into the sky until
My eyes were blind with stars and still
I stared into the sky
Poems (1917) "Song of Honour"

When stately ships are twirled and spun
Like whipping tops and help there's none
And mighty ships ten thousand ton
Go down like lumps of lead
Poems (1917) "Song of Honour"

'Twould ring the bells of Heaven
The wildest peal for years,
If Parson lost his senses
And people came to theirs,
And he and they together
Knelt down with angry prayers
For tamed and shabby tigers
And dancing dogs and bears,
And wretched, blind, pit ponies,
And little hunted hares
Poems (1917) "Bells of Heaven"

See an old unhappy bull,
Sick in soul and body both,
Slouching in the undergrowth
Of the forest beautiful,
Banished from the herd he led,
Bulls and cows a thousand head
Poems (1917) "The Bull"

Reason has moons, but moons not hers,

Lie mirror'd on her sea,
Confounding her astronomers,
But, O! delighting me
Poems (1917) "Reason Has Moons"

8.77 Herbert Hoover

1874-1964

Older men declare war. But it is youth who must fight and die. And it is youth who must inherit the tribulation, the sorrow, and the triumphs that are the aftermath of war
Speech at the Republican National Convention, Chicago, 27 June 1944, in Addresses upon the American Road (1946) p. 254.

Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose (i.e. 18th Amendment on Prohibition)
Letter to Senator W. H. Borah, 23 Feb. 1928, in Claudius O. Johnson Borah of Idaho (1936) ch. 21

When the war closed...we were challenged with a peace-time choice between the American system of rugged individualism and a European philosophy of diametrically opposed doctrines—doctrines of paternalism and state socialism
Speech in New York City, 22 Oct. 1928, in New Day (1928) p. 154

Another proposal of our opponents which would wholly alter our American system of life is to reduce the protective tariff to a competitive tariff for revenue....The grass will grow in the streets of a hundred cities, a thousand towns; the weeds will overrun the fields of millions of farms if that protection be taken away
Speech, 31 Oct. 1932, in State Papers of Herbert Hoover (1934) vol. 2, p. 418

8.78 Anthony Hope (Sir Anthony Hope Hawkins)

1863-1933

Economy is going without something you do want in case you should, some day, want something you probably won't want

Dolly Dialogues (1894) no. 12

"You oughtn't to yield to temptation." "Well, somebody must, or the thing becomes absurd," said I

Dolly Dialogues (1894) no. 14

"Bourgeois," I observed, "is an epithet which the riff-raff apply to what is respectable, and the aristocracy to what is decent." "But it's not a nice thing to be, all the same," said Dolly, who is impervious to the most penetrating remark

Dolly Dialogues (1894) no. 17

I wish you would read a little poetry sometimes. Your ignorance cramps my conversation

Dolly Dialogues (1894) no. 22

Anthony Hope—a friend, a true friend, yet pledged always to his own and far more Attic interpretation of life—sat there [at the first night of J

M. Barrie's Peter Pan in 1904] looking primmer and drier at every extravagance, and more and more as if, in his opinion, children should be kept in their right place. When he spoke, his comment was also far more succinct.

"Oh, for an hour of Herod!" he said

Less than the dust, beneath thy Chariot wheel,
Less than the rust, that never stained thy Sword,
Less than the trust thou hast in me, Oh, Lord,
Even less than these!

Less than the weed, that grows beside thy door,
Less than the speed, of hours, spent far from thee,
Less than the need thou hast in life of me
Even less am I

Garden of Kama (1901) "Less than the Dust"

Pale hands I loved beside the Shalimar,
Where are you now? Who lies beneath your spell?
...Pale hands, pink tipped, like lotus buds that float

On those cool waters where we used to dwell,
I would have rather felt you round my throat

Crushing out life; than waving me farewell! Garden of Kama (1901) "Kashmiri Song"

This great College, of this ancient University, has seen some strange sights. It has seen Wordsworth drunk and Porson sober. And here am I, a better poet than Porson, and a better scholar than Wordsworth, betwixt and between

Speech at Trinity College, Cambridge, in G. K. Chesterton Autobiography (1936) ch. 12

If I were the Prince of Peace, I would choose a less provocative Ambassador
In Alan Wood Bertrand Russell: Passionate Sceptic (1957) p. 103

Oh who is that young sinner with the handcuffs on his wrists?
And what has he been after that they groan and shake their fists?
And wherefore is he wearing such a conscience-stricken air?
Oh they're taking him to prison for the colour of his hair.

'Tis a shame to human nature, such a head of hair as his;
In the good old time 'twas hanging for the colour that it is;
Though hanging isn't bad enough and flaying would be fair
For the nameless and abominable colour of his hair
Collected Poems (1939) "Additional Poems" no. 18

That is indeed very good. I shall have to repeat that on the Golden Floor! In Daily Telegraph 21 Feb. 1984 (said to his physician who told him a risqu' story to cheer him up just before he died)

The Grizzly Bear is huge and wild;
He has devoured the infant child
The infant child is not aware
He has been eaten by the bear

These, in the day when heaven was falling,
The hour when earth's foundations fled,
Followed their mercenary calling
And took their wages and are dead.

Their shoulders held the sky suspended;
They stood, and earth's foundations stay;
What God abandoned, these defended,
And saved the sum of things for pay
Last Poems (1922) no. 37

For nature, heartless, witless nature,
Will neither care nor know
What stranger's feet may find the meadow
And trespass there and go,
Nor ask amid the dews of morning
If they are mine or no
Last Poems (1922) no. 40

Experience has taught me, when I am shaving of a morning, to keep watch over my thoughts, because, if a line of poetry strays into my memory, my skin bristles so that the razor ceases to act....The seat of this sensation is the pit of the stomach
Lecture at Cambridge, 9 May 1933, The Name and Nature of Poetry (1933) p. 47

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough,
And stands about the woodland ride
Wearing white for Eastertide.

Now, of my threescore years and ten,
Twenty will not come again,
And take from seventy springs a score,
It only leaves me fifty more.

And since to look at things in bloom
Fifty springs are little room,
About the woodlands I will go
To see the cherry hung with snow
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 2

Clay lies still, but blood's a rover;
Breath's a ware that will not keep
Up, lad: when the journey's over
There'll be time enough to sleep

And naked to the hangman's noose
The morning clocks will ring
A neck God made for other use
Than strangling in a string
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 9

When I was one-and-twenty
I heard a wise man say,
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas
But not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies,
But keep your fancy free."
But I was one-and-twenty,
No use to talk to me
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 13

Oh, when I was in love with you,
Then I was clean and brave,
And miles around the wonder grew
How well I did behave.

And now the fancy passes by,
And nothing will remain,
And miles around they'll say that I Am quite myself again
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 18

In summertime on Bredon
The bells they sound so clear;
Round both the shires they ring them
In steeples far and near,
A happy noise to hear.

Here of a Sunday morning
My love and I would lie,
And see the coloured counties,

And hear the larks so high
About us in the sky
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 21

"Come all to church, good people,"--
Oh, noisy bells, be dumb;
I hear you, I will come
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 21

The lads in their hundreds to Ludlow come in for the fair,
There's men from the barn and the forge and the mill and the fold,
The lads for the girls and the lads for the liquor are there,
And there with the rest are the lads that will never be old
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 23

Is my team ploughing,
That I was used to drive
And hear the harness jingle
When I was man alive? Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 27

On Wenlock Edge the wood's in trouble;
His forest fleece the Wrekin heaves;
The wind it plies the saplings double,
And thick on Severn snow the leaves

Speak now, and I will answer;
How shall I help you, say;
Ere to the wind's twelve quarters
I take my endless way
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 32

Into my heart an air that kills
From yon far country blows:
What are those blue remembered hills,
What spires, what farms are those?

That is the land of lost content,
I see it shining plain,
The happy highways where I went
And cannot come again
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 40

And bound for the same bourn as I,
On every road I wandered by,
Trod beside me, close and dear,
The beautiful and death-struck year

Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 50, epigraph

With rue my heart is laden
For golden friends I had,
For many a rose-lipt maiden
And many a lightfoot lad.

By brooks too broad for leaping
The lightfoot boys are laid;
The rose-lipt girls are sleeping
In fields where roses fade
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 54

Say, for what were hop-yards meant,
Or why was Burton built on Trent?
Oh many a peer of England brews
Livelier liquor than the Muse,
And malt does more than Milton can
To justify God's ways to man
Ale, man, ale's the stuff to drink
For fellows whom it hurts to think
Shropshire Lad (1896) no. 62

Oh I have been to Ludlow fair
And left my necktie God knows where,
And carried half-way home, or near,
Pints and quarts of Ludlow beer
Then the world seemed none so bad,
And I myself a sterling lad;
And down in lovely muck I've lain,
Happy till I woke again

Little minds are interested in the extraordinary; great minds in the commonplace
Thousand and One Epigrams (1911) p. 133

One machine can do the work of fifty ordinary men. No machine can do the work of one extraordinary man
Thousand and One Epigrams (1911) p. 151

8.86 Frank McKinney ('Kin') Hubbard

1868-1930

Classic music is th'kind that we keep thinkin'll turn into a tune
Comments of Abe Martin and His Neighbors (1923)

It's no disgrace t'be poor, but it might as well be Short Furrows (1911) p. 42

8.87 L. Ron Hubbard

1911-1986

Hubbard...told us that writing science fiction for about a penny a word was no way to make a living. If you really want to make a million, he said, the quickest way is to start your own religion
Sam Moscowitz recalling Hubbard speaking to the Eastern Science Fiction Association at Newark, New Jersey, in 1947, in B. Corydon and L. Ron Hubbard Jr. L. Ron Hubbard (1987) ch. 3

1902-1967

"It's powerful," he said
"What?"
"That one drop of Negro blood—because just one drop of black blood makes a man coloured. One drop—you are a Negro!" Simple Takes a Wife (1953) p. 85

I, too, sing America.

I am the darker brother
They send me to eat in the kitchen
When company comes
But I laugh,
And eat well,
And grow strong.

Tomorrow
I'll sit at the table
When company comes
Nobody'll dare
Say to me,
"Eat in the kitchen"
Then.

Besides, they'll see how beautiful I am
And be ashamed,--

I, too, am America
Survey Graphic Mar. 1925, "I, Too"

?1886-1957

[Josephine Hull's] stage reminiscences are not the least of her charms
"Shakespeare," she recalls, "is so tiring. You never get a chance to sit down unless you're a king." Time 16 Nov.
1953, p. 90

8.93 Hubert Humphrey

1911-1978

There are not enough jails, not enough policemen, not enough courts to enforce a law not supported by the people
Speech at Williamsburg, 1 May 1965, in New York Times 2 May 1965, sec. 1, p. 34

The right to be heard does not automatically include the right to be taken seriously
Speech to National Student Association at Madison, 23 Aug. 1965, in New York Times 24 Aug. 1965, p. 12

And here we are, just as we ought to be, here we are, the people, here we are in a spirit of dedication, here we are the way politics ought to be in America, the politics of happiness, the politics of purpose and the politics of joy
Speech in Washington, 27 Apr. 1968, in New York Times 28 Apr. 1968, p. 66

8.94 Herman Hupfeld

1894-1951

You must remember this, a kiss is still a kiss,
A sigh is just a sigh;
The fundamental things apply,
As time goes by
As Time Goes By (1931 song)

8.95 Aldous Huxley

1894-1963

Christlike in my behaviour,
Like every good believer,
I imitate the Saviour,
And cultivate a beaver
Antic Hay (1923) ch. 4

There are few who would not rather be taken in adultery than in provincialism
Antic Hay (1923) ch. 10

Official dignity tends to increase in inverse ratio to the importance of the country in which the office is held
Beyond the Mexique Bay (1934) p. 34

The sexophones wailed like melodious cats under the moon
Brave New World (1932) ch. 5

That men do not learn very much from the lessons of history is the most important of all the lessons that history has to teach

Collected Essays (1959) "Case of Voluntary Ignorance"

The proper study of mankind is books
Crome Yellow (1921) ch. 28

Too much consistency is as bad for the mind as it is for the body
Consistency is contrary to nature, contrary to life. The only completely consistent people are the dead
Do What You Will (1929) "Wordsworth in the Tropics"

The end cannot justify the means, for the simple and obvious reason that the means employed determine the nature of the ends produced
Ends and Means (1937) ch. 1

So long as men worship the Caesars and Napoleons, Caesars and Napoleons will duly arise and make them miserable
Ends and Means (1937) ch. 8

Chastity—the most unnatural of all the sexual perversions, he added parenthetically, out of Remy de Gourmont
Eyeless in Gaza (1936) ch. 27

"Death," said Mark Staithe. "It's the only thing we haven't succeeded in completely vulgarizing." Eyeless in Gaza (1936) ch. 31

"Bed," as the Italian proverb succinctly puts it, "is the poor man's opera." Heaven and Hell (1956) p. 41

A million million spermatozoa,
All of them alive:
Out of their cataclysm but one poor Noah
Dare hope to survive.

And among that billion minus one
Might have chanced to be
Shakespeare, another Newton, a new Donne--
But the One was Me
Leda (1920) "Fifth Philosopher's Song"

Beauty for some provides escape,
Who gain a happiness in eyeing
The gorgeous buttocks of the ape
Or Autumn sunsets exquisitely dying
Leda (1920) "Ninth Philosopher's Song"

Then brim the bowl with atrabilious liquor!
We'll pledge our Empire vast across the flood:
For Blood, as all men know, than Water's thicker,
But Water's wider, thank the Lord, than Blood
Leda (1920) "Ninth Philosopher's Song"

Ragtime...but when the wearied Band
Swoons to a waltz, I take her hand,
And there we sit in peaceful calm,
Quietly sweating palm to palm
Leda (1920) "Frascati's"

I can sympathize with people's pains, but not with their pleasures. There is something curiously boring about somebody else's happiness
Limbo (1920) "Cynthia"

After silence, that which comes nearest to expressing the inexpressible is music
Music at Night (1931) p. 17

"And besides," he added, forgetting that several excuses are always less convincing than one, "Lady Edward's inviting an American editor specially for my sake." Point Counter Point (1928) ch. 1

A bad book is as much of a labour to write as a good one; it comes as sincerely from the author's soul
Point Counter Point (1928) ch. 13

There is no substitute for talent. Industry and all the virtues are of no avail
Point Counter Point (1928) ch. 13

Brought up in an epoch when ladies apparently rolled along on wheels, Mr Quarles was peculiarly susceptible to calves
Point Counter Point (1928) ch. 20

Parodies and caricatures are the most penetrating of criticisms
Point Counter Point (1928) ch. 28

That all men are equal is a proposition to which, at ordinary times, no sane human being has ever given his assent
Proper Studies (1927) "The Idea of Equality"

Those who believe that they are exclusively in the right are generally those who achieve something
Proper Studies (1927) "Note on Dogma"

Facts do not cease to exist because they are ignored
Proper Studies (1927) "Note on Dogma"

Experience is not what happens to a man; it is what a man does with what happens to him
Texts and Pretexts (1932) p. 5

Most human beings have an almost infinite capacity for taking things for granted
Themes and Variations (1950) "Variations on a Philosopher"

"There's only one corner of the universe you can be certain of improving, and that's your own self. Your own self," he repeated. So you have to begin there, not outside, not on other people. That comes afterwards, when you've worked on your own corner
Time Must Have a Stop (1945) ch. 7

1828-1906

Luftslotte,--de er st nemme at ty ind i, de. Og nemme at bygge ogst.

Castles in the air—they are so easy to take refuge in. And so easy to build, too

Bygmester Solness (The Master Builder, 1892) act 3

Flertallet har aldrig retten p[å] sin side. Aldrig, siger jeg! Det er en af disse samfundsl[ig]ne, som en fri, t[æ]nkende mand m[å] g[ir]e opr[ø]r imod. Hvem er det, som udg[ør] flertallet af beboerne i et land? Er det de kloge folk, eller er det d[et]s dumme? Jeg taenker, vi f[år] vaere enige om, at dumme mennesker er tilstede i en ganske forskraek kelig overv[æ]ldende majoritet rundt omkring p[å] den hele vide jord. Men det kan da vel, for fanden, aldrig i evighed vaere ret, at de dumme skal herske over de kloge!

The majority never has right on its side. Never I say! That is one of the social lies that a free, thinking man is bound to rebel against. Who makes up the majority in any given country? Is it the wise men or the fools? I think we must agree that the fools are in a terrible overwhelming majority, all the wide world over
En Folkefiende (An Enemy of the People, 1882) act 4

En skulde aldrig ha' sine bedste buxer p[å], n[år] en er ude og strider for frihed og sandhed.

You should never have your best trousers on when you go out to fight for freedom and truth
En Folkefiende (An Enemy of the People, 1882) act 5

Sagen er den, ser I, at den st[ær]keste mand i verden, det er han, som st[år]r mest alene.

The thing is, you see, that the strongest man in the world is the man who stands most alone
En Folkefiende (An Enemy of the People, 1882) act 5

Mor, g[iv] mig solen.

Mother, give me the sun
Gengangere (Ghosts, 1881) act 3

Men, gud sig forbarme,--sligt noget g[ør] man da ikke!

But good God, people don't do such things! Hedda Gabler (1890) act 4

Hvad skal manden v[æ]re? Sig selv, det er mit korte svar.

What ought a man to be? Well, my short answer is "himself." Peer Gynt (1867) act 4

Tar de livsl[ig]nen fra et gennemsnitsmenneske, s[å] tar De lykken fra ham med det samme.

Take the life-lie away from the average man and straight away you take away his happiness
Vildanden (The Wild Duck, 1884) act 5

9.3 Harold L. Ickes

1874-1952

The trouble with Senator Long...is that he is suffering from halitosis of the intellect. That's presuming Emperor Long has an intellect

So don't think you can't think you can
Weekend Book (1928) "On Monsieur Cou"

9.8 William Ralph Inge (Dean Inge)

1860-1954

The aim of education is the knowledge not of facts but of values
"The Training of the Reason" in A. C. Benson (ed.) Cambridge Essays on Education (1917) ch. 2

The enemies of Freedom do not argue; they shout and they shoot
End of an Age (1948) ch. 4

The effect of boredom on a large scale in history is underestimated. It is a main cause of revolutions, and would soon bring to an end all the static Utopias and the farmyard civilization of the Fabians
End of an Age (1948) ch. 6

To become a popular religion, it is only necessary for a superstition to enslave a philosophy
Idea of Progress (Romanes Lecture delivered at Oxford, 27 May 1920) p. 9

Many people believe that they are attracted by God, or by Nature, when they are only repelled by man
More Lay Thoughts of a Dean (1931) pt. 4, ch. 1

It takes in reality only one to make a quarrel. It is useless for the sheep to pass resolutions in favour of vegetarianism, while the wolf remains of a different opinion
Outspoken Essays: First Series (1919) "Patriotism"

The nations which have put mankind and posterity most in their debt have been small states—Israel, Athens, Florence, Elizabethan England
Outspoken Essays: Second Series (1922) "State, visible and invisible"

A man may build himself a throne of bayonets, but he cannot sit on it; and he cannot avow that the bayonets are meant to keep his own subjects quiet
Philosophy of Plotinus (1923) vol. 2, lecture 22

Literature flourishes best when it is half a trade and half an art
Victorian Age (Rede Lecture delivered at Cambridge, 1922) p. 49

The common cormorant (or shag)
Lays eggs inside a paper bag,
You follow the idea, no doubt?
It's to keep the lightning out.

But what these unobservant birds
Have never thought of, is that herds
Of wandering bears might come with buns
And steal the bags to hold the crumbs
Exhumations (1966) "Common Cormorant"

I am a camera with its shutter open, quite passive, recording, not thinking. Recording the man shaving at the window opposite and the woman in the kimono washing her hair. Some day, all this will have to be developed, carefully printed, fixed

10.3 Mick Jagger and Keith Richard (Keith Richards)

Mick Jagger 1943- Keith Richard 1943-

It's only rock 'n' roll
Title of song (1974)

Ev'rywhere I hear the sound of marching, charging feet, oh, boy,
'Cause summer's here and the time is oh, right for fighting in the street, boy
But what can a poor boy do
Except to sing for a rock 'n' roll band,
'Cause in sleepy London town
There's just no place for street fighting man! Street Fighting Man (1968 song)

10.4 Henry James

1843-1916

The ever-impertunate murmur, "Dramatize it, dramatize it!" Altar of the Dead (1909 ed.) preface

The terrible fluidity of self-revelation
Ambassadors (1909 ed.) preface

Live all you can; it's a mistake not to. It doesn't so much matter what you do in particular, so long as you have your life. If you haven't had that, what have you had? Ambassadors (1903) bk. 5, ch. 11

The deep well of unconscious cerebration
The American (1909 ed.) preface

The historian, essentially, wants more documents than he can really use; the dramatist only wants more liberties than he can really take
Aspern Papers (1909 ed.) preface

Summer afternoon—summer afternoon; to me those have always been the two most beautiful words in the English language
In Edith Wharton Backward Glance (1934) ch. 10

He [Henry James] is said to have told his old friend Lady Prothero, when she saw him after the first stroke, that in the very act of falling (he was dressing at the time) he heard in the room a voice which was distinctly, it seemed, not his own saying: "So here it is at last, the distinguished thing!" Edith Wharton Backward Glance (1934) ch. 14

To kill a human being is, after all, the least injury you can do him
Complete Tales (1962) vol. 1 "My Friend Bingham" (1867 short story)

We work in the dark—we do what we can—we give what we have. Our doubt is our passion and our passion is our task. The rest is the madness of art
Complete Tales (1964) vol. 9 "Middle Years" (1893 short story)

Vereker's secret, my dear man—the general intention of his books: the string the pearls were strung on, the buried treasure, the figure in the carpet

It takes a great deal of history to produce a little literature
Hawthorne (1879) ch. 1

Whatever question there may be of his [Thoreau's] talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one; but it was eminently personal. He was imperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial—he was parochial
Hawthorne (1879) ch. 4

Cats and monkeys—monkeys and cats—all human life is there! Madonna of the Future (1879) vol. 1, p. 59 ("All human life is there" was used by Maurice Smelt as an advertising slogan for the News of the World in the late 1950s)

They have fairly faced the full, the monstrous demonstration that Tennyson was not Tennysonian
Middle Years (1917 autobiography) ch. 6

The only reason for the existence of a novel is that it does attempt to represent life
Partial Portraits (1888) "Art of Fiction"

The only obligation to which in advance we may hold a novel, without incurring the accusation of being arbitrary, is that it be interesting
Partial Portraits (1888) "Art of Fiction"

Experience is never limited, and it is never complete; it is an immense sensibility, a kind of huge spider-web of the finest silken threads suspended in the chamber of consciousness, and catching every air-borne particle in its tissue
Partial Portraits (1888) "Art of Fiction"

What is character but the determination of incident? What is incident but the illustration of character? What is either a picture or a novel that is not character? Partial Portraits (1888) "Art of Fiction"

We must grant the artist his subject, his idea, his donn'e: our criticism is applied only to what he makes of it
Partial Portraits (1888) "Art of Fiction"

I don't care anything about reasons, but I know what I like Portrait of a Lady (1881) vol. 2, ch. 5. Cf. Max Beerbohm 23:14

I didn't, of course, stay her hand—there never is in such cases "time"; and I had once more the full demonstration of the fatal futility of Fact
Spoils of Poynton (1909 ed.) preface

We were alone with the quiet day, and his little heart, dispossessed, had stopped
Turn of the Screw (1898) p. 169

10.5 William James

1842-1910

Man, biologically considered, and whatever else he may be into the bargain, is simply the most formidable of all the beasts of prey, and, indeed, the only one that preys systematically on its own species
Atlantic Monthly Dec. 1904, p. 845

I now perceive one immense omission in my Psychology,—the deepest principle of Human Nature is the craving to be appreciated, and I left it out altogether from the book, because I had never had it gratified till now
Letter to his class at Radcliffe College, 6 Apr. 1896, in Letters (1920) vol. 2, p. 33

The moral flabbiness born of the exclusive worship of the bitch-goddess success. That—with the squalid cash interpretation put on the word success—is our national disease
Letter to H. G. Wells, 11 Sept. 1906, in Letters (1920) vol. 2, p. 260

Real culture lives by sympathies and admirations, not by dislikes and disdains—under all misleading wrappings it pounces unerringly upon the human core
McClure's Magazine Feb. 1908, p. 422

So long as antimilitarists propose no substitute for war's disciplinary function, no moral equivalent of war, analogous, as one might say, to the mechanical equivalent of heat, so long they fail to realize the full inwardness of the situation

Memories and Studies (1911) "The Moral Equivalent of War" p. 283

There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision

Principles of Psychology (1890) vol. 1, ch. 4

The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook

Principles of Psychology (1890) vol. 2, ch. 22

The first thing to learn in intercourse with others is non-interference with their own peculiar ways of being happy, provided those ways do not assume to interfere by violence with ours

Talks to Teachers (1899) "What makes a Life Significant?"

If merely "feeling good" could decide, drunkenness would be the supremely valid human experience

Varieties of Religious Experience (1902) lecture 1, p. 16

An idea, to be suggestive, must come to the individual with the force of a revelation

Varieties of Religious Experience (1902) lectures 4 and 5, p. 113

There is no worse lie than a truth misunderstood by those who hear it

Varieties of Religious Experience (1902) lectures 14 and 15, p. 355

10.6 Randall Jarrell

1914-1965

One of the most obvious facts about grown-ups, to a child, is that they have forgotten what it is like to be a child

Introduction to Christina Stead The Man Who Loved Children (1965) p. xxvi

10.7 Douglas Jay

1907-

It was Bert Amey who asked me to send him a brief rhyming North Battersea slogan [for the 1946 by-election]. I suggested: "Fair Shares for All, is Labour's Call"; and from this by-election "Fair Shares for All" spread in a few years round the country

Change and Fortune (1980) ch. 7

For in the case of nutrition and health, just as in the case of education, the gentleman in Whitehall really does know better what is good for people than the people know themselves

Socialist Case (1939) ch. 30

10.8 Sir James Jeans

1877-1946

Taking a very gloomy view of the future of the human race, let us suppose that it can only expect to survive for two thousand million years longer, a period about equal to the past age of the earth. Then, regarded as a being destined to live for three-score years and ten, humanity, although it has been born in a house seventy years old, is itself only three days old

Eos (1928) p. 12

Life exists in the universe only because the carbon atom possesses certain exceptional properties

Mysterious Universe (1930) ch. 1

From the intrinsic evidence of his creation, the Great Architect of the Universe now begins to appear as a pure mathematician

Mysterious Universe (1930) ch. 5

10.9 Patrick Jenkin

1926-

People can clean their teeth in the dark, use the top of the stove instead of the oven, all sorts of savings, but they must use less electricity
Radio broadcast, 15 Jan. 1974, in The Times 16 Jan. 1974

10.10 Rt. Revd David Jenkins (Bishop of Durham)

1925-

I wouldn't put it past God to arrange a virgin birth if he wanted to, but I very much doubt if he would—because it seems to be contrary to the way in which he deals with persons and brings his wonders out of natural personal relationships
In Church Times 4 May 1984

The withdrawal of an imported, elderly American [Ian MacGregor] to leave a reconciling opportunity for some local product is surely neither dishonourable nor improper
In The Times 22 Sept. 1984

10.11 Roy Jenkins (Baron Jenkins of Hillhead)

1920-

The politics of the left and centre of this country are frozen in an out-of-date mould which is bad for the political and economic health of Britain and increasingly inhibiting for those who live within the mould
Can it be broken? Speech to Parliamentary Press Gallery, 9 June 1980, in The Times 10 June 1980

10.12 Paul Jennings

1918-1989

I am prepared to testify on oath that on the portico pillars of one building there is a bronze office sign which simply says: ACTIVATED SLUDGE
Oddly Enough (1950) "Activated Sludge"

Clark-Trimble arranged four hundred pieces of carpet in ascending degrees of quality, from coarse matting to priceless Chinese silk. Pieces of toast and marmalade, graded, weighed, and measured, were then dropped on each piece of carpet, and the marmalade-downwards incidence was statistically analysed. The toast fell right-side-up every time on the cheap carpet...and it fell marmalade-downwards every time on the Chinese silk
Town and Country Sept. 1949, "Report on Resistentialism"

10.13 Jerome K. Jerome

1859-1927

It is always the best policy to speak the truth—unless, of course, you are an exceptionally good liar
The Idler Feb. 1892, p. 118

It is impossible to enjoy idling thoroughly unless one has plenty of work to do
Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow (1886) "On Being Idle"

Love is like the measles; we all have to go through it
Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow (1886) "On Being in Love"

We drink one another's healths, and spoil our own
Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow (1886) "On Eating and Drinking"

The world must be getting old, I think; it dresses so very soberly now
Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow (1886) "On Dress and Deportment"

I did not intend to write a funny book, at first. I did not know I was a humorist. I have never been sure about it. In the middle ages, I should probably have gone about preaching and got myself burnt or hanged
My Life and Times (1926) ch. 6

The passing of the third floor back
Title of story (1907) and play (1910)

I want a house that has got over all its troubles; I don't want to spend the rest of my life bringing up a young and inexperienced house
They and I (1909) ch. 11

It is a most extraordinary thing, but I never read a patent medicine advertisement without being impelled to the conclusion that I am suffering from the particular disease therein dealt with in its most virulent form
Three Men in a Boat (1889) ch. 1

But there, everything has its drawbacks, as the man said when his mother-in-law died, and they came down upon him for the funeral expenses
Three Men in a Boat (1889) ch. 3

I like work: it fascinates me. I can sit and look at it for hours. I love to keep it by me: the idea of getting rid of it nearly breaks my heart
Three Men in a Boat (1889) ch. 15

10.16 Pope John XXIII (Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli)

1881-1963

If civil authorities legislate for or allow anything that is contrary to that order and therefore contrary to the will of God, neither the laws made or the authorizations granted can be binding on the consciences of the citizens, since God has more right to be obeyed than man
Pacem in Terris (1963) p. 142

The social progress, order, security and peace of each country are necessarily connected with the social progress, order, security and peace of all other countries
Pacem in Terris (1963) p. 150

John XXIII said that during the first months of his pontificate he often woke during the night, thinking himself still a cardinal and worried over a difficult decision to be made, and he would say to himself: "I'll talk it over with the Pope!" Then he would remember where he was. "But I'm the Pope!" he said to himself. After which he would conclude: "Well I'll talk it over with Our Lord!" Henri Fesquet Wit and Wisdom of Good Pope John (1964) p. 59

Anybody can be pope; the proof of this is that I have become one

Speech at University of Michigan, 22 May 1964, in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Lyndon B. Johnson 1963-64 vol. 1, p. 704

We Americans know, although others appear to forget, the risks of spreading conflict. We still seek no wider war
Speech on radio and television, 4 Aug. 1964, in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Lyndon B. Johnson 1963-64 vol. 2, p. 927

We are not about to send American boys 9 or 10,000 miles away from home to do what Asian boys ought to be doing for themselves
Speech at Akron University, 21 Oct. 1964, in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Lyndon B. Johnson 1963-64 vol. 2, p. 1391

Extremism in the pursuit of the Presidency is an unpardonable vice Moderation in the affairs of the nation is the highest virtue
Speech in New York, 31 Oct. 1964, in Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: Lyndon B. Johnson 1963-64 vol. 2, p. 1559

A President's hardest task is not to do what is right, but to know what is right

10.21 Al Jolson

1886-1950

It can be revealed for the first time that it was in San Francisco [in 1906] that Al Jolson first uttered his immortal slogan, "You ain't heard nuttin' yet!" One night at the cafe he had just finished a song when a deafening burst of noise from a building project across the street drowned out the applause. At the top of his lungs, Jolson screamed, "You think that's noise—you ain't heard nuttin' yet!" And he proceeded to deliver an encore which for sheer blasting power put to everlasting shame all the decibels of noise the carpenters, the brick-layers and the drillers could scare up between them

1882-1941

Yes, the newspapers were right: snow was general all over Ireland. It was falling on every part of the dark central plain, on the treeless hills, falling softly upon the Bog of Allen and, farther westward, softly falling into the dark mutinous Shannon waves. It was falling, too, upon every part of the lonely churchyard on the hill where Michael Furey lay buried. It lay thickly drifted on the crooked crosses and headstones, on the spears of the little gate, on the barren thorns. His soul swooned slowly as he heard the snow falling faintly through the universe and faintly falling, like the descent of their last end, upon all the living and the dead

Eine gewissermassen oberflächliche Schicht des Unbewussten ist zweifellos persönlich. Wir nennen sie das persönliche Unbewusste. Dieses ruht aber auf einer tieferen Schicht, welche nicht mehr persönlicher Erfahrung und Erwerbung entstammt, sondern angeboren ist. Diese tiefere Schicht ist das sogenannte kollektive UnbewussteDie Inhalte des persönlichen Unbewussten sind in der Hauptsache die sogenannten gefühlsbetonten KomplexeDie Inhalte des kollektiven Unbewussten dagegen sind die sogenannten Archetypen.

A more or less superficial layer of the unconscious is undoubtedly personal. I call it the personal unconscious. But this personal unconscious rests upon a deeper layer, which does not derive from personal experience and is not a personal acquisition but is inborn. This deeper layer I call the collective unconscious....The contents of the personal unconscious are chiefly the feeling-toned complexes....The contents of the collective unconscious, on the other hand, are known as archetypes

We stand today on the edge of a new frontier—the frontier of the 1960s—a frontier of unknown opportunities and perils—a frontier of unfulfilled hopes and threats. Woodrow Wilson's New Freedom promised our nation a new political and economic framework. Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal promised security and succor to those in need. But the New Frontier of which I speak is not a set of promises—it is a set of challenges. It sums up not what I intend to offer the American people, but what I intend to ask of them

Speech accepting Democratic nomination in Los Angeles, 15 July 1960, in Vital Speeches 1 Aug. 1960, p. 611

Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans—born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage—and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world.

Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty

Inaugural address, 20 Jan. 1961, in Vital Speeches 1 Feb. 1961, p. 226

All this will not be finished in the first 100 days. Nor will it be finished in the first 1,000 days, nor in the life of this Administration, nor even perhaps in our lifetime on this planet. But let us begin

Inaugural address, 20 Jan. 1961, in Vital Speeches 1 Feb. 1961, p. 227

Now the trumpet summons us again—not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need—not as a call to battle, though embattled we are—but a call to bear the burden of a long twilight struggle, year in and year out, "rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation"—a struggle against the common enemies of man: tyranny, poverty, disease and war itself

Inaugural address, 20 Jan. 1961, in Vital Speeches 1 Feb. 1961, p. 227

And so, my fellow Americans: ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country.
My fellow citizens of the world: ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man

Inaugural address, 20 Jan. 1961, in Vital Speeches 1 Feb. 1961, p. 227

Cf. Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., speech at Keene, New Hampshire, 30 May 1884: “We pause to...recall what our country has done for each of us and to ask ourselves what we can do for our country in return.”

Letter to Duncan Grant, 15 Dec. 1917, in British Library Add. MSS 57931 fo. 119

He [Clemenceau] felt about France what Pericles felt of Athens—unique value in her, nothing else mattering; but his theory of politics was Bismarck's. He had one illusion—France; and one disillusion—mankind, including Frenchmen, and his colleagues not least

Economic Consequences of the Peace (1919) ch. 3

Lenin was right. There is no subtler, no surer means of overturning the existing basis of society than to debauch the currency. The process engages all the hidden forces of economic law on the side of destruction, and does it in a manner which not one man in a million is able to diagnose
Economic Consequences of the Peace (1919) ch. 6

A study of the history of opinion is a necessary preliminary to the emancipation of the mind. I do not know which makes a man more conservative—to know nothing but the present, or nothing but the past
End of Laissez-Faire (1926) pt. 1

Marxian Socialism must always remain a portent to the historians of Opinion—how a doctrine so illogical and so dull can have exercised so powerful and enduring an influence over the minds of men, and, through them, the events of history
End of Laissez-Faire (1926) pt. 3

The important thing for Government is not to do things which individuals are doing already, and to do them a little better or a little worse; but to do those things which at present are not done at all
End of Laissez-Faire (1926) pt. 4

I think that Capitalism, wisely managed, can probably be made more efficient for attaining economic ends than any alternative system yet in sight, but that in itself it is in many ways extremely objectionable
End of Laissez-Faire (1926) pt. 5

How can I convey to the reader, who does not know him, any just impression of this extraordinary figure of our time, this syren, this goat-footed bard, this half-human visitor to our age from the hag-ridden magic and enchanted woods of Celtic antiquity? One catches in his company that flavour of final purposelessness, inner irresponsibility, existence outside or away from our Saxon good and evil, mixed with cunning, remorselessness, love of power, that lend fascination, enthralment, and terror to the fair-seeming magicians of North European folklore
Essays in Biography (1933) "Mr Lloyd George"

It is better that a man should tyrannize over his bank balance than over his fellow-citizens
General Theory of Employment (1936) ch. 24

The ideas of economists and political philosophers, both when they are right and when they are wrong, are more powerful than is commonly understood. Indeed the world is ruled by little else. Practical men, who believe themselves to be quite exempt from any intellectual influences, are usually the slaves of some defunct economist. Madmen in authority, who hear voices in the air, are distilling their frenzy from some academic scribbler of a few years back. I am sure that the power of vested interests is vastly exaggerated compared with the gradual encroachment of ideas. Not, indeed, immediately, but after a certain interval; for in the field of economic and political philosophy there are not many who are influenced by new theories after they are twenty-five or thirty years of age, so that the ideas which civil servants and politicians and even agitators apply to current events are not likely to be the newest. But soon or late, it is ideas, not vested interests, which are dangerous for good or evil
General Theory of Employment (1936; 1947 ed.) ch. 24

I remember in my youth asking Maynard Keynes, "What do you think happens to Mr Lloyd George when he is alone in the room?" And Keynes replied, "When he is alone in the room there is nobody there." Lady Violet Bonham-Carter Impact of Personality in Politics (Romanes Lecture, 1963) p. 6

I have almost reached the regrettable conclusion that the Negro's great stumbling block in the stride toward freedom is not the White Citizens Councillor or the Ku Klux Klanner but the white moderate who is more devoted to order than to justice; who prefers a negative peace which is the absence of tension to a positive peace which is the presence of justice

I want to be the white man's brother, not his brother-in-law

Now, I say to you today my friends, even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed:--"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the people's injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character

Speech at Civil Rights March in Washington, 28 Aug. 1963, in New York Times 29 Aug. 1963, p. 21

Well, I don't know what will happen now. We've been to the mountain top. I won't mind. Like anybody, I would like to have a long life. Longevity has its place. But I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will. And he's allowed me to go up to the mountain. And I've looked over, and I've seen the promised land. I may not get there with you, but I want you to know tonight that we as a people will get to the promised land. So I'm happy tonight. I'm not worried about anything. I'm not fearing any man. Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord

Why am I the first Kinnock in a thousand generations to be able to get to a university? Why is Glenys the first woman in her family in a thousand generations to be able to get to a university? Was it because all our predecessors were thick? Did they lack talent? Those people who could sing and play and write poetry? Those people who could make wonderful beautiful things with their hands? Those people who could dream dreams, see visions? Was it because they were weak, those people who could work eight hours underground and then come up and play football, weak? Does anybody really think that they didn't get what we had because they didn't have the talent or the strength or the endurance or the commitment? Of course not. It's because they didn't have a platform on which they could stand

"We be one blood, thou and I," Mowgli answered. "I take my life from thee to-night. My kill shall be thy kill if ever thou art hungry, O Kaa." Jungle Book (1894) "Kaa's Hunting"

Brother, thy tail hangs down behind! The Jungle Book (1894) "Road Song of the Bandar-Log"

You must not forget the suspenders, Best Beloved
Just So Stories (1902) "How the Whale got his Throat"

Then the Whale stood up on his Tail and said, "I'm hungry." And the small 'Stute Fish said in a small 'stute voice, "Noble and generous Cetacean, have you ever tasted Man?" "No," said the Whale. "What is it like?" "Nice," said the small 'Stute Fish. "Nice but nubbly." Just So Stories (1902) "How the Whale got his Throat"

He had his Mummy's leave to paddle, or else he would never have done it, because he was a man of infinite-resource-and-sagacity
Just So Stories (1902) "How the Whale got his Throat"

The Camel's hump is an ugly lump
Which well you may see at the Zoo;
But uglier yet is the hump we get
From having too little to do
Just So Stories (1902) "How the Camel got his Hump"

We get the hump--
Cameelious hump--
The hump that is black and blue! Just So Stories (1902) "How the Camel got his Hump"

The cure for this ill is not to sit still,
Or frowst with a book by the fire;
But to take a large hoe and a shovel also,
And dig till you gently perspire
Just So Stories (1902) "How the Camel got his Hump"

But there was one Elephant—a new Elephant—an Elephant's Child—who was full of 'satiabie curtiosity, and that means he asked ever so many questions
Just So Stories (1902) "The Elephant's Child"

Then Kolokolo Bird said, with a mournful cry, "Go to the banks of the great grey-green, greasy Limpopo River, all set about with fever-trees, and find out." Just So Stories (1902) "The Elephant's Child"

Then the Elephant's Child put his head down close to the Crocodile's musky, tusky mouth, and the Crocodile caught him by his little nose. At this, O Best Beloved, the Elephant's Child was much annoyed, and he said, speaking through his nose, like this, "Led go! You are hurtig be!" Just So Stories (1902) "The Elephant's Child"

I keep six honest serving-men
(They taught me all I knew);
Their names are What and Why and When
And How and Where and Who
Just So Stories (1902) "The Elephant's Child"

Yes, weekly from Southampton,
Great steamers, white and gold,
Go rolling down to Rio
(Roll down—roll down to Rio!)
And I'd like to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old! Just So Stories (1902) "Beginning of the Armadilloes"

But the wildest of all the wild animals was the Cat. He walked by himself, and all places were alike to him
Just So Stories (1902) "The Cat that Walked by Himself"

And he went back through the Wet Wild Woods, waving his wild tail and walking by his wild lone. But he never told anybody
Just So Stories (1902) "The Cat that Walked by Himself"

When [Max] Aitken acquired the Daily Express his political views seemed to Kipling to become more and more inconsistent, and one day Kipling asked him what he was really up to. Aitken is supposed to have replied: "What I want is power. Kiss 'em one day and kick 'em the next"; and so on. "I see," said Kipling. "Power without responsibility: the prerogative of the harlot throughout the ages." So, many years later, when [Stanley] Baldwin deemed it necessary to deal sharply with such lords of the press, he obtained leave of his cousin [Kipling] to borrow that telling phrase, which he used to some effect on the 18th March, 1931, at...the old Queen's Hall in Langham Place

Speech by Earl Baldwin to the Kipling Society, 5 Oct. 1971, in Kipling Journal Dec. 1971

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine.

If I were damned of body and soul,
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine

Of all the trees that grow so fair,
Old England to adorn,
Greater are none beneath the Sun,
Than Oak, and Ash, and Thorn
Puck of Pook's Hill (1906) "Tree Song"

England shall bide till Judgement Tide
By Oak, and Ash, and Thorn! Puck of Pook's Hill (1906) "Tree Song"

What is a woman that you forsake her,
And the hearth-fire and the home-acre,
To go with the old grey Widow-maker? Puck of Pook's Hill (1906) "Harp Song of the Dane Women"

If you wake at midnight, and hear a horse's feet,
Don't go drawing back the blind, or looking in the street,
Them that asks no questions isn't told a lie
Watch the wall, my darling, while the Gentlemen go by!
Five and twenty ponies,
Trotting through the dark--
Brandy for the Parson,
'Baccy for the Clerk;
Laces for a lady, letters for a spy,
Watch the wall, my darling, while the Gentlemen go by! Puck of Pook's Hill (1906) "Smuggler's Song"

Land of our birth, we pledge to thee
Our love and toil in the years to be;
When we are grown and take our place,
As men and women with our race
Puck of Pook's Hill (1906) "Children's Song"

Teach us Delight in simple things,
And Mirth that has no bitter springs;
Forgiveness free of evil done,
And Love to all men 'neath the sun! Puck of Pook's Hill (1906) "Children's Song"

The tumult and the shouting dies--
The captains and the kings depart--
Still stands Thine ancient Sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget! Recessional, in The Times 17 July 1897

Far-called our navies melt away--
On dune and headland sinks the fire--
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh, and Tyre! Recessional, in The Times 17 July 1897

If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe--
Such boasting as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the Law

They shut the road through the woods
Seventy years ago
Weather and rain have undone it again,

And now you would never know
There was once a road through the woods
Rewards and Fairies (1910) "Way through the Woods"

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;
If you can dream—and not make dreams your master;
If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim,
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two imposters just the same..
Rewards and Fairies (1910) "If—"

If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss..
Rewards and Fairies (1910) "If—"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son! Rewards and Fairies (1910) "If—"

One man in a thousand, Solomon says,
Will stick more close than a brother
Rewards and Fairies (1910) "The Thousandth Man"

The female of the species is more deadly than the male
Rudyard Kipling's Verse (1919) "The Female of the Species"

As it will be in the future, it was at the birth of Man--
There are only four things certain since Social Progress began:--
That the Dog returns to his Vomit and the Sow returns to her Mire,
And the burnt Fool's bandaged finger goes wabbling back to the Fire
Rudyard Kipling's Verse (1927) "The Gods of the Copybook Headings"

England's on the anvil—hear the hammers ring--
Clanging from the Severn to the Tyne!
Never was a blacksmith like our Norman King--
England's being hammered, hammered, hammered into line! Rudyard Kipling's Verse (1927) "The Anvil"

Now this is the Law of the Jungle—as old and as true as the sky;
And the Wolf that shall keep it may prosper, but the Wolf that shall break it must die
Second Jungle Book (1895) "The Law of the Jungle"

Keep ye the law—be swift in all obedience--
Clear the land of evil, drive the road and bridge the ford
Make ye sure to each his own
That he reap where he hath sown;
By the peace among our peoples let men know we serve the Lord! The Seven Seas (1896) "A Song of the English"

We have fed our sea for a thousand years
And she calls us, still unfed,
Though there's never a wave of all her waves
But marks our English dead:
We have strawed our best to the weed's unrest

To the shark and sheering gull
If blood be the price of admiralty,
Lord God, we ha' paid in full! The Seven Seas (1896) "The Song of the Dead"

And Ye take mine honour from me if Ye take away the sea! The Seven Seas (1896) "Last Chantey"

The Liner she's a lady, an' she never looks nor 'eeds--
The Man-o'-War 's 'er 'usband, 'an 'e gives 'er all she needs;
But, oh, the little cargo boats that sail the wet seas roun',
They're just the same as you 'an me a-plyin' up and down! The Seven Seas (1896) "The Liner She's a Lady"

When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,
He'd 'eard men sing by land an' sea;
An' what he thought 'e might require,

I've taken my fun where I've found it,
An' now I must pay for my fun,
For the more you 'ave known o' the others
The less will you settle to one;
An' the end of it's sittin' and thinkin',
An' dreamin' Hell-fires to see;
So be warned by my lot (which I know you will not),
An' learn about women from me! The Seven Seas (1896) "The Ladies"

An' I learned about women from 'er! The Seven Seas (1896) "The Ladies"

When you get to a man in the case,
They're like as a row of pins--
For the Colonel 's Lady an' Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins! The Seven Seas (1896) "The Ladies"

The 'eathen in 'is blindness bows down to wood an' stone;
'E don't obey no orders unless they is 'is own;
'E keeps 'is side-arms awful: 'e leaves 'em all about,
An' then comes up the Regiment an' pokes the 'eathen out
The Seven Seas (1896) "The 'Eathen"

The 'eathen in 'is blindness must end where 'e began
But the backbone of the Army is the non-commissioned man! The Seven Seas (1896) "The 'Eathen"

And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame,
But each for the joy of the working, and each, in his separate star,
Shall draw the Thing as he sees It for the God of Things as They are! The Seven Seas (1896) "When Earth's Last Picture is Painted"

Words are, of course, the most powerful drug used by mankind
Speech, 14 Feb. 1923, in The Times 15 Feb. 1923

Mr Raymond Martin, beyond question, was born in a gutter, and bred in a Board-School, where they played marbles. He was further (I give the barest handful from great store) a Flopshus Cad, an Outrageous Stinker, a Jelly-bellied Flag-flapper (this was Stalky's contribution), and several other things which it is not seemly to put down

Take up the White Man's burden--
Send forth the best ye breed--
Go, bind your sons to exile
To serve your captives' need;
To wait, in heavy harness,
On fluttered folk and wild--
Your new-caught, sullen peoples,
Half devil and half child

1850-1916

You are ordered abroad as a soldier of the King to help our French comrades against the invasion of a common enemy. You have to perform a task which will need your courage, your energy, your patience. Remember that the honour of the British Army depends on your individual conduct. It will be your duty not only to set an example of discipline and perfect steadiness under fire, but also to maintain the most friendly relations with those whom you are helping in this struggle. The operations in which you are engaged will, for the most part, take place in a friendly country, and you can do your own country no better service than in showing yourself in France and Belgium in the true character of a British soldier.

Be invariably courteous, considerate, and kind. Never do anything likely to injure or destroy property, and always look upon looting as a disgraceful act. You are sure to meet with a welcome and to be trusted; your conduct must justify that welcome and that trust.

Your duty cannot be done unless your health is sound. So keep constantly on your guard against any excesses. In this new experience you may find temptations both in wine and women. You must entirely resist both temptations, and, while treating all women with perfect courtesy, you should avoid any intimacy. Do your duty bravely. Fear God. Honour the King

12.1 Henry Labouchere

1831-1912

Mr Labouchere's jest about Mr Gladstone laying upon Providence the responsibility of always placing the ace of trumps up his sleeve was a good one. In one of his private letters I find the quip worded a little more pungently. "Who cannot refrain," he says, referring to the then Prime Minister, "from perpetually bringing an ace down his sleeve, even when he has only to play fair to win the trick." A. L. Thorold Life of Henry Labouchere (1913) ch. 15. Cf. Earl Curzon's Modern Parliamentary Eloquence (1913) p. 25 "I recall a phrase of that incorrigible cynic Labouchere, alluding to Mr Gladstone's frequent appeals to a higher power, that he did not object to the old man always having a card up his sleeve, but he did object to his insinuating that the Almighty had placed it there."

Who lets the girl down before
The hero arrives, the chap
Who's yellow and keeps the store,
Seem far too familiar. Get stewed:
Books are a load of crap
The Whitsun Weddings (1964) "Study of Reading Habits"

Life is first boredom, then fear

Whether or not we use it, it goes,
And leaves what something hidden from us chose,
And age, and then the only end of age
The Whitsun Weddings (1964) "Dockery & Son"

Time has transfigured them into Untruth. The stone fidelity
They hardly meant has come to be
Their final blazon, and to prove
Our almost-instinct almost true:
What will survive of us is love

Keep right on to the end of the road,
Keep right on to the end
Tho' the way be long, let your heart be strong,
Keep right on round the bend
Tho' you're tired and weary,
Still journey on
Till you come to your happy abode,
Where all you love you've been dreaming of
Will be there at the end of the road
The End of the Road (1924 song)

I love a lassie, a bonnie, bonnie lassie,
She's as pure as the lily in the dell
She's as sweet as the heather, the bonnie bloomin' heather--
Mary, ma Scotch Bluebell
I Love a Lassie (1905 song)

A snake came to my water-trough
On a hot, hot day, and I in pyjamas for the heat,
To drink there
Birds, Beasts and Flowers (1923) "Snake"

And I thought of the albatross,
And I wished he would come back, my snake
For he seemed to me again like a king,
Like a king in exile, uncrowned in the underworld,
Now due to be crowned again
And so, I missed my chance with one of the lords
Of life
And I have something to expiate:
A pettiness
Birds, Beasts and Flowers (1923) "Snake"

Curse the blasted, jelly-boned swines, the slimy, the belly-wriggling invertebrates, the miserable sodding rotters, the flaming sods, the snivelling, dribbling, dithering, palsied, pulse-less lot that make up England today. They've got white of egg in their veins, and their spunk is that watery it's a marvel they can breed. They can nothing but frog-spawn—the gibberers! God, how I hate them! Letter to J. Middleton Murry, 2 Feb. 1923, in Collected Letters (1962) vol. 2, p. 736

The autumn always gets me badly, as it breaks into colours. I want to go south, where there is no autumn, where the cold doesn't crouch over one like a snow-leopard waiting to pounce. The heart of the North is dead, and the fingers of cold are corpse fingers
Letter to J. Middleton Murry, 3 Oct. 1924, in Collected Letters (1962) vol. 2, p. 812

Pornography is the attempt to insult sex, to do dirt on it
Phoenix (1936) "Pornography and Obscenity" ch. 3

The very first copy of The White Peacock that was ever sent out, I put into my mother's hands when she was dying. She looked at the outside, and then at the title-page, and then at me, with darkening eyes. And though she loved me so much, I think she doubted whether it could be much of a book, since no one more important than I had written it. Somewhere, in the helpless privacies of her being, she had wistful respect for me. But for me in the face of the world, not much. This David would never get a stone across at Goliath. And why try? Let Goliath alone! Anyway, she was beyond reading my first immortal work. It was put aside, and I never wanted to see it again. She never saw it again.

After the funeral, my father struggled through half a page, and it might as well have been Hottentot.

"And what dun they gi'e thee for that, lad?"

"Fifty pounds, father."

"Fifty pounds!" He was dumbfounded, and looked at me with shrewd eyes, as if I were a swindler. "Fifty pounds! An' tha's niver done a day's hard work in thy life." Phoenix (1936) p. 232

Never trust the artist. Trust the tale. The proper function of a critic is to save the tale from the artist who created it

"The Art of Being Ruled" might be described from some points of view as an infernal Utopia....An account, comprising many chapters, of the decadence occupying the trough between the two world wars introduces us to a moronic inferno of insipidity and decay (which is likewise the inferno of "The Apes of God")

Rude Assignment (1950) ch. 31

Gertrude Stein's prose-song is a cold, black suet-pudding. We can represent it as a cold suet-roll of fabulously-reptilian length. Cut it at any point, it is the same thing; the same heavy, sticky, opaque mass all through, and all along. It is weighted, projected, with a sibylline urge

It is mournful and monstrous, composed of dead and inanimate material. It is all fat, without nerve. Or the evident vitality that informs it is vegetable rather than animal. Its life is a low-grade, if tenacious one; of the sausage, by-the-yard, variety

12.57 Liberace (Wladziu Valentino Liberace)

1919-1987

He [Liberace] begins to belabour the critics announcing that he doesn't mind what they say but that poor George [his brother] "cried all the way to the bank." Collier's 17 Sept. 1954 (Cf. Liberace's Autobiography (1973) ch. 2: "When the reviews are bad I tell my staff that they can join me as I cry all the way to the bank")

1894-1989

At one early, glittering dinner party at Buckingham Palace, the trembling hand of a nervous waiter spilled a spoonful of decidedly hot soup down my neck. How could I manage to ease his mind and turn his embarrassed apologies into a smile, except to put on a pretended frown and say, without thinking: "Never darken my Dior again!" Booth led boldly with his big brass drum--
(Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb?)
The Saints smiled gravely and they said: "He's come."
(Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb?)
Walking Lepers followed, rank on rank,
Lurching bravos from the ditches dank,
Drabs from the alleyways and drug fiends pale--
Minds still passion-ridden, soul-power frail:--
Vermin-eaten saints with moldy breath,
Unwashed legions with the ways of Death--
(Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb?) Collected Poems (1934) "General William Booth Enters into Heaven" (1913)

Booth died blind and still by faith he trod,
Eyes still dazzled by the ways of God

12.65 Walter Lippmann

1889-1974

Mr Coolidge's genius for inactivity is developed to a very high point. It is far from being an indolent activity. It is a grim, determined, alert inactivity which keeps Mr Coolidge occupied constantly. Nobody has ever worked harder at inactivity, with such force of character, with such unremitting attention to detail, with such conscientious devotion to the task. Inactivity is a political philosophy and a party program with Mr Coolidge

If we must die, let it not be like hogs
Hunted and penned in an inglorious spot,
While round us bark the mad and hungry dogs,
Making their mock at our accursed lot
If we must die, O let us nobly die,
So that our precious blood may not be shed
In vain; then even the monsters we defy

Shall be constrained to honor us though dead!
O, kinsmen! we must meet the common foe!
Though far outnumbered let us show us brave,
And for their thousand blows deal one deathblow!
What though before us lies the open grave?
Like men we'll face the murderous, cowardly pack,
Pressed to the wall, dying, but fighting back! Selected Poems (1953) "If We Must Die"

There ain't gonna be no war
Said at London press conference, 24 July 1955, after Geneva summit, in News Chronicle 25 July 1955

He [a Foreign Secretary] is forever poised between a cliché and an indiscretion
In Newsweek 30 Apr. 1956

Even before Mr Heath's troubles of 1972 and 1974, Mr Harold Macmillan was fond of remarking that there were three bodies no sensible man directly challenged: the Roman Catholic Church, the Brigade of Guards and the National Union of Mineworkers
Alan Watkins in Observer 22 Feb. 1981

The most striking of all the impressions I have formed since I left London a month ago is of the strength of this African national consciousness. In different places it takes different forms, but it is happening everywhere
The wind of change is blowing through this continent, and, whether we like it or not, this growth of national consciousness is a political fact. We must all accept it as a fact, and our national policies must take account of it
Speech at Cape Town, 3 Feb. 1960, Pointing the Way (1972) p. 475

Indeed, let us be frank about it: most of our people have never had it so good. Go around the country, go to the industrial towns, go to the farms, and you will see a state of prosperity such as we have never had in my lifetime—nor indeed ever in the history of this country. What is beginning to worry some of us is, Is it too good to be true?—or perhaps I should say, Is it too good to last? Speech at Bedford, 20 July 1957, in The Times 22 July 1957

I thought the best thing to do was to settle up these little local difficulties, and then turn to the wider vision of the Commonwealth

The sunlight on the garden
Hardens and grows cold,
We cannot cage the minute
Within its net of gold,
When all is told
We cannot beg for pardon
Earth Compels (1938) "Sunlight on the Garden"

Our freedom as free lances
Advances towards its end;
The earth compels, upon it
Sonnets and birds descend;
And soon, my friend,
We shall have no time for dances
Earth Compels (1938) "Sunlight on the Garden"

It's no go the merrygoround, it's no go the rickshaw,
All we want is a limousine and a ticket for the peepshow
Earth Compels (1938) "Bagpipe Music"

It's no go the picture palace, it's no go the stadium,
It's no go the country cot with a pot of pink geraniums,
It's no go the Government grants, it's no go the elections,
Sit on your arse for fifty years and hang your hat on a pension
Earth Compels (1938) "Bagpipe Music"

It's no go my honey love, it's no go my poppet;
Work your hands from day to day, the winds will blow the profit
The glass is falling hour by hour, the glass will fall for ever,

But if you break the bloody glass you won't hold up the weather
Earth Compels (1938) "Bagpipe Music"

I take a rather common-sense view of poetry. I think that the poet is a sensitive instrument designed to record anything which interests his mind or affects his emotions

Our end is Life. Put out to sea
London Magazine Feb. 1964 "Thalassa" (poem published posthumously)

And under the totem poles—the ancient terror--
Between the enormous fluted Ionic columns
There seeps from heavily jowled or hawk-like foreign faces
The guttural sorrow of the refugees

So they were married—to be the more together--
And found they were never again so much together,
Divided by the morning tea,
By the evening paper,
By children and tradesmen's bills
Plant and Phantom (1941) "Les Sylphides"

Crumbling between the fingers, under the feet,
Crumbling behind the eyes,
Their world gives way and dies
And something twangs and breaks at the end of the street
Plant and Phantom (1941) "D'bfcl"

Down the road someone is practising scales,
The notes like little fishes vanish with a wink of tails,
Man's heart expands to tinker with his car
For this is Sunday morning, Fate's great bazaar
Poems (1935) "Sunday Morning"

World is crazier and more of it than we think,
Incorrigibly plural. I peel and portion
A tangerine and spit the pips and feel
The drunkenness of things being various Poems (1935) "Snow"

I am not yet born; O fill me
With strength against those who would freeze my humanity, would dragoon me into a lethal automaton, would make me a cog in a machine, a thing with one face, a thing, and against all those who would dissipate my entirety, would blow me like thistledown hither and thither or hither and thither like water held in the hands would spill me
Let them not make me a stone and let them not spill me,
Otherwise kill me

Oh! I have slipped the surly bonds of earth
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed, and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds—and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of—wheeled and soared and swung
High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there
I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air.

Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace,
Where never lark, nor even eagle flew--
And, while with silent lifting mind I've trod
The high, untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand and touched the face of God

Katherine: What's Rosebud?
Raymond: That's what he said when he died...
Louise: If you could have found out what Rosebud meant, I bet that would've explained everything
Thompson: No, I don't think so. No, Mr Kane was a man who got everything he wanted, and then lost it. Maybe Rosebud was something he couldn't get or something he lost. Anyway, it wouldn't have explained anything. I don't think any word can explain a man's life. No, I guess Rosebud is just a piece in a jigsaw puzzle, a missing piece

Speech at Peking, 27 Feb. 1957, in Quotations of Chairman Mao (1966) p. 302

A revolution is not the same as inviting people to dinner, or writing an essay, or painting a picture....A revolution is an insurrection, an act of violence by which one class overthrows another
Report, Mar. 1927, in Selected Works (1954) vol. 1, p. 27

The atom bomb is a paper tiger which the United States reactionaries use to scare people. It looks terrible, but in fact it isn't. Of course, the atom bomb is a weapon of mass slaughter, but the outcome of a war is decided by the people, not by one or two new types of weapon
Interview with Anne Louise Strong, Aug. 1946, in Selected Works (1961) vol. 4, p. 100

All reactionaries are paper tigers. In appearance, the reactionaries are terrifying, but in reality they are not so powerful. From a long-term point of view, it is not the reactionaries but the people who are really powerful

Ballads (1903) "Cargoes"

Dirty British coaster with a salt-caked smoke stack,
Butting through the Channel in the mad March days,
With a cargo of Tyne coal,
Road-rails, pig lead,
Firewood, ironware, and cheap tin trays
Ballads (1903) "Cargoes"

Oh some are fond of Spanish wine, and some are fond of French,
And some'll swallow tay and stuff fit only for a wench
Ballads (1903) "Captain Stratton's Fancy"

Oh some are fond of fiddles, and a song well sung,
And some are all for music for a lilt upon the tongue;
But mouths were made for tankards, and for sucking at the bung,
Says the old bold mate of Henry Morgan
Ballads (1903) "Captain Stratton's Fancy"

I have seen dawn and sunset on moors and windy hills,
Coming in solemn beauty like slow old tunes of Spain
Ballads (1903) "Beauty"

But the loveliest things of beauty God ever has showed to me,

The wind came keen with a tang of frost,
The brook was troubled for new things lost,
The copse was happy for old things found,
The fox came home and he went to ground
Reynard the Fox (1919) pt. 2, st. 137

I must down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by,
And the wheel's kick and the wind's song and the white sail's shaking,
And a grey mist on the sea's face and a grey dawn breaking
Salt-Water Ballads (1902) "Sea Fever"

I must down to the seas again, for the call of the running tide
Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied
Salt-Water Ballads (1902) "Sea Fever"

I must down to the seas again, to the vagrant gypsy life,
To the gull's way and the whale's way where the wind's like a whetted knife;
And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow-rover,
And quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over
Salt-Water Ballads (1902) "Sea Fever"

It's a warm wind, the west wind, full of birds' cries;
I never hear the west wind but tears are in my eyes
For it comes from the west lands, the old brown hills,
And April's in the west wind, and daffodils
Salt-Water Ballads (1902) "West Wind"

It is good to be out on the road, and going one knows not where,
Going through meadow and village, one knows not whither nor why

Cakes and Ale (1930) ch. 1

This is not so strange when you reflect that from the earliest times the old have rubbed it into the young that they are wiser than they, and before the young had discovered what nonsense this was they were old too, and it profited them to carry on the imposture
Cakes and Ale (1930) ch. 11

Poor Henry [James], he's spending eternity wandering round and round a stately park and the fence is just too high for him to peep over and they're having tea just too far away for him to hear what the countess is saying
Cakes and Ale (1930) ch. 11

You can't learn too soon that the most useful thing about a principle is that it can always be sacrificed to expediency
Circle (1921) act 3

A woman will always sacrifice herself if you give her the opportunity. It is her favourite form of self-indulgence
Circle (1921) act 3

Summing Up (1938) p. 92

The common idea that success spoils people by making them vain, egotistic and self-complacent is erroneous; on the contrary it makes them, for the most part, humble, tolerant and kind. Failure makes people bitter and cruel
Summing Up (1938) p. 187

Lucky Jim [by Kingsley Amis] is a remarkable novel. It has been greatly praised and widely read, but I have not noticed that any of the reviewers have remarked on its ominous significance. I am told that today rather more

So attention must be paid. He's not to be allowed to fall into his grave like an old dog. Attention, attention must be finally paid to such a person
Death of a Salesman (1949) act 1

Willy was a salesman. And for a salesman, there is no rock bottom to the life. He don't put a bolt to a nut, he don't tell you the law or give you medicine. He's a man way out there in the blue, riding on a smile and a shoeshine. And when they start not smiling back—that's an earthquake

1878-1959

I find myself a President of a body of men who are what I call shilly-shallying. They feel that there is something in this so-called modern art....I myself would rather have—excuse me, my Lord Archbishop—a damned bad failure, a bad, dusty old picture where somebody has tried to do something, to set down something that they have seen and felt, than all this affected juggling, this following of well—shall we call it the school of Paris?...Anthony Blunt...once stood in this room with me when the King's pictures were here. And there was a Reynolds hanging there and he said, "That Reynolds isn't as great as a Picasso." Believe me, what an extraordinary thing for a man to say

The Road to Wigan Pier (1937) ch. 11

The typical Socialist is...a prim little man with a white-collar job, usually a secret teetotaler and often with vegetarian leanings, with a history of Nonconformity behind him, and, above all, with a social position which he has no intention of forfeiting
The Road to Wigan Pier (1937) ch. 11

To the ordinary working man, the sort you would meet in any pub on Saturday night, Socialism does not mean much more than better wages and shorter hours and nobody bossing you about
The Road to Wigan Pier (1937) ch. 11

The high-water mark, so to speak, of Socialist literature is W. H. Auden, a sort of gutless Kipling
The Road to Wigan Pier (1937) ch. 11

We of the sinking middle class...may sink without further struggles into the working class where we belong, and probably when we get there it will not be so dreadful as we feared, for, after all, we have nothing to lose but our aitches
The Road to Wigan Pier (1937) ch. 13

In our time, political speech and writing are largely the defence of the indefensible
Shooting an Elephant (1950) "Politics and the English Language"

The great enemy of clear language is insincerity. When there is a gap between one's real and one's declared aims, one turns as it were instinctively to long words and exhausted idioms, like a cuttlefish squirting out ink
Shooting an Elephant (1950) "Politics and the English Language"

Political language—and with variations this is true of all political parties, from Conservatives to Anarchists—is designed to make lies sound truthful and murder respectable, and to give an appearance of solidity to pure wind

Above all I am not concerned with Poetry
My subject is War, and the pity of War
The Poetry is in the pity
Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is why the true Poets must be truthful
Poems (1963 ed.) preface

What passing-bells for these who die as cattle?
Only the monstrous anger of the guns
Only the stuttering rifles' rapid rattle
Can patter out their hasty orisons
No mockeries now for them; no prayers nor bells,
Nor any voice of mourning save the choirs,--
The shrill, demented choirs of wailing shells;
And bugles calling for them from sad shires.

What candles may be held to speed them all?
Not in the hands of boys, but in their eyes
Shall shine the holy glimmers of good-byes
The pallor of girls' brows shall be their pall;
Their flowers the tenderness of patient minds,
And each slow dusk a drawing-down of blinds
Poems (1963 ed.) "Anthem for Doomed Youth"

If you could hear, at every jolt, the blood
Come gargling from the froth-corrupted lungs,

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people, whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect Union, one and inseparable, established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice, and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies

Unshackled (1959) ch. 5

We are here to claim our right as women, not only to be free, but to fight for freedom. That it is our right as well as our duty. It is our privilege, as well as our pride and our joy, to take some part in this militant movement which, as we believe, means the regeneration of all humanity

16.9 Emmeline Pankhurst

1858-1928

After all, is not a woman's life, is not her health, are not her limbs more valuable than panes of glass? There is no doubt of that, but most important of all, does not the breaking of glass produce more effect upon the Government? Speech on 16 Feb. 1912, in My Own Story (1914) p. 213

There is something that Governments care far more for than human life, and that is the security of property, and so it is through property that we shall strike the enemy....Be militant each in your own way. Those of you who can express your militancy by going to the House of Commons and refusing to leave without satisfaction, as we did in the early days—do so....And my last word is to the Government: I incite this meeting to rebellion. I say to the Government: You have not dared to take the leaders of Ulster for their incitement to rebellion. Take me if you dare

Emmeline Pankhurst 1858-1928 Dame Christabel Pankhurst 1880-1958 Annie Kenney 1879-1953

We laid our plans to begin this work at a great meeting to be held in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester [on 13 Oct. 1905] with Sir Edward Grey as the principal speaker. We intended to get seats in the gallery, directly facing the platform and we made for the occasion a large banner with the words "Will the Liberal Party Give Votes for Women?" ...At the last moment, however, we had to alter the plan because it was impossible to get the gallery seats we wanted. There was no way in which we could use our large banner, so...we cut out and made a small banner with the three-word inscription "Votes for Women." Thus, quite accidentally, there came into existence the present slogan of the suffrage movement around the world

The author's conviction on this day of New Year is that music begins to atrophy when it departs too far from the dance; that poetry begins to atrophy when it gets too far from music
ABC of Reading (1934) "Warning"

Any general statement is like a cheque drawn on a bank. Its value depends on what is there to meet it
ABC of Reading (1934) ch. 1

One of the pleasures of middle age is to find out that one WAS right, and that one was much righter than one knew at say 17 or 23
ABC of Reading (1934) ch. 1

Literature is news that STAYS news
ABC of Reading (1934) ch. 2

Real education must ultimately be limited to one who insists on knowing, the rest is mere sheep-herding
ABC of Reading (1934) ch. 8

Tching prayed on the mountain and

There can be but the one "Sordello." Draft of XXX Cantos (1930) no. 2

And even I can remember
A day when the historians left blanks in their writings,
I mean for things they didn't know
Draft of XXX Cantos (1930) no. 13

Great literature is simply language charged with meaning to the utmost possible degree
How To Read (1931) pt. 2

For three years, out of key with his time,
He strove to resuscitate the dead art
Of poetry; to maintain "the sublime"
In the old sense. Wrong from the start--

No, hardly, but seeing he had been born
In a half savage country, out of date
Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, E. P. Ode pour l'lection de son s'pulcre (1920) pt. 1

His true Penelope was Flaubert,
He fished by obstinate isles;
Observed the elegance of Circe's hair
Rather than the mottoes on sundials
Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, E. P. Ode pour l'lection de son s'pulcre (1920) pt. 1

The age demanded an image
Of its accelerated grimace,
Something for the modern stage,
Not, at any rate, an Attic grace;

Not, not certainly, the obscure reveries
Of the inward gaze;
Better mendacities
Than the classics in paraphrase! Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, E. P. Ode pour l'lection de son s'pulcre (1920) pt. 1

Christ follows Dionysus
Phallic and ambrosial

Made way for macerations;
Caliban casts out Ariel
Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, E. P. Ode pour l'lection de son s'pulcre (1920) pt. 1

There died a myriad,
And of the best, among them,
For an old bitch gone in the teeth,
For a botched civilization
Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, E. P. Ode pour l'lection de son s'pulcre (1920) pt. 1

The tip's a good one, as for literature
It gives no man a sinecure.

And no one knows, at sight, a masterpiece
And give up verse, my boy,
There's nothing in it
Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, E. P. Ode pour l'lection de son s'pulcre (1920) pt. 1

Poetry must be as well written as prose
Letter to Harriet Monroe, Jan. 1915, in D. D. Paige Letters of Ezra Pound (1950) p. 48

Artists are the antennae of the race, but the bullet-headed many will never learn to trust their great artists

But it is all the same;
And I will sing of the sun
Personae (1908) "Cino"

The ant's a centaur in his dragon world
Pull down thy vanity, it is not man
Made courage, or made order, or made grace,
Pull down thy vanity, I say pull down
Learn of the green world what can be thy place
In scaled invention or true artistry,
Pull down thy vanity,
Paquin pull down!
The green casque has outdone your elegance
Pisan Cantos (1948) no. 81

Pull down thy vanity
Thou art a beaten dog beneath the hail,
A swollen magpie in a fitful sun,
Half black half white
Nor knowst'ou wing from tail
Pull down thy vanity

Title of novel (1913-27), translated by C. K. Scott-Moncrieff and S Hudson, 1922-31, as "Remembrance of things past"

Longtemps, je me suis couch' de bonne heure.

For a long time I used to go to bed early
Du c"t de chez Swann (Swann's Way, 1913, translated 1922 by C. K Scott-Moncrieff, vol. 1, p. 1)

Je portai ... mes lŠvres une cuiller'e du th' o— j'avais laiss' s'amollir un morceau de madeleine....Et tout d'un coup le souvenir m'est apparu. Ce go-t c"tait celui du petit morceau de madeleine que le dimanche matin ... Combray...ma tante L'onie m'offrait aprŠs l'avoir tremp' dans son infusion de th' ou de tilleul.

I raised to my lips a spoonful of the tea in which I had soaked a morsel of cake....And suddenly the memory returns. The taste was that of the little crumb of madeleine which on Sunday mornings at Combray...my aunt L'onie used to give me, dipping it first in her own cup of real or of lime-flower tea

A l'ombre des jeunes filles en fleurs (Within a Budding Grove, 1918, translated 1924 by C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, vol. 1, p. 290)

Tout ce que nous connaissons de grand nous vient des nerveux. Ce sont eux et non pas d'autres qui ont fond' les religions et compos' les chefs-d'œuvre. Jamais le monde ne saura tout ce qu'il leur doit et surtout ce qu'eux ont souffert pour le lui donner.

All the greatest things we know have come to us from neurotics. It is they and they only who have founded religions and created great works of art. Never will the world be conscious of how much it owes to them, nor above all of what they have suffered in order to bestow their gifts on it
Le c"t de Guermantes (Guermantes Way, 1921, translated 1925 by C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, vol. 1, p. 418)

Il n'y a rien comme le d'sir pour emp^cher les choses qu'on dit d'avoir aucune ressemblance avec ce qu'on a dans la pens'e.

There is nothing like desire for preventing the thing one says from bearing any resemblance to what one has in mind
Le c"t de Guermantes (Guermantes Way, 1921, translated 1925 by C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, vol. 2, p. 60)

Un artiste n'a pas besoin d'exprimer directement sa pens'e dans son ouvrage pour que celui-ci en refl^te la qualit'; on a m^me pu dire que la louange la plus haute de Dieu est dans la n'gation de l'ath'e qui trouve la Cr'ation assez parfaite pour se passer d'un cr'ateur.

An artist has no need to express his mind directly in his work for it to express the quality of that mind; it has indeed been said that the highest praise of God consists in the denial of Him by the atheist, who finds creation so perfect that it can dispense with a creator
Le c"t de Guermantes (Guermantes Way, 1921, translated 1925 by C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, vol. 2, p. 147)

Du reste, continua Mme de Cambremer, j'ai horreur des couchers de soleil, c'est romantique, c'est op'ra.

"Anyhow," Mme de Cambremer went on, "I have a horror of sunsets, they're so romantic, so operatic." Sodome et Gomorrhe (Cities of the Plain, 1922, translated by C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, vol. 1, p. 296)

Une de ces d'p^ches dont M. de Guermantes avait spirituellement fix' le mod^le: "Impossible venir, mensonge suit."

The Browning Version (1948) (spoken by Peter Gilbert to Andrew Crocker-Harris)

Let us invent a character, a nice respectable, middle-class, middle-aged, maiden lady, with time on her hands and the money to help her pass it. She enjoys pictures, books, music, and the theatre and though to none of these arts (or rather, for consistency's sake, to none of these three arts and the one craft) does she bring much knowledge or discernment, at least, as she is apt to tell her cronies, she "does know what she likes." Let us call her Aunt Edna....Aunt Edna is universal, and to those who may feel that all the problems of the modern theatre might be solved by her liquidation, let me add that I have no doubt at all that she is also immortal

And today we have naming of parts
A Map of Verona (1946) "Lessons of the War: 1, Naming of Parts"

They call it easing the Spring: it is perfectly easy
If you have any strength in your thumb: like the bolt,
And the breech, and the cocking-piece, and the point of balance,
Which in our case we have not got; and the almond blossom
Silent in all of the gardens and the bees going backwards and forwards,
For today we have naming of parts
A Map of Verona (1946) "Lessons of the War: 1, Naming of Parts"

And the various holds and rolls and throws and breakfalls
Somehow or other I always seemed to put
In the wrong place. And as for war, my wars
Were global from the start

And the sooner the tea's out of the way, the sooner we can get out the gin, eh? Private Life of Hilda Tablet (1954 radio play) in Hilda Tablet and Others: four pieces for radio (1971) p. 60

Duchess: Of course we've all dreamed of reviving the castrati; but it's needed Hilda to take the first practical steps towards making them a reality

Reeves: P-practical steps?

Duchess: Yes, thank God. She's drawn up a list of well-known singers who she thinks would benefit from...treatment. Some of them have been singing baritone, or even bass, for years. It's only a question of getting them to agree

Mr Burge: Do you know Lord Astor has made a statement to the police saying that these allegations of yours are absolutely untrue?

Mandy Rice-Davies: He would, wouldn't he? (Laughter)
At the trial of Stephen Ward, 29 June 1963, in Guardian 1 July 1963

An American tourist, seeing me the centre of a crowd, came up to me
"Hello, my dear, may I have your autograph. And would you mind telling me who you are?" I hated having to say my name. For years Mandy Rice-Davies was such an embarrassment to me. It is only in recent times I have been able to say my name without a quiver of discomfort. "Call me Lady Hamilton," I said

1893-1979

It is very probable that the Hindenburg Line to which the defence of our traditions retired as a result of the onslaughts of the last century will be blown up in the near future. If this should happen a mental chaos such as man has never experienced may be expected. We shall then be thrown back...upon poetry. It is capable of saving us; it is a perfectly possible means of overcoming chaos

1875-1926

Kunst-Werke sind von einer unendlichen Einsamkeit und mit nichts so wenig erreichbar als mit Kritik. Nur Liebe kann sie erfassen und halten und kann gerecht sein gegen sie.

Works of art are of an infinite solitariness, and nothing is less likely to bring us near to them than criticism. Only love can apprehend and hold them, and can be just towards them

Briefe an einem jungen Dichter (Letters to a Young Poet, 1929, translated by Reginald Snell, 1945) 23 Apr. 1903

Und diese menschlichere Liebe (die unendlich rücksichtsvoll und leise, und gut und klar in Binden und Lösen sich vollziehen wird) wird jener ähneln, die wir ringend und mühsam vorbereiten, der Liebe, die darin besteht, dass zwei Einsamkeiten einander schützen, grenzen und grüssen.

And this more human love (which will consummate itself infinitely thoughtfully and gently, and well and clearly in binding and loosing) will be something like that which we are preparing with struggle and toil, the love which consists in the mutual guarding, bordering and saluting of two solitudes

Briefe an einem jungen Dichter (Letters to a Young Poet, 1929, translated by Reginald Snell, 1945) 14 May 1904

Wer hat uns also umgedreht, dass wir, was wir auch tun, in jener Haltung sind von einem, welcher fortgeht? Wie er auf den letzten Hügel, der ihm ganz sein Tal noch einmal zeigt, sich wendet, anhält, weilt--, so leben wir und nehmen immer Abschied.

Who's turned us around like this, so that we always,
do what we may, retain the attitude of someone who's departing? Just as he,
on the last hill, that shows him all his valley
for the last time, will turn and stop and linger,
we live our lives, for ever taking leave

Duineser Elegien (Duino Elegies, translated by J. B. Leishman and Stephen Spender, 1948) no. 8

Ich für die höchste Aufgabe einer Verbindung zweier Menschen diese halte: dass einer dem andern seine Einsamkeit bewache.

I hold this to be the highest task for a bond between two people: that each protects the solitude of the other

It is fun to be in the same decade with you
Cable to Winston Churchill, replying to congratulations on Roosevelt's 60th birthday, in W. S. Churchill Hinge of Fate (1950) ch. 4

These unhappy times call for the building of plans that...build from the bottom up...that put their faith once more in the forgotten man at the bottom of the economic pyramid
Radio address, 7 Apr. 1932, in Public Papers (1938) vol. 1, p. 625

I pledge you, I pledge myself, to a new deal for the American people. Let us all here assembled constitute ourselves prophets of a new order of competence and of courage. This is more than a political campaign; it is a call to arms. Give me your help, not to win votes alone, but to win in this crusade to restore America to its own people

Speech to Democratic Convention in Chicago, 2 July 1932, accepting nomination for presidency, in Public Papers (1938) vol. 1, p. 647

First of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyses needed efforts to convert retreat into advance
Inaugural address, 4 Mar. 1933, in Public Papers (1938) vol. 2, p. 11

In the field of world policy I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbour
Inaugural address, 4 Mar. 1933, in Public Papers (1938) vol. 2, p. 14

I have seen war. I have seen war on land and sea. I have seen blood running from the wounded. I have seen men coughing out their gassed lungs
I have seen the dead in the mud. I have seen cities destroyed. I have seen 200 limping, exhausted men come out of line—the survivors of a regiment of 1,000 that went forward 48 hours before. I have seen children starving. I have seen the agony of mothers and wives. I hate war
Speech at Chautauqua, NY, 14 Aug. 1936, in Public Papers (1936) vol. 5, p. 289

I see one-third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished
Second inaugural address, 20 Jan. 1937, in Public Papers (1941) vol. 6, p. 5

When peace has been broken anywhere, the peace of all countries everywhere is in danger
"Fireside Chat" radio broadcast, 3 Sept. 1939, in Public Papers (1941) vol. 8, p. 461

I am reminded of four definitions: A Radical is a man with both feet firmly planted—in the air. A Conservative is a man with two perfectly good legs who, however, has never learned to walk forward. A Reactionary is a somnambulist walking backwards. A Liberal is a man who uses his legs and his hands at the behest—at the command—of his head
Radio address to New York Herald Tribune Forum, 26 Oct. 1939, in Public Papers (1941) vol. 8, p. 556

And while I am talking to you mothers and fathers, I give you one more assurance. I have said this before, but I shall say it again and again and again: Your boys are not going to be sent into any foreign wars
Speech in Boston, 30 Oct. 1940, in Public Papers (1941) vol. 9, p. 517

We have the men—the skill—the wealth—and above all, the will. We must be the great arsenal of democracy
"Fireside Chat" radio broadcast, 29 Dec. 1940, in Public Papers (1941) vol. 9, p. 643

In the future days, which we seek to make secure, we look forward to a world founded upon four essential human freedoms. The first is freedom of speech and expression—everywhere in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way—everywhere in the world
The third is freedom from want—which, translated into world terms, means economic understanding which will secure to every nation a healthy peacetime life for its inhabitants—everywhere in the world. The fourth is freedom from fear—which, translated into world terms, means a world-wide reduction of armaments to such a point and in such a thorough fashion that no nation will be in a position to commit an act of physical aggression against any neighbour—anywhere in the world

Message to Congress, 6 Jan. 1941, in Public Papers (1941) vol. 9, p. 672

Yesterday, December 7, 1941--a date which will live on in infamy—the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by naval and air forces of the Empire of Japan
Address to Congress, 8 Dec. 1941, in Public Papers (1950) vol. 10, p. 514

The work, my friend, is peace. More than an end of this war—an end to the beginnings of all wars. Yes, an end forever to this impractical, unrealistic settlement of the differences between governments by the mass killings of peoples
Undelivered address for Jefferson Day, 13 Apr. 1945 (the day after Roosevelt died) in Public Papers (1950) vol. 13, p. 615

The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today
Let us move forward with strong and active faith
Undelivered address for Jefferson Day, 13 Apr. 1945, final lines, in Public Papers (1950) vol. 13, p. 616

We all know that books burn—yet we have the greater knowledge that books can not be killed by fire. People die, but books never die. No man and no force can abolish memory. No man and no force can put thought in a concentration camp forever. No man and no force can take from the world the books that embody man's eternal fight against tyranny of every kind
In this war, we know, books are weapons. And it is a part of your dedication always to make them weapons for man's freedom

18.60 Theodore Roosevelt

1858-1919

The first requisite of a good citizen in this Republic of ours is that he shall be able and willing to pull his weight
Speech in New York, 11 Nov. 1902, in Addresses and Presidential Messages 1902-4 (1904) p. 85

A man who is good enough to shed his blood for the country is good enough to be given a square deal afterwards. More than that no man is entitled to, and less than that no man shall have
Speech at the Lincoln Monument, Springfield, Illinois, 4 June 1903, in Addresses and Presidential Messages 1902-4 (1904) p. 224

[William] McKinley has no more backbone than a chocolate 'clair! In H. T. Peck Twenty Years of the Republic (1906) p. 642

There is a homely old adage which runs: "Speak softly and carry a big stick; you will go far." If the American nation will speak softly, and yet build and keep at a pitch of the highest training a thoroughly efficient navy, the Monroe Doctrine will go far
Speech at Chicago, 3 Apr. 1903, in New York Times 4 Apr. 1903

There can be no fifty-fifty Americanism in this country. There is room here for only 100 per cent. Americanism, only for those who are Americans and nothing else
Speech in Saratoga, 19 July 1918, in Roosevelt Policy (1919) vol. 3, p. 1079

I wish to preach, not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life
Speech to the Hamilton Club, Chicago, 10 Apr. 1899, in Works, Memorial edition (1925), vol. 15, p. 267

No man is justified in doing evil on the ground of expediency
In Works, Memorial edition (1925) vol. 15, p. 388 "Latitude and Longitude among Reformers"

The men with the muck-rakes are often indispensable to the well-being of society; but only if they know when to stop raking the muck
Speech in Washington, 14 Apr. 1906, in Works, Memorial edition (1925) vol. 18, p. 574

A hyphenated American is not an American at all. This is just as true of the man who puts "native" before the hyphen as of the man who puts German or Irish or English or French before the hyphen. Americanism is a matter of the spirit and of the soul. Our allegiance must be purely to the United States. We must unsparingly condemn any man who holds any other allegiance
Speech in New York, 12 Oct. 1915, in Works, Memorial edition (1925) vol. 20, p. 457

There are the foolish fanatics always to be found in such a movement and always discrediting it—the men who form the lunatic fringe in all reform movements
Autobiography (1913) ch. 7, in Works, Memorial edition (1925) vol. 22, p. 247

I wish in this campaign to do...whatever is likely to produce the best results for the Republican ticket. I am as strong as a bull moose and you can use me to the limit
Letter to Mark Hanna, 27 June 1900, in Works, Memorial edition (1926) vol. 23, p. 162 ("Bull Moose" became the popular name of the Progressive Party)

One of our defects as a nation is a tendency to use what have been called "weasel words." When a weasel sucks eggs the meat is sucked out of the egg. If you use a "weasel word" after another, there is nothing left of the other
Speech in St Louis, 31 May 1916, in Works, Memorial edition (1926) vol. 24, p. 483

Good to the last drop
Said to Joel Cheek in 1907 about Maxwell House coffee, and subsequently used as an advertising slogan

There is no need for any nation, however great, leaving the Empire, because the Empire is a commonwealth of nations

Speech in Adelaide, Australia, 18 Jan. 1884, in Marquess of Crewe Lord Rosebery (1931) vol. 1, ch. 7

And now we cannot but observe that it is beginning to be hinted that we are a nation of amateurs

Rectorial Address at Glasgow University, 16 Nov. 1900, in The Times 17 Nov. 1900

I must plough my furrow alone. That is my fate, agreeable or the reverse; but before I get to the end of that furrow it is possible that I may find myself not alone

Title of essay in Nancy Mitford Noblesse Oblige (1956), first published in Neuphilologische Mitteilungen (1954)

18.69 Harold Ross

1892-1951

Usually he [Ross] confined himself to written comments. His later famed "What mean?" "Who he?" and the like began to appear on manuscripts and proofs

Dale Kramer Ross and The New Yorker (1952) ch. 13

The New Yorker will be the magazine which is not edited for the old lady in Dubuque

In James Thurber The Years with Ross (1959) ch. 4

"I don't want you to think I'm not incoherent," he [Ross] once rattled off to somebody in "21." James Thurber The Years with Ross (1959) ch. 5

I understand the hero [of Hemingway's A Farewell to Arms] keeps getting in bed with women, and the war wasn't fought that way

1857-1932

This day relenting God
Hath placed within my hand
A wondrous thing; and God
Be praised. At his command,

Seeking His secret deeds
With tears and toiling breath,
I find thy cunning seeds,

O million-murdering Death.

I know this little thing
A myriad men will save,
O Death, where is thy sting?

Thy victory, O Grave? Philosophies (1910) "In Exile" pt. 7 (describing his part in discovering the life-cycle of the malaria parasite in 1897; cf. Oxford Dictionary of Quotations (1979) 77:1) ˆtre adulte, c'est ˆtre seul.

To be adult is to be alone
Pens'es d'un biologiste (Thoughts of a Biologist, 1954) p. 134

On tue un homme, on est un assassin. On tue des millions d'hommes, on est conqu'rant. On les tue tous, on est un dieu.

Kill a man, and you are an assassin. Kill millions of men, and you are a conqueror. Kill everyone, and you are a god

18.74 Dan Rowan and Dick Martin

Dan Rowan 1922-1987 Dick Martin 1923-

Very interesting...but stupid
Catch-phrase in Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In (American television series, 1967-73)

18.75 Helen Rowland

1875-1950

A husband is what is left of a lover, after the nerve has been extracted
A Guide to Men (1922) p. 19

Somehow a bachelor never quite gets over the idea that he is a thing of beauty and a boy forever

A Guide to Men (1922) p. 25

The follies which a man regrets most, in his life, are those which he didn't commit when he had the opportunity
A Guide to Men (1922) p. 87

When you see what some girls marry, you realize how they must hate to work for a living
Reflections of a Bachelor Girl (1909) p. 45

I know two things about the horse
And one of them is rather coarse
Weekend Book (1928) p. 231

18.79 Paul Alfred Rubens

1875-1917

Oh! we don't want to lose you but we think you ought to go
For your King and your Country both need you so;
We shall want you and miss you but with all our might and main
We shall cheer you, thank you, kiss you
When you come back again
Your King and Country Want You (1914 song)

1884-1946

I do see her in tough joints more than somewhat
Collier's 22 May 1930, "Social Error"

"You are snatching a hard guy when you snatch Bookie Bob. A very hard guy, indeed. In fact," I say, "I hear the softest thing about him is his front teeth." Collier's 26 Sept. 1931, "Snatching of Bookie Bob"

I always claim the mission workers came out too early to catch any sinners on this part of Broadway. At such an hour the sinners are still in bed resting up from their sinning of the night before, so they will be in good shape for more sinning a little later on
Collier's 28 Jan. 1933, "The Idyll of Miss Sarah Brown"

"In fact," Sam the Gonoph says, "I long ago come to the conclusion that all life is 6 to 5 against." Collier's 8 Sept.
1934, "A Nice Price"

"My boy," he says, "always try to rub up against money, for if you rub up against money long enough, some of it may rub off on you." Cosmopolitan Aug. 1929, "A Very Honourable Guy"

1909-

We're eyeball to eyeball, and I think the other fellow just blinked
Comment on Cuban missile crisis, 24 Oct. 1962, in Saturday Evening Post 8 Dec. 1962

18.82 Bertrand Russell (Bertrand Arthur William, third Earl Russell)

1872-1970

Three passions, simple but overwhelmingly strong, have governed my life: the longing for love, the search for knowledge, and unbearable pity for the suffering of mankind
Autobiography (1967) vol. 1, prologue

I was told that the Chinese said they would bury me by the Western Lake and build a shrine to my memory. I have some slight regret that this did not happen as I might have become a god, which would have been very chic for an atheist
Autobiography (1968) vol. 2, ch. 3

Men who are unhappy, like men who sleep badly, are always proud of the fact
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 1

Boredom is therefore a vital problem for the moralist, since half the sins of mankind are caused by the fear of it
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 4

One of the symptoms of approaching nervous breakdown is the belief that one's work is terribly important, and that to take a holiday would bring all kinds of disaster. If I were a medical man, I should prescribe a holiday to any patient who considered his work important
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 5

Envy is the basis of democracy
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 6

One should as a rule respect public opinion in so far as is necessary to avoid starvation and to keep out of prison, but anything that goes beyond this is voluntary submission to an unnecessary tyranny, and is likely to interfere with happiness in all kinds of ways
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 9

A sense of duty is useful in work, but offensive in personal relations
People wish to be liked, not to be endured with patient resignation
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 10

Of all forms of caution, caution in love is perhaps the most fatal to true happiness
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 12

To be able to fill leisure intelligently is the last product of civilization, and at present very few people have reached this level
Conquest of Happiness (1930) ch. 14

Aristotle maintained that women have fewer teeth than men; although he was twice married, it never occurred to him to verify this statement by examining his wives' mouths
Impact of Science on Society (1952) ch. 1

The fact that an opinion has been widely held is no evidence whatever that it is not utterly absurd; indeed in view of the silliness of the majority of mankind, a widespread belief is more likely to be foolish than sensible
Marriage and Morals (1929) ch. 5

To fear love is to fear life, and those who fear life are already three parts dead
Marriage and Morals (1929) ch. 19

Mathematics may be defined as the subject in which we never know what we are talking about, nor whether what we are saying is true
Mysticism and Logic (1917) ch. 4

Only on the firm foundation of unyielding despair, can the soul's habitation henceforth be safely built
Philosophical Essays (1910) no. 2

Mathematics, rightly viewed, possesses not only truth, but supreme beauty—a beauty cold and austere, like that of sculpture
Philosophical Essays (1910) no. 4

It is undesirable to believe a proposition when there is no ground whatever for supposing it is true
Sceptical Essays (1928) "On the Value of Scepticism"

The infliction of cruelty with a good conscience is a delight to moralists. That is why they invented Hell
Sceptical Essays (1928) "On the Value of Scepticism"

Every man, wherever he goes, is encompassed by a cloud of comforting convictions, which move with him like flies on a summer day
Sceptical Essays (1928) "Dreams and Facts"

Machines are worshipped because they are beautiful, and valued because they confer power; they are hated because they are hideous, and loathed because they impose slavery
Sceptical Essays (1928) "Machines and Emotions"

We have, in fact, two kinds of morality side by side: one which we preach but do not practise, and another which we practise but seldom preach
Sceptical Essays (1928) "Eastern and Western Ideals of Happiness"

It is obvious that "obscenity" is not a term capable of exact legal definition; in the practice of the Courts, it means "anything that shocks the magistrate." Sceptical Essays (1928) "Recrudescence of Puritanism"

The fundamental defect of fathers, in our competitive society, is that they want their children to be a credit to them
Sceptical Essays (1928) "Freedom versus Authority in Education"

Man is a credulous animal, and must believe something; in the absence of good grounds for belief, he will be satisfied with bad ones
Unpopular Essays (1950) "Outline of Intellectual Rubbish"

Fear is the main source of superstition, and one of the main sources of cruelty. To conquer fear is the beginning of wisdom, in the pursuit of truth as in the endeavour after a worthy manner of life
Unpopular Essays (1950) "Outline of Intellectual Rubbish"

18.83 Dora Russell (Countess Russell)

1894-1986

We want better reasons for having children than not knowing how to prevent them

Certain phrases stick in the throat, even if they offer nothing that is analytically improbable. "A dashing Swiss officer" is one such. Another is "the beautiful Law Courts." Paris (1960) ch. 11

18.86 Ernest Rutherford (Baron Rutherford of Nelson)

1871-1937

I do not...want to give the impression that the use of large machines or of elaborate techniques is always justified; sometimes it contributes merely to the sense of self-importance of the investigator, and it is always salutary to remember Rutherford's "We haven't got the money, so we've got to think!" R. V. Jones in Bulletin of the Institute of Physics (1962) vol. 13, p. 102

All science is either physics or stamp collecting
In J. B. Birks Rutherford at Manchester (1962) p. 108

18.87 Gilbert Ryle

1900-1976

A myth is, of course, not a fairy story. It is the presentation of facts belonging to one category in the idioms appropriate to another. To explode a myth is accordingly not to deny the facts but to re-allocate them. And this is what I am trying to do
Concept of Mind (1949) introduction

Philosophy is the replacement of category-habits by category-disciplines
Concept of Mind (1949) introduction

Such in outline is the official theory. I shall often speak of it, with deliberate abusiveness, as "the dogma of the Ghost in the Machine." Concept of Mind (1949) ch. 1 (referring to Descartes' mental-conduct concepts)

Rien n'est plus affreux que le rire pour la jalousie.

To jealousy, nothing is more frightful than laughter
La Chamade (1965) ch. 9

19.5 Antoine de Saint-Exupéry

1900-1944

Les grandes personnes ne comprennent jamais rien toutes seules, et c'est fatigant, pour les enfants, de toujours et toujours leur donner des explications.

Grown-ups never understand anything for themselves, and it is tiresome for children to be always and forever explaining things to them
Le Petit Prince (The Little Prince, 1943) ch. 1

On ne voit bien qu'avec le cœur. L'essentiel est invisible pour les yeux.

It is only with the heart that one can see rightly; what is essential is invisible to the eye
Le Petit Prince (The Little Prince, 1943) ch. 21

L'expérience nous montre qu'aimer ce n'est point nous regarder l'un l'autre mais regarder ensemble dans la même direction.

Life has taught us that love does not consist in gazing at each other but in looking together in the same direction
Terre des Hommes (translated as "Wind, Sand and Stars," 1939) ch. 8

"But why should you want to shield him?" cried Egbert; "the man is a common murderer." "A common murderer, possibly, but a very uncommon cook." Beasts and Super-Beasts (1914) "The Blind Spot"

"Waldo is one of those people who would be enormously improved by death," said Clovis
Beasts and Super-Beasts (1914) "The Feast of Nemesis"

He's simply got the instinct for being unhappy highly developed
Chronicles of Clovis (1911) "The Match-Maker"

"I think oysters are more beautiful than any religion," he resumed presently. "They not only forgive our unkindness to them; they justify it, they incite us to go on being perfectly horrid to them. Once they arrive at the supper-table they seem to enter thoroughly into the spirit of the thing. There's nothing in Christianity or Buddhism that quite matches the sympathetic unselfishness of an oyster." Chronicles of Clovis (1911) "The Match-Maker"

All decent people live beyond their incomes nowadays, and those who aren't respectable live beyond other peoples'. A few gifted individuals manage to do both

Reginald (1904) "Reginald's Choir Treat"

Her frocks are built in Paris, but she wears them with a strong English accent
Reginald (1904) "Reginald on Worries"

The young have aspirations that never come to pass, the old have reminiscences of what never happened
Reginald (1904) "Reginald at the Carlton"

There may have been disillusionments in the lives of the medieval saints, but they would scarcely have been better pleased if they could have foreseen that their names would be associated nowadays chiefly with racehorses and the cheaper clarets
Reginald (1904) "Reginald at the Carlton"

The cook was a good cook, as cooks go; and as good cooks go, she went
Reginald (1904) "Reginald on Besetting Sins"

Women and elephants never forget an injury
Reginald (1904) "Reginald on Besetting Sins"

The Young Turkish candidate, who had conformed to the Western custom of one wife and hardly any mistresses, stood by helplessly while his adversary's poll swelled to a triumphant majority Reginald in Russia (1910) "A Young Turkish Catastrophe"

The death of John Pennington had left his widow in circumstances which were more straitened than ever, and the Park had receded even from her notepaper, where it had long been retained as a courtesy title on the principle that addresses are given to us to conceal our whereabouts
Reginald in Russia (1910) "Cross Currents"

But, good gracious, you've got to educate him first. You can't expect a boy to be vicious till he's been to a good

Toys of Peace and Other Papers (1919) "Hyacinth"

A buzz of recognition came from the front rows of the pit, together with a craning of necks on the part of those in less favoured seats. It heralded the arrival of Sherard Blaw, the dramatist who had discovered himself, and who had given so ungrudgingly of his discovery to the world
The Unbearable Bassington (1912) ch. 13

19.8 J. D. Salinger

1919-

If you really want to hear about it, the first thing you'll probably want to know is where I was born, and what my lousy childhood was like, and how my parents were occupied and all before they had me, and all that David Copperfield kind of crap, but I don't feel like going into it
Catcher in the Rye (1951) ch. 1

What really knocks me out is a book that, when you're all done reading it, you wish the author that wrote it was a terrific friend of yours and you could call him up on the phone whenever you felt like it
Catcher in the Rye (1951) ch. 3

Sex is something I really don't understand too hot. You never know where the hell you are. I keep making up these sex rules for myself, and then I break them right away
Catcher in the Rye (1951) ch. 9

The only thing old Phoebe liked was when Hamlet patted this dog on the head. She thought that was funny and nice, and it was. What I'll have to do is, I'll have to read that play. The trouble with me is, I always have to read that stuff by myself. If an actor acts it out, I hardly listen
I keep worrying about whether he's going to do something phoney every minute
Catcher in the Rye (1951) ch. 16

Take most people, they're crazy about cars. They worry if they get a little scratch on them, and they're always talking about how many miles they get to a gallon, and if they get a brand-new car already they start thinking about trading it in for one that's even newer. I don't even like old cars. I mean they don't even interest me. I'd rather have a goddam horse. A horse is at least human, for God's sake
Catcher in the Rye (1951) ch. 17

"You know that song 'If a body catch a body comin' through the rye?' I'd like—"

"It's 'If a body meet a body coming through the rye!'" old Phoebe said
"It's a poem. By Robert Burns."

"I know it's a poem by Robert Burns."

She was right, though. It is "If a body meet a body coming through the rye." I didn't know it then, though.

"I thought it was 'If a body catch a body,'" I said. "Anyway, I keep picturing all these little kids playing some game in this big field of rye and all. Thousands of little kids, and nobody's around—nobody big, I mean—except me. And I'm standing on the edge of some crazy cliff. What I have to do, I have to catch everybody if they start to go over the cliff—I mean if they're running and they don't look where they're going I have to come out from somewhere and catch them. That's all I'd do all day. I'd just be the catcher in the rye and all. I know it's crazy, but that's the only thing I'd really like to be. I know it's crazy." Catcher in the Rye (1951) ch. 22

A confessional passage has probably never been written that didn't stink a little bit of the writer's pride in having given up his pride

19.9 Lord Salisbury (Robert Arthur James Gascoyne-Cecil, fifth Marquess of Salisbury)

1893-1972

He is, as we all know, a man of most unusual intellectual brilliance; and he is, moreover, both brave and resolute. Those are valuable and not too common attributes in politics. But the fact remains that I believe he has adopted, especially in his relationship to the white communities of Africa, a most unhappy and an entirely wrong approach. He has been too clever by half

Without doubt the greatest injury of all was done by basing morals on myth. For, sooner or later, myth is recognized for what it is, and disappears. Then morality loses the foundation on which it has been built

Alors, c'est ça l'Enfer. Je n'aurais jamais cru.... Vous vous rappelez: le soufre, le b—cher, le gril.... Ah! quelle plaisanterie. Pas besoin de gril, l' Enfer, c'est les Autres.

So that's what Hell is: I'd never have believed it.... Do you remember, brimstone, the stake, the gridiron?... What a joke! No need of a gridiron, Hell is other people
Huis Clos (Closed Doors, 1944) sc. 5

Il n'y a pas de bon pŠre, c'est la rŠgle; qu'on n'en tienne pas grief aux hommes mais au lien de paternit' qui est pourri. Faire des enfants, rien de mieux; en avoir, quelle iniquit'!

There is no good father, that's the rule. Don't lay the blame on men but on the bond of paternity, which is rotten. To beget children, nothing better; to have them, what iniquity! Les Mots (The Words, 1964) "Lire"

Les bons pauvres ne savent pas que leur office est d'exercer notre g'n'rosit'.

The poor don't know that their function in life is to exercise our generosity

19.21 Siegfried Sassoon

1886-1967

Soldiers are citizens of death's gray land,
Drawing no dividend from time's tomorrows
Counter-Attack (1918) "Dreamers"

In the great hour of destiny they stand,
Each with his feuds, and jealousies, and sorrows
Soldiers are sworn to action; they must win

Some flaming, fatal climax with their lives
Soldiers are dreamers; when the guns begin
They think of firelit homes, clean beds, and wives
Counter-Attack (1918) "Dreamers"

If I were fierce, and bald, and short of breath,
I'd live with scarlet Majors at the Base,
And speed glum heroes up the line to death
You'd see me with my puffy petulant face,
Guzzling and gulping in the best hotel,
Reading the Roll of Honour. "Poor young chap,"
I'd say—"I used to know his father well;
Yes, we've lost heavily in this last scrap."
And when the war is done and youth stone dead,
I'd toddle safely home and die—in bed
Counter-Attack (1918) "Base Details"

"Good-morning; good morning!" the General said
When we met him last week on our way to the line
Now the soldiers he smiled at are most of 'em dead,
And we're cursing his staff for incompetent swine
"He's a cheery old card," grunted Harry to Jack
As they slogged up to Arras with rifle and pack
But he did for them both by his plan of attack
Counter-Attack (1918) "The General"

Does it matter?--losing your legs?..
For people will always be kind,
And you need not show that you mind
When the others come in after hunting
To gobble their muffins and eggs
Does it matter?--losing your sight?..
There's such splendid work for the blind;
And people will always be kind,
As you sit on the terrace remembering
And turning your face to the light
Counter-Attack (1918) "Does it Matter?"

Who will remember, passing through this Gate,
The unheroic Dead who fed the guns?
Who shall absolve the foulness of their fate,--
Those doomed, conscripted, unvictorious ones? The Heart's Journey (1928) "On Passing the New Menin Gate"

I am making this statement as an act of wilful defiance of military authority, because I believe that the War is being deliberately prolonged by those who have the power to end it
Memoirs of an Infantry Officer (1930) pt. 10, ch. 2

I'd like to see a Tank come down the stalls,
Lurching to rag-time tunes, or "Home, sweet Home,"--
And there'd be no more jokes in Music-halls
To mock the riddled corpses round Bapaume
The Old Huntsman (1917) "Blighters"

And he'd come home again to find it more
Desirable than it ever was before
How right it seemed that he should reach the span
Of comfortable years allowed to man!
Splendid to eat and sleep and choose a wife,
Safe with his wound, a citizen of life
He hobbled blithely through the garden gate,
And thought: "Thank God they had to amputate!" The Old Huntsman (1917) "The One-Legged Man"

Why do you lie with your legs ungainly huddled,
And one arm bent across your sullen cold
Exhausted face? It hurts my heart to watch you,
Deep-shadow'd from the candle's glittering gold;
And you wonder why I shake you by the shoulder;

Drowsy, you mumble and sigh and turn your head..
You are too young to fall asleep for ever;
And when you sleep you remind me of the dead
War Poems (1919) "The Dug-Out"

But the past is just the same,--and War's a bloody game..
Have you forgotten yet?..
Look down, and swear by the slain of the War that you'll never forget
War Poems (1919) "Aftermath"

Everyone suddenly burst out singing;
And I was filled with such delight
As prisoned birds must find in freedom
Winging wildly across the white
Orchards and dark green fields; on; on; and out of sight
Everyone's voice was suddenly lifted,
And beauty came like the setting sun
My heart was shaken with tears and horror
Drifted away...O but every one
Was a bird; and the song was wordless; the singing will never be done

"Placetne, magistra?" "Placet." Gaudy Night (1935) ch. 23 (Lord Peter Wimsey's marriage proposal to Harriet Vane, and her acceptance)

Plain lies are dangerous: the only weapons left him [the advertiser] are the suggestio falsi and the suppressio veri, and his use even of these would be very much more circumscribed if one person in ten had ever been taught how to read. Those who prefer their English sloppy have only themselves to thank if the advertisement writer uses his mastery of vocabulary and syntax to mislead their weak minds. The moral of all this...is that we have the kind of advertising we deserve

Am Abend des dritten Tages, als wir bei Sonnenuntergang gerade durch eine Herde Nilpferde hindurchfuhren, stand urplötzlich, von mir nicht geahnt und nicht gesucht, das Wort "Ehrfurcht vor dem Leben" vor mir.

Late on the third day, at the very moment when, at sunset, we were making our way through a herd of hippopotamuses, there flashed upon my mind, unforeseen and unsought, the phrase, "Reverence for Life." Aus meinem Leben und Denken (My Life and Thought, 1933) ch. 13

The Roman Conquest was, however, a Good Thing, since the Britons were only natives at the time
1066 and All That (1930) ch. 1

The conversion of England was thus effected by the landing of St Augustine in Thanet and other places, which resulted in the country being overrun by a Wave of Saints. Among these were St Ive, St Pancra, the great St Bernard (originator of the clerical collar), St Bee, St Ebb, St Neot (who invented whisky), St Kit and St Kin, and the Venomous Bead (author of The Rosary)
1066 and All That (1930) ch. 3

Edward III had very good manners. One day at a royal dance he noticed some men-about-court mocking a lady whose garter had come off, whereupon to put her at her ease he stopped the dance and made the memorable epitaph: "Honi soie qui mal y pense" ("Honey, your silk stocking's hanging down")

London.... A version of the conversation was cabled over to Howard Dietz, Goldwyn's publicity chief; he compressed Shaw's words into: "The trouble, Mr Goldwyn, is that you are only interested in art and I am only interested in money." This was cabled back to London and released there. It added considerably to Shaw's reputation as a wit
Alva Johnson The Great Goldwyn (1937) ch. 3

I am a woman of the world, Hector; and I can assure you that if you will only take the trouble always to do the perfectly correct thing, and to say the perfectly correct thing, you can do just what you like
Heartbreak House (1919) act 1

Go anywhere in England where there are natural, wholesome, contented, and really nice English people; and what do you always find? That the stables are the real centre of the household
Heartbreak House (1919) act 3

The captain is in his bunk, drinking bottled ditch-water; and the crew is gambling in the fore-castle. She will strike and sink and split. Do you think the laws of God will be suspended in favour of England because you were born in it? Heartbreak House (1919) act 3

Money is indeed the most important thing in the world; and all sound and successful personal and national morality should have this fact for its basis
The Irrational Knot (1905) preface

Reminiscences make one feel so deliciously aged and sad
The Irrational Knot (1905) ch. 14

A man who has no office to go to—I don't care who he is—is a trial of which you can have no conception
The Irrational Knot (1905) ch. 18

An Irishman's heart is nothing but his imagination
John Bull's Other Island (1907) act 1

My way of joking is to tell the truth. It's the funniest joke in the world
John Bull's Other Island (1907) act 2

What really flatters a man is that you think him worth flattering

John Bull's Other Island (1907) act 4

There are only two qualities in the world: efficiency and inefficiency, and only two sorts of people: the efficient and the inefficient

John Bull's Other Island (1907) act 4

The greatest of evils and the worst of crimes is poverty. our first duty—a duty to which every other consideration should be sacrificed—is not to be poor

Major Barbara (1907) preface

The universal regard for money is the one hopeful fact in our civilization, the one sound spot in our social conscience. Money is the most important thing in the world. It represents health, strength, honour, generosity and beauty as conspicuously and undeniably as the want of it represents illness, weakness, disgrace, meanness and ugliness. Not the least of its virtues is that it destroys base people as certainly as it fortifies and dignifies noble people

Major Barbara (1907) preface

Cusins is a very nice fellow, certainly: nobody would ever guess that he was born in Australia

Major Barbara (1907) act 1

Nobody can say a word against Greek: it stamps a man at once as an educated gentleman

Major Barbara (1907) act 1

I am a Millionaire. That is my religion

Major Barbara (1907) act 2

I can't talk religion to a man with bodily hunger in his eyes

Major Barbara (1907) act 2

Wot prawce Selvytion nah? Major Barbara (1907) act 2

Alcohol is a very necessary article... It makes life bearable to millions of people who could not endure their existence if they were quite sober

It enables Parliament to do things at eleven at night that no sane person would do at eleven in the morning

Major Barbara (1907) act 2

He knows nothing; and he thinks he knows everything. That points clearly to a political career

Major Barbara (1907) act 3

The sixth Undershaft wrote up these words: Nothing is ever done in this world until men are prepared to kill one another if it is not done

Major Barbara (1907) act 3

Like all young men, you greatly exaggerate the difference between one young woman and another

Major Barbara (1907) act 3

But a lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it: it would be hell on earth

Man and Superman (1903) act 1

We are ashamed of everything that is real about us; ashamed of ourselves, of our relatives, of our incomes, of our accents, of our opinions, of our experience, just as we are ashamed of our naked skins

Man and Superman (1903) act 1

The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is

Man and Superman (1903) act 1

Vitality in a woman is a blind fury of creation. She sacrifices herself to it

Man and Superman (1903) act 1

The true artist will let his wife starve, his children go barefoot, his mother drudge for his living at seventy, sooner than work at anything but his art

Man and Superman (1903) act 1

Of all human struggles there is none so treacherous and remorseless as the struggle between the artist man and the mother woman

Man and Superman (1903) act 1

There is no love sincerer than the love of food
Man and Superman (1903) act 1

Very nice sort of place, Oxford, I should think, for people that like that sort of place. They teach you to be a gentleman there. In the Polytechnic they teach you to be an engineer or such like
Man and Superman (1903) act 2

You think that you are Ann's suitor; that you are the pursuer and she the pursued; that it is your part to woo, to persuade, to prevail, to overcome. Fool: it is you who are the pursued, the marked down quarry, the destined prey
Man and Superman (1903) act 2

It is a woman's business to get married as soon as possible, and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can
Man and Superman (1903) act 2

Mendoza: I am a brigand: I live by robbing the rich
Tanner: I am a gentleman: I live by robbing the poor
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

Hell is full of musical amateurs: music is the brandy of the damned
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

Englishmen never will be slaves: they are free to do whatever the Government and public opinion allow them to do
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

An Englishman thinks he is moral when he is only uncomfortable
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

In the arts of life man invents nothing; but in the arts of death he outdoes Nature herself, and produces by chemistry and machinery all the slaughter of plague, pestilence and famine
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

In the arts of peace Man is a bungler
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

As an old soldier I admit the cowardice: it's as universal as sea sickness, and matters just as little
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

When the military man approaches, the world locks up its spoons and packs off its womankind
Man and Superman (1903) act 3

What is virtue but the Trade Unionism of the married? Man and Superman (1903) act 3

Those who talk most about the blessings of marriage and the constancy of its vows are the very people who declare that if the chain were broken and the prisoners were left free to choose, the whole social fabric would fly asunder. You can't have the argument both ways. If the prisoner is happy, why lock him in? If he is not, why pretend that he is? Man and Superman (1903) act 3

Beauty is all very well at first sight; but who ever looks at it when it has been in the house three days? Man and Superman (1903) act 4

There are two tragedies in life. One is not to get your hearts desire. The other is to get it
Man and Superman (1903) act 4

Revolutions have never lightened the burden of tyranny: they have only shifted it to another shoulder
Man and Superman (1903) "The Revolutionist's Handbook," foreword

Do not do unto others as you would that they should do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: The Golden Rule"

The golden rule is that there are no golden rules
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: The Golden Rule"

The art of government is the organization of idolatry. The bureaucracy consists of functionaries; the aristocracy, of idols; the democracy, of idolators. The populace cannot understand the bureaucracy: it can only worship the national idols

Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Idolatry"

Democracy substitutes election by the incompetent many for appointment by the corrupt few
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Democracy"

Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Liberty and Equality"

The vilest abortionist is he who attempts to mould a child's character
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Education"

He who can, does. He who cannot, teaches
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Education"

Marriage is popular because it combines the maximum of temptation with the maximum of opportunity
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Marriage"

Titles distinguish the mediocre, embarrass the superior, and are disgraced by the inferior
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Titles"

When domestic servants are treated as human beings it is not worth while to keep them
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Servants"

If you strike a child take care that you strike it in anger, even at the risk of maiming it for life. A blow in cold blood neither can nor should be forgiven
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: How to Beat Children"

Beware of the man whose god is in the skies
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Religion"

Self-denial is not a virtue: it is only the effect of prudence on rascality
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Virtues and Vice"

In heaven an angel is nobody in particular
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Greatness"

A moderately honest man with a moderately faithful wife, moderate drinkers both, in a moderately healthy house:
that is the true middle class unit
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Moderation"

The reasonable man adapts himself to the world: the unreasonable one persists in trying to adapt the world to himself. Therefore all progress depends on the unreasonable man
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Reason"

The man who listens to Reason is lost: Reason enslaves all whose minds are not strong enough to master her
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Reason"

Decency is Indecency's conspiracy of silence
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Decency"

Life levels all men: death reveals the eminent
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Fame"

Home is the girl's prison and the woman's workhouse
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Women in the Home"

Every man over forty is a scoundrel
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Stray Sayings"

Youth, which is forgiven everything, forgives itself nothing: age, which forgives itself everything, is forgiven nothing
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Stray Sayings"

Take care to get what you like or you will be forced to like what you get
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Stray Sayings"

It is dangerous to be sincere unless you are also stupid
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Stray Sayings"

Beware of the man who does not return your blow: he neither forgives you nor allows you to forgive yourself
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Stray Sayings"

Self-sacrifice enables us to sacrifice other people without blushing
Man and Superman (1903) "Maxims for Revolutionists: Self-Sacrifice"

There is nothing so bad or so good that you will not find Englishmen doing it; but you will never find an Englishman in the wrong. He does everything on principle. He fights you on patriotic principles; he robs you on business principles; he enslaves you on imperial principles; he bullies you on manly principles; he supports his king on loyal principles and cuts off his king's head on republican principles
Man of Destiny (1898) p. 201

Anybody on for a game of tennis? Misalliance (1914) p. 25 (perhaps the origin of the phrase "Anyone for tennis?," said to be typical of drawing-room comedies; cf. Humphrey Bogart)

Anarchism is a game at which the police can beat you
Misalliance (1914) p. 85

The only way for a woman to provide for herself decently is for her to be good to some man that can afford to be good to her
Mrs Warren's Profession (1898) act 2

A great devotee of the Gospel of Getting On Mrs Warren's Profession (1898) act 4 (said of Miss Warren)

[Dancing is] a perpendicular expression of a horizontal desire
In New Statesman 23 Mar. 1962

You'll never have a quiet world til you knock the patriotism out of the human race
O'Flaherty V.C. (1919) p. 178

As long as I have a want, I have a reason for living. Satisfaction is death
Overruled (1916) p. 72

There is, on the whole, nothing on earth intended for innocent people so horrible as a school. To begin with, it is a prison. But it is in some respects more cruel than a prison. In a prison, for instance, you are not forced to read books written by the warders and the governor...and beaten or otherwise tormented if you cannot remember their utterly unmemorable contents
Parents and Children (1914) "School"

The secret of being miserable is to have leisure to bother about whether you are happy or not. The cure for it is occupation
Parents and Children (1914) "Children's Happiness"

A perpetual holiday is a good working definition of hell
Parents and Children (1914) "Children's Happiness"

The fickleness of the women I love is only equalled by the infernal constancy of the women who love me
The Philanderer (1898) act 2

There is only one religion, though there are a hundred versions of it
Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant (1898) vol. 2, preface

The English have no respect for their language, and will not teach their children to speak it. They spell it so abominably that no man can teach himself what it sounds like. It is impossible for an Englishman to open his mouth without making some other Englishman hate or despise him
Pygmalion (1916) preface

Hes a gentleman: look at his boots
Pygmalion (1916) act 1

Remember that you are a human being with a soul and the divine gift of articulate speech: that your native language is the language of Shakespear and Milton and The Bible; and don't sit there crooning like a bilious pigeon

Pygmalion (1916) act 1

I don't want to talk grammar, I want to talk like a lady

Pygmalion (1916) act 2

Pickering: Have you no morals, man?

Doolittle: Can't afford them, Governor. Neither could you if you was as poor as me

Pygmalion (1916) act 2

I'm one of the undeserving poor: that's what I am. Think of what that means to a man. It means that he's up agen middle-class morality all the time

Pygmalion (1916) act 2

My aunt died of influenza: so they said. But it's my belief they done the old woman in

Pygmalion (1916) act 3

Gin was mother's milk to her

Pygmalion (1916) act 3

Freddy: Are you walking across the Park, Miss Doolittle? If so--

Liza: Walk! Not bloody likely. I am going in a taxi

Pygmalion (1916) act 3

I have to live for others and not for myself: thats middle-class morality

Pygmalion (1916) act 5

The Churches must learn humility as well as teach it

Saint Joan (1924) preface

If ever I utter an oath again may my soul be blasted to eternal damnation! Saint Joan (1924) sc. 2

A miracle, my friend, is an event which creates faith. That is the purpose and nature of miracles.... Frauds deceive. An event which creates faith does not deceive: therefore it is not a fraud, but a miracle

Saint Joan (1924) sc. 2

We were not fairly beaten, my lord. No Englishman is ever fairly beaten

Saint Joan (1924) sc. 4

How can what an Englishman believes be heresy? It is a contradiction in terms

Saint Joan (1924) sc. 4

Must then a Christ perish in torment in every age to save those that have no imagination? Saint Joan (1924) epilogue

With the single exception of Homer, there is no eminent writer, not even Sir Walter Scott, whom I can despise so entirely as I despise Shakespeare when I measure my mind against his. The intensity of my impatience with him occasionally reaches such a pitch, that it would positively be a relief to me to dig him up and throw stones at him, knowing as I do how incapable he and his worshippers are of understanding any less obvious form of indignity

"Do you know what a pessimist is?" "A man who thinks everybody is as nasty as himself, and hates them for it."

An Unsocial Socialist (1887) ch. 5

We dont bother much about dress and manners in England, because, as a nation, we dont dress well and weve no manners

You Never Can Tell (1898) act 1

Well, sir, you never can tell. Thats a principle in life with me, sir, if youll excuse my having such a thing, sir

You Never Can Tell (1898) act 2

The great advantage of a hotel is that it's a refuge from home life

You Never Can Tell (1898) act 2

My speciality is being right when other people are wrong
You Never Can Tell (1898) act 4

Afterthoughts (1931) "Life and Human Nature"

An improper mind is a perpetual feast

Afterthoughts (1931) "Life and Human Nature"

There is more felicity on the far side of baldness than young men can possibly imagine

Afterthoughts (1931) "Age and Death"

What music is more enchanting than the voices of young people, when you can't hear what they say?

Afterthoughts (1931) "Age and Death"

The denunciation of the young is a necessary part of the hygiene of older people, and greatly assists the circulation of their blood

Afterthoughts (1931) "Age and Death"

I cannot forgive my friends for dying; I do not find these vanishing acts of theirs at all amusing

Afterthoughts (1931) "Age and Death"

Those who set out to serve both God and Mammon soon discover that there is no God

Afterthoughts (1931) "Other People"

Most people sell their souls, and live with a good conscience on the proceeds
Afterthoughts (1931) "Other People"

All Reformers, however strict their social conscience, live in houses just as big as they can pay for Afterthoughts (1931) "Other People"

When they come downstairs from their Ivory Towers, Idealists are very apt to walk straight into the gutter
Afterthoughts (1931) "Other People"

Married women are kept women, and they are beginning to find it out
Afterthoughts (1931) "Other People"

You cannot be both fashionable and first-rate
Afterthoughts (1931) "In the World"

It is the wretchedness of being rich that you have to live with rich people
Afterthoughts (1931) "In the World"

To suppose, as we all suppose, that we could be rich and not behave as the rich behave, is like supposing that we could drink all day and keep absolutely sober
Afterthoughts (1931) "In the World"

The test of a vocation is the love of the drudgery it involves Afterthoughts (1931) "Art and Letters"

A best-seller is the gilded tomb of a mediocre talent
Afterthoughts (1931) "Art and Letters"

People say that life is the thing, but I prefer reading
Afterthoughts (1931) "Myself"

Thank heavens, the sun has gone in, and I don't have to go out and enjoy it
Afterthoughts (1931) "Myself"

What I like in a good author is not what he says, but what he whispers
All Trivia (1933) "Afterthoughts" pt. 5

Two weeks before his death, a friend asked him half-jokingly if he had discovered any meaning in life. "Yes," he replied, "there is a meaning, at least for me, there is one thing that matters—to set a chime of words tinkling in the minds of a few fastidious people." Cyril Connolly "Logan Pearsall Smith," obituary notice in New Statesman 9

This Englishwoman is so refined
She has no bosom and no behind
A Good Time was had by All (1937) "This Englishwoman"

Nobody heard him, the dead man,
But still he lay moaning:
I was much further out than you thought
And not waving but drowning.

Poor chap, he always loved larking
And now he's dead
It must have been too cold for him his heart gave way,
They said.

Oh, no no no, it was too cold always
(Still the dead one lay moaning)
I was much too far out all my life
And not waving but drowning
Not Waving but Drowning (1957) title poem

People who are always praising the past
And especially the times of faith as best
Ought to go and live in the Middle Ages
And be burnt at the stake as witches and sages
Not Waving but Drowning (1957) "The Past"

There you are you see, quite simple. If you cannot have your dear husband for a comfort and a delight, for a breadwinner and a crosspatch, for a sofa, chair or a hot-water bottle, one can use him as a Cross to be Borne
Novel on Yellow Page (1936) p. 24

Oh I am a cat that likes to Gallop about doing good
Scorpion and Other Poems (1972) "The Galloping Cat"

I long for the Person from Porlock
To bring my thoughts to an end,
I am growing impatient to see him
I think of him as a friend
Selected Poems (1962) "Thoughts about the 'Person from Porlock'"

Private Means is dead
God rest his soul, officers and fellow-rankers said
Selected Poems (1962) "Private Means is Dead"

Why does my Muse only speak when she is unhappy?
She does not, I only listen when I am unhappy
When I am happy I live and despise writing
For my Muse this cannot but be dispiriting
Selected Poems (1964) "My Muse"

The official world, the corridors of power, the dilemmas of conscience and egotism—she disliked them all
Homecomings (1956) ch. 22

I believe the intellectual life of the whole of western society is increasingly being split into two polar groups...
Literary intellectuals at one pole—at the other scientists, and as the most representative, the physical scientists.
Between the two a gulf of mutual incomprehension
The Two Cultures and the Scientific Revolution (1959 Rede Lecture) p. 3

A good many times I have been present at gatherings of people who, by the standards of the traditional culture, are thought highly educated and who have with considerable gusto been expressing their incredulity at the illiteracy of scientists. Once or twice I have been provoked and have asked the company how many of them could describe the Second Law of Thermodynamics. The response was cold: it was also negative

I hope you have read the election programme of the Labour Party: It is the most fantastic and impracticable programme ever put before the electors
All the derelict industries are to be taken over by the State, and the taxpayer is to shoulder the losses. The banks and financial houses are to be placed under national ownership and control, which means, I suppose, that they are to be run by a joint committee of the Labour Party and the Trades Union Council. Your investments are to be ordered by some board, and your foreign investments are to be mobilized to finance this madcap policy. This is not Socialism. It is Bolshevism run mad
BBC radio election broadcast, 17 Oct. 1931, in The Times 19 Oct. 1931

19.89 Alexander Solzhenitsyn

1918-

Meanwhile no such thing as INTERNAL AFFAIRS remains on our crowded Earth
Mankind's salvation lies exclusively in everyone's making everything his business, in the people of the East being anything but indifferent to what is thought in the West, and in the people of the West being anything but indifferent to what happens in the East
Nobel Prize Lecture, 1970, in John B. Dunlop, Richard Haugh and Alexis Klimoff (eds.) Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn: Critical Essays and Documentary Materials (1974) p. 574

If decade after decade the truth cannot be told, each person's mind begins to roam irretrievably. One's fellow countrymen become harder to understand than Martians
(Cancer Ward, 1968) pt. 2, ch. 32

You only have power over people as long as you don't take everything away from them. But when you've robbed a man of everything he's no longer in your power—he's free again
(The First Circle, 1968) ch. 17

Yes, we are still the prisoners of communism, and yet, for us in Russia, communism is a dead dog, while for many people in the West it is still living lion
Broadcast on BBC Russian Service, in Listener 15 Feb. 1979

New York Review of Books 18 Apr. 1974

A photograph is not only an image (as a painting is an image), an interpretation of the real; it is also a trace, something directly stencilled off the real, like a footprint or a death mask
New York Review of Books 23 June 1977

Illness is the night-side of life, a more onerous citizenship. Everyone who is born holds dual citizenship, in the kingdom of the well and in the kingdom of the sick. Although we all prefer to use only the good passport, sooner or later each of us is obliged, at least for a spell, to identify ourselves as citizens of that other place
New York Review of Books 26 Jan. 1978

The truth is that Mozart, Pascal, Boolean algebra, Shakespeare, parliamentary government, baroque churches, Newton, the emancipation of women, Kant, Marx, Balanchine ballet et al, don't redeem what this particular civilization has wrought upon the world. The white race is the cancer of human history, it is the white race, and it alone—its ideologies and inventions—which eradicates autonomous civilizations wherever it spreads, which has upset the ecological balance of the planet, which now threatens the very existence of life itself

19.104 William Archibald Spooner

1844-1930

Mr Spooner has a habit of transferring his syllables, so that it is no unusual experience for the members of New College to hear their late Dean give out in chapel a well-known sentence in the unintelligible guise of "Kinkering Kongs their tykles tate." Echo 4 May 1892

A famous New College personality...was Warden Spooner.... "You have tasted your worm," he is reputed to have said to an undergraduate, "you have hissed my mystery lectures, and you must leave by the first town drain." He was also responsible for proposing a toast to "our queer old dean." Oxford University What's What (1948) p. 8 (William Hayter in Spooner (1977) ch. 6 maintains these sayings are apocryphal)

19.105 Sir Cecil Spring Rice

1859-1918

I vow to thee, my country—all earthly things above--
Entire and whole and perfect, the service of my love,
The love that asks no question: the love that stands the test,
That lays upon the altar the dearest and the best:
The love that never falters, the love that pays the price,
The love that makes undaunted the final sacrifice
Poems (1920) "I Vow to Thee, My Country"

And there's another country, I've heard of long ago--
Most dear to them that love her, most great to them that know
Poems (1920) "I Vow to Thee, My Country"

Adlai E. Stevenson (1965) ch. 1

Let's face it. Let's talk sense to the American people. Let's tell them the truth, that there are no gains without pains, that we are now on the eve of great decisions, not easy decisions, like resistance when you're attacked, but a long, patient, costly struggle which alone can assure triumph over the great enemies of man—war, poverty and tyranny—and the assaults upon human dignity which are the most grievous consequences of each

Night and Day (1978) act 1

Wagner: You don't care much for the media, do you, Ruth?

Ruth: The media. It sounds like a convention of spiritualists

Carson: Ruth has mixed feelings about reporters

Night and Day (1978) act 1

Milne: No matter how imperfect things are, if you've got a free press everything is correctable, and without it everything is concealable

Ruth: I'm with you on the free press. It's the newspapers I can't stand

Night and Day (1978) act 1

We do on stage things that are supposed to happen off. Which is a kind of integrity, if you look on every exit as being an entrance somewhere else

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1967) act 1

Guildenstern: Well then—one of the Greeks, perhaps? You're familiar with the tragedies of antiquity, are you? The great homicidal classics? Matri, patri, sorori, uxori and it goes without saying—suicidal—hm? Maidens aspiring to godheads--

Rosencrantz: And vice versa

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1967) act 1

I can do you blood and love without the rhetoric, and

I can do you blood and rhetoric without the love, and

I can do you all three concurrent or consecutive, but

I can't do you love and rhetoric without the blood

Blood is compulsory—they're all blood, you see

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1967) act 1

To sum up: your father, whom you love, dies, you are his heir, you come back to find that hardly was the corpse cold before his young brother popped onto his throne and into his sheets, thereby offending both legal and natural practice. Now why exactly are you behaving in this extraordinary manner? Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1967) act 1

We're actors—we're the opposite of people. Think, in your head, now, think of the most...private...secret...intimate thing you have ever done secure in the knowledge of its privacy.... Are you thinking of it?..

Well, I saw you do it! Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1967) act 2

Eternity's a terrible thought. I mean, where's it all going to end? Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead (1967) act 2

The bad end unhappily, the good unluckily. That is what tragedy means

Books and Characters (1922) "Lives of the Poets"

The history of the Victorian Age will never be written: we know too much about it. For ignorance is the first requisite of the historian—ignorance, which simplifies and clarifies, which selects and omits, with a placid perfection unattainable by the highest art

Miss Nightingale, however, with all her experience of public life, never stopped to consider the question whether God might not be a Limited Monarchy. Yet her conception of God was certainly not orthodox. She felt towards Him as she might have felt towards a glorified sanitary engineer; and in some of her speculations she seems hardly to distinguish between the Deity and the Drains

Eminent Victorians (1918) "Dr Arnold"

Asked by the chairman [of a military tribunal] the usual question: "I understand, Mr Strachey, that you have a conscientious objection to war?" he replied (in his curious falsetto voice), "Oh no, not at all, only to this war." Better than this was his reply to the chairman's other stock question, which had previously never failed to embarrass the claimant

When Jesus came to Golgotha they hanged Him on a tree,
They drove great nails through hands and feet, and made a Calvary
They crowned Him with a crown of thorns, red were His wounds and deep,
For those were crude and cruel days, and human flesh was cheap
When Jesus came to Birmingham they simply passed Him by,
They never hurt a hair of Him, they only let Him die
For men had grown more tender and they would not give Him pain,
They only just passed down the street, and left Him in the rain

One Christmas was so much like another, in those years around the sea-town corner now and out of all sound except the distant speaking of the voices I sometimes hear a moment before sleep, that I can never remember whether it snowed for six days and six nights when I was twelve or whether it snowed for twelve days and twelve nights when I was six

A Child's Christmas in Wales (1954) p. 5

Years and years and years ago, when I was a boy, when there were wolves in Wales, and birds the colour of red-flannel petticoats whisked past the harp-shaped hills, when we sang and wallowed all night and day in caves that smelt like Sunday afternoons in damp front farmhouse parlours, and we chased, with the jawbones of deacons, the English and the bears, before the motor car, before the wheel, before the duchess-faced horse, when we rode the daft and happy hills bareback, it snowed and it snowed

She went her unremembering way,
She went and left in me
The pang of all the partings gone,
And partings yet to be
She left me marvelling why my soul
Was sad that she was glad;
At all the sadness in the sweet,
The sweetness in the sad
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Daisy"

Nothing begins, and nothing ends,
That is not paid with moan;

For we are born in other's pain,
And perish in our own
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Daisy"

Summer set lip to earth's bosom bare,
And left the flushed print in a poppy there
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "The Poppy"

The sleep-flower sways in the wheat its head,
Heavy with dreams, as that with bread:
The goodly grain and the sun-flushed sleeper
The reaper reaps, and Time the reaper
I hang 'mid men my needless head,
And my fruit is dreams, as theirs is bread:
The goodly men and the sun-hazed sleeper
Time shall reap, but after the reaper
The world shall glean of me, me the sleeper
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "The Poppy"

Look for me in the nurseries of heaven
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "To My Godchild Francis M.W.M."

I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him, down the arches of the years;
I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the mist of tears
I hid from Him, and under running laughter
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 1

But with unhurrying chase,
And unperturb'd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
They beat—and a Voice beat
More instant than the Feet--
All things betray thee, who betrayest Me
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 1

For, though I knew His love Who follow'd, Yet was I sore adread
Lest, having Him, I must have naught beside
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 2

Fear wist not to evade, as Love wist to pursue
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 2

I said to Dawn: Be sudden—to Eve :
Be soon
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 2

To all swift things for swiftness did I sue;
Clung to the whistling mane of every wind
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 2

Still with unhurrying chase,
And unperturb'd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
Came on the following Feet,
And a Voice above their beat--
"Naught shelters thee, who wilt not shelter Me." Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 2

I was heavy with the even,
When she lit her glimmering tapers
Round the day's dead sanctities
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 3

My harness piece by piece Thou hast hewn from me,
And smitten me to my knee
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 4

Yea, faileth now even dream
The dreamer, and the lute the lutanist;
Even the linked fantasies, in whose blossomy twist
I swung the earth a trinket at my wrist
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 4

Ah! must--
Designer infinite!--
Ah! must Thou char the wood ere Thou canst limm with it? Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 4

Such is: what is to be?
The pulp so bitter, how shall taste the rind? Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 4

Yet ever and anon a trumpet sounds
From the hid battlements of Eternity;
Those shaken mists a space unsettle, then
Round the half-glimps'd turrets slowly wash again
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 4

Now of that long pursuit
Comes on at hand the bruit;
That Voice is round me like a bursting sea :
"And is thy earth so marred,
Shattered in shard on shard?
Lo, all things fly thee, for thou fliest Me!" Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 5

All which I took from thee I did but take,
Not for thy harms,
But just that thou might'st seek it in My arms
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 5

Halts by me that footfall :
Is my gloom, after all,
Shade of His hand, outstretched caressingly?
"Ah, fondest, blindest, weakest,
I am He whom thou seekest!
Thou dravest love from thee, who dravest Me." Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Hound of Heaven" pt. 5

And thou—what needest with thy tribe's black tents
Who hast the red pavilion of my heart? Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Arab Love-Song"

It is little I repair to the matches of the Southron folk,
Though my own red roses there may blow;
It is little I repair to the matches of the Southron folk,
Though the red roses crest the caps I know
For the field is full of shades as I near the shadowy coast,
And a ghostly batsman plays to the bowling of a ghost,
And I look through my tears on a soundless-clapping host
As the run-stealers flicker to and fro,
To and fro:--
O my Hornby and my Barlow long ago! Poems (1913) vol. 1 "At Lord's"

There is no expeditious road
To pack and label men for God,
And save them by the barrel-load
Some may perchance, with strange surprise,
Have blundered into Paradise
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Epilogue to 'A Judgement in Heaven'"

Go, songs, for ended is our brief, sweet play;
Go, children of swift joy and tardy sorrow:
And some are sung, and that was yesterday,
And some unsung, and that may be to-morrow
Poems (1913) vol. 1 "Envoy"

Ah, for a heart less native to high Heaven,

A hooded eye, for jesses and restraint,
Or for a will accipitrine to pursue! Poems (1913) vol. 2 "Dread of Height"

Spring is come home with her world-wandering feet,
And all things are made young with young desires
Poems (1913) vol. 2 "From the Night of Forebeing"

Let even the slug-abled snail upon the thorn
Put forth a conscious horn! Poems (1913) vol. 2 "From the Night of Forebeing"

She only talks about her hair
Poems (1913) vol. 2 "The Way of a Maid"

Pontifical Death, that doth the crevasse bridge
To the steep and trifold God
Poems (1913) vol. 2 "An Anthem of Earth"

And all man's Babylons strive but to impart
The grandeurs of his Babylonian heart
Poems (1913) vol. 2 "The Heart" no. 2

What heart could have thought you?--
Past our devisal
(O filigree petal!)
Fashioned so purely,
Fragilely, surely,
From what Paradisal
Imagineless metal,
Too costly for cost? Poems (1913) vol. 2 "To a Snowflake"

Insculped and embossed,
With His hammer of wind,
And His graver of frost
Poems (1913) vol. 2 "To a Snowflake"

O world invisible, we view thee,
O world intangible, we touch thee,
O world unknowable, we know thee,
Inapprehensible, we clutch thee! Poems (1913) vol. 2 "The Kingdom of God"

The angels keep their ancient places;--
Turn but a stone, and start a wing!
'Tis ye, 'tis your estrang'd faces,
That miss the many-splendoured thing.

But (when so sad thou canst not sadder)
Cry;--and upon thy so sore loss
Shall shine the traffic of Jacob's ladder
Pitched betwixt Heaven and Charing Cross.

Yea, in the night, my Soul, my daughter,
Cry,--clinging Heaven by the hems;
And lo, Christ walking on the water
Not of Gennesareth, but Thames! Poems (1913) vol. 2 "The Kingdom of God"

To a man who was staggering in the street under the weight of a grandfather clock. "My poor fellow, why not carry a watch?" Hesketh Pearson Beerbohm Tree (1956) ch. 12

His own note books inform us that a gramophone company asked him for a testimonial, and he replied that he never gave testimonials to objects of merchandise. The company begged him to favour their special case, since his own voice had been reproduced by this means. So he wrote the following: "Sirs, I have tested your machine. It adds a new terror to life and makes death a long-felt want." He was asked to amend this, as the public might misconstrue it; but he answered that it was not open to misconstruction. "The immortalism must stand," said he; but it was not used as an advertisement by the company
Hesketh Pearson Beerbohm Tree (1956) ch. 19

In Max Beerbohm Herbert Beerbohm Tree (1920) appendix 4

He [Beerbohm Tree] approved cheerfully enough of everything until he came to the collection of damsels that had been dragged into the theatre as ladies in waiting to the queen. He looked at them in pained and prolonged dissatisfaction and then said what we have all wanted to say of the extra-women in nearly every throne-room and ball-room and school-room scene since the theatre began. "Ladies," said Tree, peering at them plaintively through his monacle, "just a little more virginity, if you don't mind." Alexander Woollcott Shouts and Murmurs (1923) "Capsule Criticism"

Pudd'nhead Wilson (1894) ch. 19

There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration—and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on the people to see how they will go. But it gets through more business in spring than in any other season. In the spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-six different kinds of weather inside of four-and-twenty hours

22.1 Paul Val'ry

1871-1945

Un poŠme n'est jamais achev'—c'est toujours un accident qui le termine, c'est-...-dire qui le donne au public.

A poem is never finished; it's always an accident that puts a stop to it—i.e. gives it to the public
Litt'rature (1930) p. 46

Il faut n'appeler Science: que l'ensemble des recettes qui r'ussissent toujours.—Tout le reste est litt'rature.

"Science" means simply the aggregate of all the recipes that are always successful. All the rest is literature
Moralit's (1932) p. 41

Dieu cr'a l'homme, et ne le trouvant pas assez seul, il lui donne une compagne pour lui faire mieux sentir sa solitude.

God created man and, finding him not sufficiently alone, gave him a companion to make him feel his solitude more keenly
Tel Quel 1 (1941) "Moralit's"

La politique est l'art d'emp^cher les gens de se m^ler de ce qui les regarde.

Politics is the art of preventing people from taking part in affairs which properly concern them
Tel Quel 2 (1943) "Rhumbs"

22.2 Paul Vance and Lee Pockriss

Itsy bitsy teenie weenie, yellow polkadot bikini
Title of song (1960)

22.3 Vivien van Damm

?1889-1960

I did not coin the slogan "We Never Closed" [for the Windmill Theatre in London]. It was merely a statement of fact
Tonight and Every Night (1952) ch. 18

22.4 Laurens van der Post

1906-

*Human beings are perhaps never more frightening than when they are convinced beyond doubt that they are right
Lost World of the Kalahari (1958) ch. 3

22.5 Bartolomeo Vanzetti

1888-1927

If it had not been for these thing, I might have live out my life talking at street corners to scorning men. I might have die, unmarked, unknown, a failure. Now we are not a failure. This is our career and our triumph
Never in our full life could we hope to do such work for tolerance, for joostice, for man's onderstanding of man as now we do by accident.

Our words—our lives—our pains—nothing! The taking of our lives—lives of a good shoemaker and a poor fish-peddler—all! That last moment belongs to us—that agony is our triumph
Statement after being sentenced, 9 Apr. 1927, in M. D. Frankfurter and G Jackson Letters of Sacco and Vanzetti (1928) preface

Sacco's name will live in the hearts of the people and in their gratitude when Katzmann's and yours bones will be dispersed by time, when your name, his name, your laws, institutions, and your false god are but a deem rememoring of a cursed past in which man was wolf to the man

Note by Vanzetti of what he wanted to say at his trial, 9 Apr. 1927, in M. D. Frankfurter and G. Jackson Letters of Sacco and Vanzetti (1928) p. 380

22.6 Harry Vaughan

If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen
In Time 28 Apr. 1952 (often used by Harry S. Truman, q.v.)

22.7 Ralph Vaughan Williams

1872-1958

I don't know whether I like it [the 4th symphony], but it's what I meant
In Christopher Headington Bodley Head History of Western Music (1974) p. 293

On arrival on a visit to the United States, Ralph Vaughan Williams was met by a crowd of reporters. One of them seized him by the arm and said, "Tell me, Dr Vaughan Williams, what do you think about music?" The old man peered quizzically into his face and made the solemn pronouncement: "It's a Rum Go!" Leslie Ayr The Wit of Music (1966) p. 43

22.8 Thorstein Veblen

1857-1929

Conspicuous consumption of valuable goods is a means of reputability to the gentleman of leisure
Theory of the Leisure Class (1899) ch. 4

So it is something of a homiletical commonplace to say that the outcome of any serious research can only be to make two questions grow where one question grew before
University of California Chronicle (1908) vol. 10, no. 4, "Evolution of the Scientific Point of View"

22.9 Gore Vidal

1925-

It is not enough to succeed. Others must fail
In G. Irvine Antipanegyric for Tom Driberg 8 Dec. 1976, p. 2

It is the spirit of the age to believe that any fact, no matter how suspect, is superior to any imaginative exercise, no matter how true
Encounter Dec. 1967, "French Letters: Theories of the New Novel"

A triumph of the embalmer's art
In Observer 26 Apr. 1981 (describing Ronald Reagan)

I'm all for bringing back the birch, but only between consenting adults
In Sunday Times Magazine 16 Sept. 1973

Whenever a friend succeeds, a little something in me dies
In Sunday Times Magazine 16 Sept. 1973

American writers want to be not good but great; and so are neither
Two Sisters (1970) p. 65

23.8 Graham Wallas

1858-1932

The little girl had the making of a poet in her who, being told to be sure of her meaning before she spoke, said, “How can I know what I think till I see what I say?” Art of Thought (1926) ch. 4. Cf. E. M. Forster 83:9

23.9 Sir Hugh Walpole

1884-1941

‘Tisn’t life that matters! ‘Tis the courage you bring to it
Fortitude (1913) bk.1, ch. 1

23.10 Andy Warhol

1927-1987

It’s the place where my prediction from the sixties finally came true: “In the future everyone will be famous for fifteen minutes.” I’m bored with that line. I never use it anymore. My new line is, “In fifteen minutes everybody will be famous.” Andy Warhol’s Exposures (1979) “Studio 54”

Being good in business is the most fascinating kind of art
In Observer 1 Mar. 1987

An artist is someone who produces things that people don’t need to have but that he—for some reason—thinks it would be a good idea to give them
Philosophy of Andy Warhol (From A to B and Back Again) (1975) ch. 10

23.11 Jack Warner (Horace Waters)

April, April,
Laugh thy girlish laughter;
Then, the moment after,
Weep thy girlish tears! Poems (1905) vol. 1, “Song”

These and a thousand tricks and ways and traits
I noted as of Demos at their root,
And foreign to the staid, conservative
Came-over-with-the Conqueror type of mind
Poems (1905) vol. 1, "A Study in Contrasts"

23.14 Evelyn Waugh

1903-1966

Brideshead revisited
Title of novel (1945)

A shriller note could now be heard rising from Sir Alastair's rooms; any who have heard that sound will shrink at the recollection of it; it is the sound of English county families baying for broken glass
Decline and Fall (1928) "Prelude." Cf. Hilaire Belloc 25:9

I expect you'll be becoming a schoolmaster, sir. That's what most of the gentlemen does, sir, that gets sent down for indecent behaviour
Decline and Fall (1928) "Prelude"

"We class schools, you see, into four grades: Leading School, First-rate School, Good School, and School. Frankly," said Mr Levy, "School is pretty bad." Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 1, ch. 1

For generations the British bourgeoisie have spoken of themselves as gentlemen, and by that they have meant, among other things, a self-respecting scorn of irregular perquisites. It is the quality that distinguishes the gentleman from both the artist and the aristocrat
Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 1, ch. 6

"I often think," he continued, "that we can trace almost all the disasters of English history to the influence of Wales!" Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 1, ch. 8

I haven't been to sleep for over a year. That's why I go to bed early. One needs more rest if one doesn't sleep
Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 2, ch. 3

Apparently he has been reading a series of articles by a popular bishop and has discovered that there is a species of person called a "Modern Churchman" who draws the full salary of a beneficed clergyman and need not commit himself to any religious belief
Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 2, ch. 4

I came to the conclusion many years ago that almost all crime is due to the repressed desire for aesthetic expression
Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 3, ch. 1

Any one who has been to an English public school will always feel comparatively at home in prison. It is the people brought up in the gay intimacy of the slums, Paul learned, who find prison so soul-destroying
Decline and Fall (1928) pt. 3, ch. 4

Punctuality is the virtue of the bored
Michael Davie (ed.) Diaries of Evelyn Waugh (1976) "Irregular Notes 1960-65," 26 Mar. 1962

Randolph Churchill went into hospital...to have a lung removed. It was announced that the trouble was not "malignant." Seeing Ed Stanley in White's, on my way to Rome, I remarked that it was a typical triumph of modern science to find the only part of Randolph that was not malignant and remove it
Michael Davie (ed.) Diaries of Evelyn Waugh (1976) "Irregular Notes 1960-65," Mar. 1964

You never find an Englishman among the under-dogs—except in England, of course
The Loved One (1948) ch. 1

In the dying world I come from quotation is a national vice. No one would think of making an after-dinner speech without the help of poetry. It used to be the classics, now it's lyric verse
The Loved One (1948) ch. 9

Manners are especially the need of the plain. The pretty can get away with anything
In Observer 15 Apr. 1962

"The Beast stands for strong mutually antagonistic governments everywhere," he [Lord Copper] said. "Self-sufficiency at home, self-assertion abroad." Scoop (1938) bk. 1, ch. 1

Mr Salter's side of the conversation was limited to expressions of assent
When Lord Copper was right, he said, "Definitely, Lord Copper"; when he was wrong, "Up to a point." Scoop (1938) bk. 1, ch. 1

"He [Boot]'s supposed to have a particularly high-class style: 'Feather-footed through the plashy fen passes the questing vole.'...would that be it?" "Yes," said the Managing Editor. "That must be good style." Scoop (1938) bk. 1, ch. 1

News is what a chap who doesn't care much about anything wants to read
And it's only news until he's read it. After that it's dead
Scoop (1938) bk. 1, ch. 5

"I will not stand for being called a woman in my own house," she [Mrs Earl Russell Jackson] said
Scoop (1938) bk. 2, ch. 1

Other nations use "force"; we Britons alone use "Might." Scoop (1938) bk. 2, ch. 5

All this fuss about sleeping together. For physical pleasure I'd sooner go to my dentist any day
Vile Bodies (1930) ch. 6

Lady Peabury was in the morning room reading a novel; early training gave a guilty spice to this recreation, for she had been brought up to believe that to read a novel before luncheon was one of the gravest sins it was possible for a gentlewoman to commit
Work Suspended (1942) "An Englishman's Home"

The trouble with the Conservative Party is that it has not turned the clock back a single second

If Max [Beaverbrook] gets to Heaven he won't last long. He will be chucked out for trying to pull off a merger between Heaven and Hell. after having secured a controlling interest in key subsidiary companies in both places, of course
In A. J. P. Taylor Beaverbrook (1972) ch. 8

The thing his [Henry James's] novel is about is always there. It is like a church lit but without a congregation to distract you, with every light and line focussed on the high altar. And on the altar, very reverently placed, intensely there, is a dead kitten, an egg-shell, a bit of string
Boon (1915) ch. 4

It is leviathan retrieving pebbles. It is a magnificent but painful hippopotamus resolved at any cost, even at the cost of its dignity, upon picking up a pea which has got into a corner of its den. Most things, it insists, are beyond it, but it can, at any rate modestly, and with an artistic singleness of mind, pick up that pea
Boon (1915) ch. 4 (on Henry James)

He [James Holroyd] was a practical electrician but fond of whisky, a heavy, red-haired brute with irregular teeth. He doubted the existence of the Deity but accepted Carnot's cycle, and he had read Shakespeare and found him weak in chemistry
Complete Short Stories (1927) "Lord of the Dynamos"

But Nunez advanced with the confident steps of a youth who enters upon life. All the old stories of the lost valley and the Country of the Blind had come back to his mind, and through his thoughts ran this old proverb, as if it were a refrain—In the Country of the Blind the One-Eyed Man is King

1861-1947

Life is an offensive, directed against the repetitious mechanism of the Universe
Adventures of Ideas (1933) pt. 1, ch. 5

It is more important that a proposition be interesting than that it be true. This statement is almost a tautology. For the energy of operation of a proposition in an occasion of experience is its interest, and is its importance. But of course a true proposition is more apt to be interesting than a false one
Adventures of Ideas (1933) pt. 4, ch. 16

There are no whole truths; all truths are half-truths. It is trying to treat them as whole truths that plays the devil
Dialogues (1954) prologue

Intelligence is quickness to apprehend as distinct from ability, which is capacity to act wisely on the thing apprehended
Dialogues (1954) 15 Dec. 1939

What is morality in any given time or place? It is what the majority then and there happen to like, and immorality

23.57 Harold Wilson (Baron Wilson of Rievaulx)

1916-

Traders and financiers all over the world had been listening to the Chancellor. For months he had said that if he could not stop the wage claims, the country was "facing disaster."... Rightly or wrongly these people believed him. For them, 5th September—the day that the Trades Union Congress unanimously rejected the policy of wage restraint—marked the end of an era. And all these financiers, all the little gnomes in Zurich and the other financial centres about whom we keep on hearing, started to make their dispositions in regard to sterling

In Observer 13 Feb. 1977

Harold Wilson...was unable to remember when he first uttered his dictum to the effect that: A week is a long time in politics. Inquiries among political journalists led to the conclusion that in its present form the phrase was probably first uttered at a meeting between Wilson and the Parliamentary lobby in the wake of the Sterling crisis shortly after he first took office as Prime Minister in 1964. However, Robert Carvel...recalled Wilson at a Labour Party conference in 1960 saying "Forty-eight hours is a long time in politics." Nigel Rees Sayings of the Century (1984) p. 149

This party [the Labour Party] is a moral crusade or it is nothing
Speech at Labour Party Conference 1 Oct. 1962, in The Times 2 Oct. 1962

The Prime Ministers [at the Lagos Conference, 9-12 Jan. 1966] noted the statement by the British Prime Minister that on the expert advice available to him the cumulative effects of the economic and financial sanctions might well bring the rebellion to an end within a matter of weeks rather than months
The Times 13 Jan. 1966

From now the pound abroad is worth 14 per cent or so less in terms of other currencies. It does not mean, of course, that the pound here in Britain, in your pocket or purse or in your bank, has been devalued

Speech at Des Moines, 1 Feb. 1916, in New York Times 2 Feb. 1916, p. 1

A little group of wilful men representing no opinion but their own, have rendered the Great Government of the United States helpless and contemptible
Statement, 4 Mar. 1917, after a successful filibuster against Wilson's bill to arm American merchant ships, in New York Times 5 Mar. 1917, p. 1

Liberty has never come from the government. Liberty has always come from the subjects of government. The history of liberty is the history of resistance. The history of liberty is a history of the limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it
Speech to New York Press Club in New York, 9 Sept. 1912, in Papers of Woodrow Wilson (1978) vol. 25, p. 124

No nation is fit to sit in judgement upon any other nation
Speech in New York, 20 Apr. 1915, in Selected Addresses (1918) p. 79

There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight; there is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right
Speech in Philadelphia, 10 May 1915, in Selected Addresses (1918) p. 88

Armed neutrality is ineffectual enough at best
Speech to Congress, 2 Apr. 1917, in Selected Addresses (1918) p. 190

The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon the tested foundations of political liberty
Speech to Congress, 2 Apr. 1917, in Selected Addresses (1918) p. 195

The right is more precious than peace
Speech to Congress, 2 Apr. 1917, in Selected Addresses (1918) p. 197

The programme of the world's peace...is this:
1. Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view

The Inimitable Jeeves (1923) ch. 4

Sir Roderick Glossop, Honoria's father, is always called a nerve specialist, because it sounds better, but everybody knows that he's really a sort of janitor to the looney-bin
The Inimitable Jeeves (1923) ch. 7

As a rule, you see, I'm not lugged into Family Rows. On the occasions when Aunt is calling to Aunt like mastodons bellowing across primeval swamps and Uncle James's letter about Cousin Mabel's peculiar behaviour is being shot round the family circle ("Please read this carefully and send it on to Jane"), the clan has a tendency to ignore me. It's one of the advantages I get from being a bachelor—and, according to my nearest and dearest, practically a half-witted bachelor at that
The Inimitable Jeeves (1923) ch. 16

It was my Uncle George who discovered that alcohol was a food well in advance of medical thought
The Inimitable Jeeves (1923) ch. 16

Righteous indignation. is misplaced if we agree with the lady's maid that high birth is a form of congenital insanity, that the sufferer merely inherits diseases of his ancestors, and endures them, for the most part very stoically, in one of those comfortably padded lunatic asylums which are known, euphemistically, as the stately homes of England

I think it better that at times like these
We poets keep our mouths shut, for in truth
We have no gift to set a statesman right;
He's had enough of meddling who can please
A young girl in the indolence of her youth
Or an old man upon a winter's night

"A Reason for Keeping Silent" in Edith Wharton (ed.) The Book of the Homeless (1916) p. 45

We had fed the heart on fantasies,
The heart's grown brutal from the fare,
More substance in our enmities

When you are old and grey and full of sleep,
And nodding by the fire, take down this book
And slowly read and dream of the soft look
Your eyes had once, and of their shadows deep.

How many loved your moments of glad grace,
And loved your beauty with love false or true,
But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you,
And loved the sorrows of your changing face

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made;
Nine bean rows will I have there, a hive for the honey bee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade
And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;
There midnight's all a glimmer, and noon a purple glow,
And evening full of the linnet's wings.

I will arise and go now, for always night and day
I hear lake water lapping with low sounds by the shore;
While I stand on the roadway or on the pavements gray,
I hear it in the deep heart's core
The Countess Kathleen (1892) "The Lake Isle of Innisfree"

That long to give themselves for wage,
To shake their wicked sides at youth
Restraining reckless middle age? The Green Helmet and Other Poems (1912) "On hearing that the Students of our New University have joined the Agitation against Immoral Literature"

I said "a line will take us hours maybe,
Yet if it does not seem a moment's thought
Our stitching and unstitching has been naught." In the Seven Woods (1903) "Adam's Curse"

The land of faery,
Where nobody gets old and godly and grave,
Where nobody gets old and crafty and wise,
Where nobody gets old and bitter of tongue
The Land of Heart's Desire (1894) p. 12

Land of Heart's Desire,
Where beauty has no ebb, decay no flood,
But joy is wisdom, Time an endless song
The Land of Heart's Desire (1894) p. 36

Measurement began our might:
Forms a stark Egyptian thought,
Forms that gentler Phidias wrought
Michaelangelo left a proof
On the Sistine Chapel roof,
Where but half-awakened Adam
Can disturb globe-trotting Madam
Till her bowels are in heat,
Proof that there's a purpose set
Before the secret working mind:
Profane perfection of mankind
Last Poems (1939) "Under Ben Bulben" pt. 4

Irish poets, learn your trade,
Sing whatever is well made,
Scorn the sort now growing up
All out of shape from toe to top,
Their unremembering hearts and heads
Base-born products of base beds
Sing the peasantry, and then
Hard-riding country gentlemen,
The holiness of monks, and after
Porter-drinkers' randy laughter
Last Poems (1939) "Under Ben Bulben" pt. 5

Cast your mind on other days
That we in coming days may be
Still the indomitable Irishry
Last Poems (1939) "Under Ben Bulben" pt. 5

Under bare Ben Bulben's head
In Drumcliffe churchyard Yeats is laid
An ancestor was rector there
Long years ago, a church stands near,
By the road an ancient cross
No marble, no conventional phrase;
On limestone quarried near the spot
By his command these words are cut: Cast a cold eye On life, on death
Horseman pass by! Last Poems (1939) "Under Ben Bulben" pt. 6

Pythagoras planned it. Why did the people stare?
His numbers, though they moved or seemed to move
In marble or in bronze, lacked character
But boys and girls, pale from the imagined love
Of solitary beds, knew what they were,

That passion could bring character enough,
And pressed at midnight in some public place
Live lips upon a plummet-measured face.

No! Greater than Pythagoras, for the men
That with a mallet or a chisel modelled these Calculations that look but casual flesh, put down
All Asiatic vague immensities,
And not the banks of oars that swam upon
The many-headed foam at Salamis
Europe put off that foam when Phidias
Gave women dreams and dreams their looking glass
Last Poems (1939) "The Statues"

When Pearse summoned Cuchulain to his side
What stalked through the Post Office? What intellect,
What calculation, number, measurement, replied?
We Irish, born into that ancient sect
But thrown upon this filthy modern tide
And by its formless spawning, fury wrecked,
Climb to our proper dark, that we may trace
The lineaments of a plummet-measured face
Last Poems (1939) "The Statues"

Our master Caesar is in the tent
Where the maps are spread,
His eyes fixed upon nothing,
A hand under his head.

Like a long-legged fly upon the stream
His mind moves upon silence
Last Poems (1939) "Long-Legged Fly"

Now that my ladder's gone
I must lie down where all ladders start
In the foul rag and bone shop of the heart
Last Poems (1939) "The Circus Animals' Desertion" pt. 3

I have met them at close of day
Coming with vivid faces
From counter or desk among grey
Eighteenth-century houses
I have passed with a nod of the head
Or polite meaningless words,
Or have lingered awhile and said
Polite meaningless words,
And thought before I had done
Of a mocking tale or a gibe
To please a companion
Around the fire at the club,
Being certain that they and I
But lived where motley is worn:
All changed, changed utterly:
A terrible beauty is born
Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1920) "Easter, 1916"

Too long a sacrifice
Can make a stone of the heart
O when may it suffice? Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1920) "Easter, 1916"

I write it out in a verse--
MacDonagh and MacBride
And Connolly and Pearse
Now and in time to be,
Wherever green is worn,
Are changed, changed utterly:
A terrible beauty is born

Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1920) "Easter, 1916"

Turning and turning in the widening gyre
The falcon cannot hear the falconer;
Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold;
Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,
The blood-dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere
The ceremony of innocence is drowned;
The best lack all conviction, while the worst
Are full of passionate intensity

Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1920) "The Second Coming"

The darkness drops again but now I know
That twenty centuries of stony sleep
Were vexed to nightmare by a rocking cradle,
And what rough beast, its hour come round at last,
Slouches towards Bethlehem to be born? Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1920) "The Second Coming"

An intellectual hatred is the worst,
So let her think opinions are accursed
Have I not seen the loveliest woman born
Out of the mouth of Plenty's horn,
Because of her opinionated mind
Barter that horn and every good
By quiet natures understood
For an old bellows full of angry wind? Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1920) "A Prayer for My Daughter"

The ghost of Roger Casement
Is beating on the door
New Poems (1938) "The Ghost of Roger Casement"

Think where man's glory most begins and ends
And say my glory was I had such friends
New Poems (1938) "The Municipal Gallery Re-visited"

You think it horrible that lust and rage
Should dance attendance upon my old age;
They were not such a plague when I was young;
What else have I to spur me into song? New Poems (1938) "The Spur"

I thought no more was needed
Youth to prolong
Than dumb-bell and foil
To keep the body young
Oh, who could have foretold
That the heart grows old? Nine Poems (1918) "A Song"

That is no country for old men. The young
In one another's arms, birds in the trees--
Those dying generations—at their song,
The salmon-falls, the mackerel-crowded seas,
Fish flesh or fowl, commend all summer long
Whatever is begotten born and dies
Caught in that sensual music all neglect
Monuments of unageing intellect
October Blast (1927) "Sailing to Byzantium"

An aged man is but a paltry thing,
A tattered coat upon a stick, unless
Soul clap its hands and sing, and louder sing
For every tatter in its mortal dress
October Blast (1927) "Sailing to Byzantium"

And therefore I have sailed the seas and come
To the holy city of Byzantium
October Blast (1927) "Sailing to Byzantium"

O body swayed to music, O brightening glance
How can we know the dancer from the dance? October Blast (1927) "Among School Children"

The Light of Lights
Looks always on the motive, not the deed,
The Shadow of Shadows on the deed alone
Poems (1895) "The Countess Cathleen" act 3

The years like great black oxen tread the world,
And God the herdsman goads them on behind,
And I am broken by their passing feet
Poems (1895) "The Countess Cathleen" act 4

Red Rose, proud Rose, sad Rose of all my days!
Come near me, while I sing the ancient ways
Poems (1895) "To the Rose upon the Rood of Time"

Rose of all Roses, Rose of all the World! Poems (1895) "The Rose of Battle"

Down by the salley gardens my love and I did meet;
She passed the salley gardens with little snow-white feet
She bid me take love easy, as the leaves grow on the tree;
But I, being young and foolish, with her would not agree
In a field by the river my love and I did stand,
And on my leaning shoulder she laid her snow-white hand
She bid me take life easy, as the grass grows on the weirs;
But I was young and foolish, and now am full of tears
Poems (1895) "Down by the Salley Gardens"

In dreams begins responsibility
Responsibilities (1914) epigraph

Was it for this the wild geese spread
The grey wing upon every tide;
For this that all that blood was shed,
For this Edward Fitzgerald died,
And Robert Emmet and Wolfe Tone,
All that delirium of the brave;
Romantic Ireland's dead and gone,
It's with O'Leary in the grave
Responsibilities (1914) "September, 1913"

I made my song a coat
Covered with embroideries
Out of old mythologies
From heel to throat;
But the fools caught it,
Wore it in the world's eye
As though they'd wrought it
Song, let them take it
For there's more enterprise
In walking naked
Responsibilities (1914) "A Coat"

A woman of so shining loveliness
That men threshed corn at midnight by a tress,
A little stolen tress
The Secret Rose (1897) "To the Secret Rose"

When shall the stars be blown about the sky,
Like the sparks blown out of a smithy, and die?
Surely thine hour has come, thy great wind blows,
Far off, most secret, and inviolate Rose? The Secret Rose (1897) "To the Secret Rose"

Bald heads forgetful of their sins,
Old, learned, respectable bald heads
Edit and annotate the lines

That young men, tossing on their beds,
Rhymed out in love's despair
To flatter beauty's ignorant ear.

All shuffle there; all cough in ink;
All wear the carpet with their shoes;
All think what other people think;
All know the man their neighbour knows
Lord, what would they say
Did their Catullus walk that way? Selected Poems (1929) "The Scholars"

Does the imagination dwell the most
Upon a woman won or woman lost?
If on the lost, admit you turned aside
From a great labyrinth out of pride
The Tower (1928) "The Tower" pt. 2

A sudden blow: the great wings beating still Above the staggering girl, her thighs caressed
By the dark webs, her nape caught in his bill,
He holds her helpless breast upon his breast
How can those terrified vague fingers push
The feathered glory from her loosening thighs? The Tower (1928) "Leda and the Swan"

A shudder in the loins engenders there
The broken wall, the burning roof and tower
And Agamemnon dead
The Tower (1928) "Leda and the Swan"

Never to have lived is best, ancient writers say;
Never to have drawn the breath of life, never to have looked into the eye of day;
The second best's a gay goodnight and quickly turn away
The Tower (1928) "From Oedipus at Colonus"

I mourn for that most lonely thing; and yet God's will be done,
I knew a phoenix in my youth so let them have their day
The Wild Swans at Coole (1917) "His Phoenix"

I see a schoolboy when I think of him
With face and nose pressed to a sweet-shop window,
For certainly he sank into his grave
His senses and his heart unsatisfied,
And made—being poor, ailing and ignorant,
Shut out from all the luxury of the world,
The ill-bred son of a livery stable-keeper--
Luxuriant song
The Wild Swans at Coole (1917) "Ego Dominus Tuus" [of Keats]

Nor law, nor duty bade me fight,
Nor public man, nor angry crowds,
A lonely impulse of delight
Drove to this tumult in the clouds;
I balanced all, brought all to mind,
The years to come seemed waste of breath,
A waste of breath the years behind
In balance with this life, this death
The Wild Swans at Coole (1919) "An Irish Airman Foresees his Death"

And pluck till time and times are done,
The silver apples of the moon,
The golden apples of the sun
The Wind Among the Reeds (1899) "Song of Wandering Aengus"

Had I the heavens' embroidered cloths,
Enwrought with golden and silver light,
The blue and the dim and the dark cloths
Of night and light and the half light,

I would spread the cloths under your feet:
But I, being poor, have only my dreams;
I have spread my dreams under your feet;
Tread softly because you tread on my dreams
The Wind Among the Reeds (1899) "Aedh Wishes for the Cloths of Heaven"

The light of evening, Lissadell,
Great windows open to the south,
Two girls in silk kimonos, both
Beautiful, one a gazelle
The Winding Stair (1929) "In Memory of Eva Gore Booth and Con Markiewicz"

The innocent and the beautiful
Have no enemy but time
The Winding Stair (1929) "In Memory of Eva Gore Booth and Con Markiewicz"

Nor dread nor hope attend
A dying animal;
A man awaits his end
Dreading and hoping all
The Winding Stair (1929) "Death"

He knows death to the bone--
Man has created death
The Winding Stair (1929) "Death"

What lively lad most pleased me
Of all that with me lay?
I answer that I gave my soul
And loved in misery,
But had great pleasure with a lad
That I loved bodily.

Flinging from his arms I laughed
To think his passion such
He fancied that I gave a soul
Did but our bodies touch,
And laughed upon his breast to think
Beast gave beast as much
The Winding Stair (1929) "A Woman Young and Old" pt. 9

We were the last romantics—chose for theme
Traditional sanctity and loveliness;
Whatever's written in what poets name
The book of the people; whatever most can bless
The mind of man or elevate a rhyme;
But all is changed, that high horse riderless,
Though mounted in that saddle Homer rode
Where the swan drifts upon a darkening flood
The Winding Stair and Other Poems (1933) "Coole and Ballylee, 1931"

A woman can be proud and stiff
When on love intent;
But Love has pitched his mansion in
The place of excrement;
For nothing can be sole or whole
That has not been rent
The Winding Stair and Other Poems (1933) "Crazy Jane Talks with the Bishop"

A starlit or a moonlit dome distains
All that man is;
All mere complexities,
The fury and the mire of human veins
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Byzantium"

Those images that yet
Fresh images beget,
That dolphin-torn, that gong-tormented sea
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Byzantium"

While on the shop and street I gazed
My body of a sudden blazed;
And twenty minutes more or less
It seemed, so great my happiness,
That I was blessed and could bless
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Vacillation"

The intellect of man is forced to choose
Perfection of the life, or of the work,
And if it take the second must refuse
A heavenly mansion, raging in the dark
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Coole Park and Ballylee, 1932"

Only God, my dear,
Could love you for yourself alone
And not your yellow hair
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Anne Gregory"

Swift has sailed into his rest;
Savage indignation there
Cannot lacerate his breast
Imitate him if you dare,
World-besotted traveller; he Served human liberty
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Swift's Epitaph"

Out of Ireland have we come
Great hatred, little room,
Maimed us at the start
I carry from my mother's womb
A fanatic heart
Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Remorse for Intemperate Speech"

What were all the world's alarms
To mighty Paris when he found
Sleep upon a golden bed
That first night in Helen's arms? Words for Music Perhaps and Other Poems (1932) "Lullaby"

Armed warfare must be preceded by a struggle against the inclinations to compromise which are embedded among the majority of British workmen, against the ideas of evolution and peaceful extermination of capitalism
Only then will it be possible to count upon complete success of an armed insurrection
